FAIRYLAND OF BLOOM

Grimsby, May 8—Warm weather of the past few days has forced the buds of early peach, pear, plum and cherry to blossom, converting Grimsby, Winona and Beamsville districts into a fairyland.

The delicate pink of the peach blossom against the white background of countless cherry, pear and plum blossoms presents a sight worth driving miles to see. Next Sunday, Mother's Day, will see the peninsula decked in its bloso mdress ready to greet the several thousands of motorists who will visit the district. It will be Blossom Sunday and the week following Blossom Week.

COST OF OPERATION

Galt, May 8—It would cost $800,100 to remove the Grand River Railway bridge from its present location south of the city, according to the company engineers. This information has been received at the city hall and the railway committee is now considering the matter. This bridge is blamed by citizens for blocking up the ice and water during the Spring freshets.

APRIL ESCAPADE - - - - BY KATHLEEN NORRIS

"Yes Ha!" Mary Kate said simply with a look.

"My God, have mercy; my God, have mercy," Mrs. O'Hara whispered.

"Allow me to say that you have gotten an entirely false idea of the whole thing," Chris interpolated authoritatively and impatiently. "This is all nonsense! Your daughter took part in a little masquerade and except for her brother following her, and causing her a lot of pother interference, nothing would have come of it at all."

"Pe'ice interference?" echoed the mother's voice.

"After the shooting. Yes. But the whole thing," Chris expanded, briskly, has been closed up. It's done. There's no follow-up whatever. It was all extremely foolish, and we got a bad break, but it's over. You son's wound is practically healed, I believe he takes off the bandages in a few days. And as for your daughter here, Mary, she played her part with a beautiful dignity, and lived up to her agreement absolutely. As for anything else, I never put my hand on her. She'll tell you so. I never kissed her."

"And furthermore." Cass added, unexpectedly, "Mary Kate and I are going to be married, and the sooner the better. When she tells me that everything was all on the level, I believe her. The whole thing was a mistake, but we all make them, and as far as I'm concerned—I'm never going to allude to it again!"

"I told you that because it's true!" Mary Kate said explosively.

"And now that everything is settled so beautifully, what do we do with Mr. Christopher Reynes' money, that can buy him anything?" Mart asked, in an ugly tone.

"We do nothing with it, we don't want it," Cass said.

"Mother," the girl asked, turning her tear-soaked eyes and stained, pale face toward the older woman, "do you believe me?"

Mrs. O'Hara looked at her. Then her own eyes filled, and she smiled, and opened her arms. And with a burst of bitter tears Mary Kate went into them, sitting on her mother's lap straining her slender figure against her mother, locking her arms about the older woman's neck, and hiding her ashamed face on the breast that had been her refuge from the first hour of her life.

CHAPTER XXXVIII

"Why, darling girl," Mrs. O'Hara said tenderly, "have they all been hard on you? Has Mart been hard on you? You'd only have to tell me that you'd done nothing wrong, and however foolish you might have been, I'd never hold it against you! It was only when I thought his money had bewildered you a little, dear——"

"But, Mother, I'm no fool!" the girl said emphatically, gulping, and drying her eyes on her soaked little handkerchief. "I'm not one of those poor little ignorant fools that they send out to Saint Catherine's! I knew what I was doing, and I thought it would be —just fun, and that Mart could go to Germany with Doctor van Antwerp, even if I got married. I wasn't —I'd safeguard," Mary Kate assured her brother fiercely. "I've been working in a downtown office two years. I finished high school. I know about life!"

"It seems to me that this whole thing has arisen from the fact that Mr. O'Hara here put the worst possible construction upon what his sister did," Chris said, coolly.

Martin shot him a contemptuous look, but before her son could speak, Mrs. O'Hara answered him.

"It was very easy to put that same construction upon what she did, sir," she reminded him, with simple dignity. "Mart only thought what the world would think, and we have to remember the world—we live in the world! Mary Kate did very wrong—but who'd know the true good heart of her," her mother said tenderly, with a downward glance at the bright head on her breast, "if her own mother did not? She'd never refused one of my kindness she could ever do us, be it what it might! She'd see only the money her brother needed, when she'd step into trouble like that—and put her hand in the fire for any one of us, if it was only little Pat himself that ail her in!"

Mary Kate at this cried more bitterly than ever, and increased her hold upon her mother almost to the strangling point.

Mrs. O'Hara's fine, simple, tired face was deeply worried; her faded gray eyes were filled with anxiety still. But, as she had gotten their tangled affairs in hand a thousand times before, in the last hard years, so she was beginning to catch, at the threads of to-night's fresh predicament. Indeed, there was to her a certain exhilaration, a certain actual stimulation in this evidence that "the creatures" so palpably needed their mother's guidance still. They were not so big, so tall, so smart, so free but what they could get themselves into trouble, God love them, and turn to her, and to nobody else in the last pinch, to get them out.

Here was the dapper and modern and successful Cass Keating devotedly championing Mary Kate, and here was haggard, wounded, angry, passionate Mart ready to kill anyone and everybody who dared impugn the honor of the O'Hara's and here was her slender tall, brilliant miracle of a girl, crying her loving, impulsive, misguided little heart out, in her mothers' arms. And with all these she knew how to deal. There was only one troublesome foreign element in the kitchen tonight, and Mrs. O'Hara proposed to get rid of it as rapidly as she could. This well dressed, self-possessed young man, Mr. Stevens, who had all that assurance and confidence that is the heritage of the rich man's son, was throwing the whole situation out of key.

"Maybe," Mrs. O'Hara began, as a first step toward dismissing him, "may be we've been making much ado about nothing," Mart. Anyway, all's well that ends well."

Unaware of the classic source of her simple phrase, she managed to give them a force of her own. Mart was still scowling.

"It isn't 'nothing' that Mary Kate had to be questioned by the police!"

"That could have happened to any witness—any fool!"

Chris did not say the last words aloud, but they were there, none the less.

Mary Kate, now secure in her one sure fortress, looked resentfully over her shoulder at her brother with tear wet eyes.

"I wouldn't care if I was in jail!" she exclaimed, "as long as I hadn't done anything wrong."

She buried her head against her mother's neck again, sure of the material approval, which was indeed bestowed by a pat.

"I only want to say," Christopher began, with air of closing the discussion, "that, since Mr. O'Hara here wants to go to Germany with Doctor van Antwerp, it would give me no end of pleasure to feel that I had—I had, indirectly, helped him to do it."

"It's a pleasure you never will have!" Martin assured him, rudely.

"I don't know that I could spare him, with Mary Kate married," Mrs. O'Hara said mildly. "But if other matters could be adjusted, indeed I'd see no reason that Mart shouldn't have his chance. Mary Kate did nothing wrong, and it would be a pity that all her kivin' effort to help her brother should be thrown away."

This statement, somewhat hesitatingly made, as the speaker felt her way, and sought out her words, produced a profound impression upon them all. Chris was the first to speak and there was genuine feeling, there was even a trace of huskiness in his voice.

"I'm glad you feel that way, Mrs. O'Hara," he said simply.

Perhaps Martin, who was but twenty-two, after all, and whose own hopes and dreams were close to his heart, had had, while they spoke times for a swift vision of a great ship, a foreign city, the piers and the gray stone buildings of Hamburg. the thought of himself, in close attendance upon the famous old surgeon who was his friend, the mirage of strange surgeries, a strange language, a young Irish-American listening, looking, learning all the thousand things that O'Farrell Street never could give Martin O'Hara.

At all events, his expression, his tone had changed when he said with a little difficult, boyish dignity.

"To borrow money from—anyone that would lend it, would be the thing. But I'd never want her to feel that she took the chance she took to help me!"

"If we believe that everything was all right then we have to act as if everything was all right, Mart," his mother observed, with that quiet and dispassionate glance from her gray eyes that was more forceful than the snap of a whip, to her children.

"I don't think he should have done it," Mart muttered, stubbornly.

"I know that!" Chris himself answered sharply. "You don't think I'm proud of myself do you?"

Mary Kate's tears had by this time dried, and she was now twisted about in her mother's lap, listening. Her cheeks were still flushed, and the silky mop of her copper-wire hair enchantingly disordered; her blue eyes were dark and shining, under their wet lashes. Except for these long lashes stuck into little point by tears, all the traces of the late storm had vanished. As quickly as a baby she had recovered; the straight little nose Christopher had thought one of pretties things about her, when she had worn the ivory satin gown last week, was wide again, the usual soft bloom was outlined in the lamplight, like a pollen on the shapely, finely cut temples and cheek bones.

"Ma, I?—I'd take care of you, if Mart and Mary Kate were gone!" Tom offered now, hoarsely and awkwardly. "I'd get a job, maybe down at Mills Field—"

They all laughed, and he subsided into silence again, his cheeks blazing. That is, they all laughed except Mrs. O'Hara who gave this dearest problem of them all a glance that said that his solver perfectly appreciated the value of his suggestion, and would trust herself to his protection with perfect confidence.

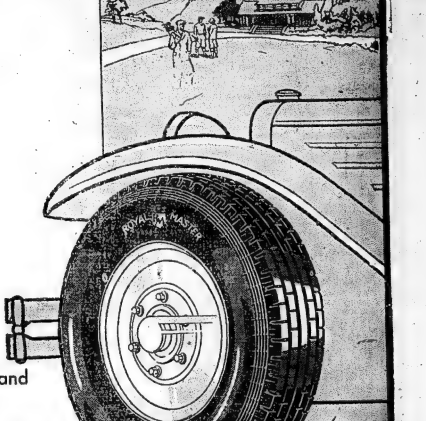
"Will you keep that check until your mother and brother have had time to think it over, Mary?" Chris asked him, huskily.

For answer the girl looked at her mother, whose eyes were only a few inches from her own.

"Suppose we leave it like that" said Mrs. O'Hara.

"Then there's just one more thing," Chris recommenced, with a brief nod. He turned toward Martin. "You telephoned me today, and asked me to come out here tonight, didn't you? he asked.

Martin nodded in his turn, his eyes a little puzzled and still faintly hostile. "What did you want of me?" Chris continued.



The other hesitated, and then said, uncertainly:

"I wanted to— talk to you."

"You wanted to talk to me when you came to my house on Friday night, didn't you?" Christopher asked flatly.

Martin was silent, his eyes held by Chris' eyes.

Two Bombs Thrown at Home of James Briand in Niagara Falls

FAMILY ESCAPES

Police Without Clues in Second Explosion in Few Weeks

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. May 12.—(CP)—Considerably damage was done today to the home of James Briand in the Italian section of the city by a bomb hurled at the house early today. Apparently two bombs were thrown at the home, but the larger of the two failed to explode, and was found later. The explosion blew a big hole in the roof of the home and destroyed the interior of the house, but Mrs. Briand and family, who were asleep at the time, escaped uninjured as did Briand who was down in the cellar. Police are without clues and Briand claims he has no enemies.

Calasses Freed on Charge of Having Been Intoxicated

-NON SUPPORT CASE

Charles Goodman Case Is Enlarged For Sentence

Nicola Fraticelli charged with wounding Joseph Calasses by stabbing at a party held on Emily street two weeks ago appearing in court today for trial. A Payne his counsel was not ready to proceed and the young man was remanded again until May 19th.

Calasses was charged with being intoxicated but the evidence was of a contradictory nature and His Worship Magistrate McKeil gave the accused the benefit of the doubt and dismissed the case.

Charles Goodman appeared on a charge of non-support, the information being laid by his wife Tilly Good man. In evidence the woman stated that Goodman had done no work and had given her no money since September of last year. Miss Lynch of the Indigent Committee from the city stated the case had been under advisement for some three weeks. The court was in a quandry as best to deal with the accused and a enlargement for sentence was made in order that some arrangement could be made.

BIG FREIGHTER COMES TO GRIEF IN COLLISION WITH VANCOUVER BRIDGE

This is what happened to the freighter S. S. Lomar, outbound with a cargo of lumber, crashed into it at a high tide one morning recently. Damage to the bridge was estimated at $100,000 and to the ship, which is shown stranded on the shore behind the bridge approach in this picture, about $60,000.

LEAGUE TEA AND SALE A SUCCESS

Catholic Women's League Program Was Enjoyed

The tea room at the Hotel Quinte, kindly loaned for the occasion by Mrs. J. V. Jenkins, made a charming setting for the tea and sale of homecooking given on Saturday afternoon by the members of the Catholic Women's League. Springtime flowers, in profusion, made the room fragrant and inviting, and many visitors dropped in during the afternoon.

Arrangements for the tea were in charge of the Hospitality Committee and various members of the League assisted. An interesting programme was given. Those contributing being Mrs. Dutton and Miss Pat Meagher who recited and Miss Bernadette Black who gave selections on the piano. A splendid sum, to add to the School Fund, was realized.

SURGEON SAVES LIFE OF J. FOX

A miracle of modern science and surgery has been performed in the Belleville General Hospital. Under the capable hands of Dr. J. Albert Faulkner, John W. Fox has undergone one of the most delicate and the most difficult of operations, that of a broken neck. On Saturday morning, assisted by Dr. Tennant and Dr. Morgan, who rendered the anaesthetic, Dr. Faulkner literally pulled Fox back from the brink of the grave, one of the outstanding medical feats in Belleville's history. Speaking to The Ontario Intelligencer today Dr. Faulkner stated that Fox had an excellent chance of pulling through "We believe," he said, "that the operation was a complete success and that Mr. Fox will live."

It will be remembered that Mr. Fox who lives on Donald street, on Friday fell from the back of a wagon while working on his farm in Thurlow township. For half an hour he lay there, unable to move, until assistance finally came when Mr. Frank Fitchett found him. The injured man was rushed to the Belleville General Hospital where it was showed that he had sustained a broken neck. Little hope was held for his recovery but Saturday morning's operation proved entirely successful from every standpoint.

STATES RECKON COST OF DUTIES

U. S. Commerce Department Gives Analysis of Dunning Budget

Washington, May 12—Tariff revision proposals of the Canadian Government as advanced this month, will impose higher import duties on between $175,000,000 and $225,000,000 worth of United States products customarily supplied each year to that country.

Further, products of the British Empire, more or less competitive to those of the United States, which Canada ordinarily imports to the value of $200 000,000 a year will be given either increased preference in duties or an entirely free import status. This is the conclusion announced today by a Commerce Department analysis of the new Canadian tariff projects which were formulated on May 1 by the Dominion Minister of Finance.

"Comparison between imports from the British Empire and the United States is substantially increased," the departmental review of the new Canadian measure says, "about 216 items being added to the free list under the British preferential tariff. American exporters in many lines will be required to lay greater stress on service and quality."

BICYCLIST ON FOOT BRIDGE HITS MAN

A practice that is in vogue to a considerable extent, namely riding of bicycles across the foot-bridge, should be stopped before some person is hurt. On Saturday one of the workmen engaged in making repairs to the structure was struck sustaining bruises about the legs.

4 CONVICTIONS FOLLOWED RAID

William Martin Is Given Two Months For Selling

Working on a pre-arranged schedule the police swooped down on the home of William Martin, 82 South George Street, Saturday night and made a successful haul of the wine that cheers. Today in police court Martin pleaded guilty through his counsel, J. D. O'Flynn, to a charge of selling liquor and was sentenced to two months in the county jail. Two men, Robert O. Campbell and William Gardiner, 131 Bridge St. West, charges with consuming in the home of Martin were fined $15.00 and costs, while Bruce Root charged with illegal purchase was assessed the same amount.

Receiving information that liquor was being kept for sale at this home Sergeant Harman and Constable Isard went to the near vicinity to keep watch. Shortly after arriving Root with a companion drove up to the house in a car and went inside. The police awaited for an exit also stopping the car took it to the police station under escort. In the car were found three quarts of beer and in a statement given Root admitted purchasing the liquor from Martin for 90 cents a quart. Sergeant Bath in company with the two above mentioned officers again went to the home armed with a search warrant. They found Martin sitting at a table drinking with Campbell and Gardiner and another resident of Point Anne in the kitchen. The house was searched and 21 empty bottles were found besides a number of cases of wet goods. The police arrested Martin and confiscated the liquor. In court today the permits of Martin and other members of the household were ordered cancelled by Magistrate Mikel.

LOWER BRIDGE WORK IS UP TO SCHEDULE, DAMS DESTROYED

Difficulty With Water Is Overcome at East Abutment

Dewatering from the coffer dams, which have been, erected by the Holdcroft Construction Company for the construction of the lower bridge, is proceeding satisfactory. Today the pumps were put in operation and in a short time the water was all removed from one section. When the pumps were stopped the water again flowed in but it was only of a minor nature and the repair being made the dam was again emptied. In order to facilitate the work the dam was made in sections and it will not be long before work will be started on the construction of the east pier of the bridge. Long steel rods will be embedded in the rock and cement poured about them to strengthen them.

Unforseen conditions have arisen in the dewatering of these coffer dams. The water comes up under the shale rock at the bed of the river and also from around the water mains, thus required blasting to lay. These crevices are hard to close no matter how much gains are taken with the construction of the dam. Mr. Holdcroft does not expect to meet the same conditions in the centre of the river nor on the west side. Even with the delay in dewatering the bridge construction is well up to schedule. The cribbing is almost complete and the largest portion of the old bridge has been removed.

WOMEN IN FIRE-TRAP ESCAPE BY JUMPING

Windsor, May 12.—Trapped in the second story of their home in Sandwich by fire, Sunday, Mrs. Elizabeth Brooks, 35 years old, and Grace, her 15-year-old daughter, jumped 15 feet to the street from the roof of the verandah, escaping in the kitchen from an overheated stove, the fire had enveloped the stairway before neighbors telephoned the fire department. Pained by wind, the flames jumped up the stairway and were licking at the door of the room whence Mrs. Brooks and her daughter had fled. They jumped only when a passerby warned them the floor might collapse. They suffered slight bruises. The damage was estimated at $7,000 by the fire department.

THURLOW LIBS. MEET TONIGHT

Chas. E. Hanna Mentioned as Nominee in South Hastings

An organization of the Liberals of Thurlow Township will be held tonight at Canniffon. The air is charged with election talk and from now till the polling, the campaign will wage in this old and historic riding of South Hastings. All the riding has been organized with the exception of Thurlow and Tyendinaga.

Charles E. Hanna, ex-M.P., informed The Ontario Intelligencer today that nominations in the Liberal cause would likely be held two weeks from today in this city. Arrangements are being made to have the Hon. Peter Heenan, Minister of Labor in the King Government, speak to the convention along with other prominent members of the Liberal parties.

It is understood that Charles Hanna is ready to accept the nomination if it is the wish of the convention that he should contest the seat. Mr. Hanna is a native of Belleville and is a member of the Walker Hardware Co. The name of Col. Roscoe Vanderwater D.S.O., may also likely go before the convention along with many others.

NOMINATIONS

BOY NEAR DEATH BY BULLET SHOT

Accidental Discharge of Revolver Mars Lads' Outing

Lindsay, May 12—A 10-year-old Bobcaygeon boy is dying and a large country roads a quarter mile to gain out his message of woe, sums up the tragedy in which 14-year-old Charles Montgomery is near death in hospital here. He has a bullet wound in his side, and is partly paralyzed from the waist down.

Montgomery and Kitchener Green, aged 10, both of Division street, both chums, went out Sunday for a walk in the country. They arrived finally at the summer home of Montgomery's uncle, at West Cross Creek, seven miles out.

Young Montgomery was unpacking the lunch when Green, police say, found a revolver in a drawer. It discharged accidentally and Montgomery was wounded. Green hurried to a neighbor and word of the tragedy was telephoned to Lindsay. Montgomery was brought to hospital in an ambulance. Dr. Hugh Logan extracted the bullet.

Montgomery will not live, hospital authorities say.

NAME SUCCESSOR TO HUGHES IN SEPTEMBER

GENEVA, May 12.—(CP)—The resignation of Charles Evans Hughes from the permanent Court for International Justice today was accepted by the Council of League of Nations. The Council voted to hold a special election at the next assembly in September to elect a successor to Mr. Hughes, who resigned when appointed Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of United States.

DOG OWNERS WATCH MOVE OF CITY COUNCIL

Dog owners of Belleville will watch with concern the proposed putting into force of the bylaw on dogs with the appointment of a dog catcher and poundkeeper tonight.

Many owners have written through the press condemning the wholesale character of the restrictions of the measure which puts a ban on all dogs appearing off the premises of the owner and practically obligates the tying up of all canines in the city. They have pointed out that dogs here have caused little or no trouble and that those who pay their dog taxes should not be penalized for those who let their dogs run without care.

The music will be under the direction of Cissie Dickens and there will be a number of prize dances for which splendid favors will be offered.

EXPERIENCE ON TRACK

"Billy" Smith, local horseman was shaken up Saturday when harness-breaking a colt, the animal shied and started to run away. Mr. Smith realizing that allowing the colt to get loose would spoil his manners hung to the lines and was dragged a considerable distance before the colt was brought under control. He received a few scratches on his face but was otherwise uninjured.

FORMER PASTOR HERE

Rev. T. H. Thompson of Ottawa, preached on Sunday in John Street United Church, where he was a former minister. He was ordained 34 years ago.

UNIQUE DINNER.

Something unique has been arranged for the Y.M.C.A. on Tuesday night of this week when a Mother, Daughter and Son banquet will be held. This event is held in conjunction with Mother's Day and a splendid program has been outlined by officials of the Association. The tickets are going fast according to those in charge.

TO BE GUESTS HERE.

The local T's Men's Club will be hosts on Thursday night of this week to the members of the Peterboro Club. A splendid program is proposed for this particular occasion. The Peterboro Club, a flourishing organization, will bring down a large number of members. Ladies will be entertained at the conclusion of the meeting.

WAS TAKEN ILL.

Mrs. E. Cronkright, residing at 142 Moira street, west, was taken ill on Saturday about twelve o'clock while on the footbridge gangway. Mrs. Cronkright had been shopping in the morning and was on her way home when stricken. She received instant attention and the ambulance was called which took her to her home. A physician attended her and today she is in a much improved condition.

METROPOLITAN CONTEST.

The interesting contest which was carried on in the Metropolitan Store on Saturday, sponsored by the Beech-Nut company, proved a great success, and hundreds of packages of candy drops and gum were sold during the day. Miss Helen Forsyth, on the toilet goods counter, goes the honor of winning the first prize. Miss Tracey sold 1,425 packages of the Beech-Nut products which is a fine days work. Miss Margaret Calcutt won second prize and Miss Mary Adams, third. The prizes were given by the Beech-Nut company and consisted of cash for each winner.

MOTHER'S DAY FEATURE

Yesterday afternoon a very interesting event was held at Bridge Street United Church in honour of Mother's Day. A pageant entitled "What Makes the Difference" attracted a large number, and was staged in the Sunday School rooms. The parts were taken by Mr. Harold Hollon, Miss Maude Sine Miss Helen Ackerman, Mr. Ken Mumings and Master Jack Dickens. A "Mother's Day Story," told by Miss Lorna Ridley was also very received. Mr. J. Shortt, Sunday School Superintendent was in charge of the program

PRACTICE FOR RACES

Beginning this week the intermediate and senior Y boys will practice at the local fair grounds every Tuesday and Friday evening in preparation for the track and field events which will be sponsored by the Y.M.C.A. on the 24th of May the 1st of June, and at the annual Belleville Fair. The boys will practice from 6.30 to 8.30 and then repair to the Y for the regular swim.

DECIDE ON BASEBALL

An important meeting of the baseball executive of the National Ball Club will be held tonight and at this meeting it will be decided whether the team will enter into a schedule with the Kingston Ponies. It is proposed to play a schedule of four games in each city a week apart with the winner to go into the finals of the Ontario senior playdowns. The Diamond is in good shape and the boys will rush their work in order to be ready for the opening. The opening game will be played in Belleville on May 26th., the day on which the holiday will be celebrated in this city.

REPAIR FOOTBRIDGE

Sixteen men were hard at work to-day completing extensive repairs to the footbridge, which has been in need of attention for some time. New planking is being laid on the bridge by carpenters, and the wire girders are being strengthened and some replaced by new ones. The alterations, however, will not remove the delicious "swaying" movement of the bridge when two or three people start to walk on it at once.

SUCCESSFUL OPERATION

John Dennis Ryan, better known as "Sonny", young son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Ryan, proprietors of the Queen's Hotel, underwent a successful operation at the hands of Dr. O'Connor, noted eye, ear, nose and throat specialist, in the Kingston hospital this morning. The operation was a complete success in every way and Mr. Ryan at ten o'clock telephoned Belleville to say that the boy had come through with flying colors. "Sonny" had his tonsils removed.

WEDDINGS

MOORE—MORRIS

A quiet but impressive wedding took place on Saturday, May 10th at Holloway United Church parsonage, when Miss Ethel Janetta Morris of Sidney Township was joined in marriage to Mr. Sidney Allan Moore of this city. The service was conducted by Rev. A. S. Wight. B.A. B.D., The bridal couple were attended by Mr. Moore and Miss Edith Morris, Mr. and Mrs. Moore left immediately after the wedding for a motor trip to Montreal and points in the New York State. On their return they will reside in Belleville.

Prince of Wales to Launch Empress of Britain

A royal compliment to Canada as much as to the "Canadian Pacific", was the opinion of E. W. Beatty, chairman and president of the Canadian Pacific Railway and chairman of the Canadian Pacific Steamships, Ltd., when announcing that His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales had consented to act as sponsor of the new giant liner of the Canadian Pacific fleet, the "Empress of Britain."

"We are greatly gratified", said Mr. Beatty, to learn that His Royal Highness has promised to find time to go up to the Clyde to sponsor our new ship. The Prince of Wales is one of the busiest men in Europe, and I take it that he has been led to do so out of his love for this country and his keen interest in all things Canadian."

The "Empress of Britain" will be the largest ship built in Great Britain since 1914.

The ceremonial launching, at which the Prince of Wales will be the central figure, will take place at the Clydeside yards of John Brown & Company, the shipbuilders, on June 11, which, incidentally will be the first anniversary of the opening of largest hotel in the British Empire, the Royal York, Toronto, by the Governor-General of Canada.

The "Empress of Britain", besides being the greatest liner entering a Canadian port, will be the most palatial and up-to-date vessel afloat and, with her speed, will make possible a transatlantic crossing of five days or less between Canada and Great Britain, and will greatly shorten the journey between Europe and Canada and the Middle and Western States. The mammoth liner will be in service next summer, making regular voyages between Southampton, Cherbourg and Quebec.

A large number from out-of-town attended the obsequies and the floral and spiritual offerings testified to the esteem of the deceased. The bearers were E. J. Butler, K.C., A. R. Collins Charles T. Dolan, W. C. Springer, Mark Sprague and G. Harold Hollon. Relatives acted as the graveside as bearers.

TO MAKE PLEA FOR DAYLIGHT SAVING

There is promise of a deputation appearing before the council tonight in support of a "daylight saving" enactment. The delegation will probably be made up of retail merchants and manufacturers.

Last summer the city was granted daylight saving on the understanding that the electors would have a vote on the measure in December elections. The vote was taken and the principle was turned down.

It is said by some members of the council that they cannot see how they can vote for daylight saving for the year in the face of the vote of the electors.

Capital Undimmed by Election Worry

Ottawa, May 12—Not even the additional worries and tasks which come with the approach of a Dominion election can seriously interrupt the social life of the Capital. It went along as the usual merry pace during the past week.

One of the more largely attended affairs which went to make the week a socially notable one was held Thursday afternoon, when Miss Mildred Emmett was at home to callers in the ballroom suite of a local hotel. Sprays of wild plum blossoms and quantities of daffodils were used to adorn the various rooms and tea was served from small tables, scattered throughout the drawing-room and foyer, which were centred with crystal bowls of talisman roses and tall orange lighted tapers. Many senators and members came to pay their respects to Miss Bennett. Her brother, Hon. R. J. Bennett, assisted her to welcome her callers in the latter part of the afternoon.

Lady Byng, Lady Borden, Lady Foster and Lady Pope presided at the tea-tables, and Mrs. Arthur Meighen of Toronto, wife of the former Conservative leader, was among the guests.

The Speaker of the House of Commons and Madame Rodolphe Lemieux entertained at dinner in the Speaker's chambers of the Commons, in honour of Mr. Justice L. Arthur Cannon and Mrs. Cannon, who have recently come from Quebec to take up residence here.

Lady Clark, wife of the High Commissioner for Great Britain, was the guest of honor at a luncheon given by Lady Perley.

Miss Marjory Fox, daughter of Senator Robert Forke and Mrs. Forke continues to be a much entertained and feted bride-elect, in view of her approaching marriage to James C. Mackenzie, aide to His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor of Manitoba.

WORTH-WHILE FIRST NOVELS BRING FORTH A GREAT DEAL OF EXCELLENT LITERATURE

New Novel From Philadelphia Describes Incomparable Stokowski.

Copyright, 1930)

Toronto, May 10—Not often do we get the world, while first novels in one session for review, Red Wagon, a clever story by Lady Eleanor Smith (Longmans, Green) and Huntsman in the Sky by Granville Toogood (George J. McLeod) are about as far apart in subject interest as two Anglo-Saxon stories could be. One is mainly English; the other Philadelphian.

Toogood's book is the first Philadelphia novel the writer can remember reviewing. It contains the word "psychoclastic," which I have not as yet had time to examine in a dictionary, and does not seem to be clear from the context. As may be imagined, it has one long description of the Philadelphia orchestra and of Stokowski —here called Dr. Borodkin. From which it may be inferred that the novel is on a music theme; and it is.

Here is a hurt of what is said about Stokowski conducting Mahler's Third symphony, which he once hand ed to a Canadian interviewer to read while he finished shaving in his underwear,

"The hair of the conductor shone like a froth of gold; the air quivered with the violence and variety of vibrations—An appalling uproar, delightfully futile. For all its technical virtues the music was utterly lifeless Could anything be asked himself be equal to misery of wanting to do something fine and big and not knowing how..?" The critic in the case is the hero, Bart Yarrison, a young American composer back from Paris to find out how hot-blooded and common-place life is in his own country, even in Philadelphia——with its wives and women and wealth. Then——a storm of applause. How could they make such a fuss over such dusty lumber?... 'My dear,' a voice exclaim ed, 'he is too divine'. Suddenly he realized that it was the conductor, not the composer, whom they admired."

Very true. This the first pen-picture of Stokowski ever in a novel—and by a Philadelphian. The story traces the awakening of the young composer into the realities of American life. It has most of the luxurious faults of a first novel, in emotional scenes, plays, pretty women, mysterious nights, scenes in the park, street lights parties, gathers, trashcan old grandfather, hot youth, mild whoopees, young drunks of whom the hero is one, wayside accidents, sudden and circus ladies, then—Blaine who is nervously pictured in an atmosphere of music. Some of the inter-sex talk is frankly intimate.

Bart was a sort of Socialist. How he worked out his problem with women, wine and music is for the reader to discover.

Red Wagon is Realistic

Red wagon is much too vividly real to be classed as anyone's first novel. Why Lady Eleanor Smith is the "blurb" does not say. She is English. She knows England. Above all she knows the circus which she has studied from its big-top English origins to the modern Ringling super-show. For the first time the company of the circus packed into the palpitating pages of a novel—though we have seen it often enough on the screen.

The strange life of old Joe Prince begins in the prologue of several chapters, with his daughter, Cora, circus-born and her lover from Montana, but formerly of Calgary stampedes. The prologue is misleading. Suddenly, it breaks away from the lion-tamer old Conrad afraid of his cats and from Cora, lured from her yearning for the movies into a marriage with Tom, and ownership of the show——into a story of Cowboy Charley's circus away down south in the days when a circus was a few animals, four cats, a lot of scrobsets, numberless clowns—and, above all, a gang of crooks kept on the string by the circus owner, who sold them concessions to swindle the public before Barnum made swindling a respectable humorsque. The story of how a citizen six-shooter gang from one town wrecked Cowboy Charley's show in another town; stampeded the audience, shot up some of the hands and got themselves—crooks with cowboy's furtive release of the "big cats" to finish the job.

So these were rather more powerful circus days than those of England whose small circuses were for so long the life of the country—oddly mixed up in this story with gypsies. Decades by generation, the author traces the startling career of young Joe, whose mother had been trampled to death in the Cowboy Charlie stampede, as he grows up into circus life and prances into the life of England.

A vigorous, alluring novel of the open road.

Why a prepared acreage greater by 21 per cent. than that of 1929, a better moisture situation and other indications presaging generally good conditions for the year, the Canadian West is now busy seeding, according to the latest report of the agricultural department of the Canadian Pacific Railway.

Nearly $28,000,000 was voted by the Ontario Legislature recently for hydro-electric development work to be undertaken this year in the province for the Ontario Hydro Electric Commission, a provincial government organization. Over $18,000,000 is to be spent on the extension of the Niagara hydro system, upon which many millions have already been spent to provide cheap electric power over a wide area of rural and urban territory.

"There is a very large amount of capital in England ready for investment and it is felt in that country that it should go to Canada," said Major L. A. Fish caught by commercial fishermen in Canadian waters last year had a value of about $15,000,000. Over 100 countries bought fish and fish products from the Dominion in 1929, valued at $38,000,000. More than 80,000 persons find employment in Canada in the fishing industry.

The wild rose is now the floral emblem of the province of Alberta. The provincial parliament has enacted the legislation making this flower which grows so profusely all over Alberta, the provincial symbol. Choice of the emblem was put up to the school children of Alberta and the wild rose was returned most votes, with the tiger lily next in favor.

Homestead entries taken out through the Dominion Land Office at Edmonton during the month of March last broke all records for that month with a total of 227 homesteads and 19 soldier grants which compares with 220 homesteads in March, 1928, the previous record March.

Contrary to the general impression, Canadian investments in the United States are greater, per capita, than American investments in the Dominion. An official statement just issued shows that the average Canadian has $100 invested in the United States and the average American about $70 invested in Canada.

Something more than appearances will be necessary for grain to win a prize at the World's Grain Exhibition and Conference to be held at Regina, July 25 to August 6, 1932. All entries getting into the prize money at this Exhibition will be required to be cleaned and screened. It is because of the importance of the effect of the cleaning of this prize seed in farmers in Canada and throughout the world that the Awards Committee has decided that the most leading grain will be awarded the coveted prize seed which is really in the best condition.

CONGRESS ON WORLD SERVICE HELD AT PICTON

(Special to Ontario Intelligencer)

Picton, May 8.—A Missionary Congress on world service, under the auspices of the United Church, was held in Picton over the week-end.

On Friday, Rev. George A. Williams a returned missionary from Formosa, arrived in town and set up an exhibit showing the various types of work carried on both at home and abroad. The exhibit, which is a very striking one, consists of a number of electric tableaux models, demonstrating the theme that the Church is the Body of Christ, carrying on in the world today the same type of work that Christ Himself did so long ago.

In addition to these there were numerous charts, etc., which helped to make real to all observers, the work of the United Church in Canada. The exhibit was on display at the United Church in Picton. On Saturday afternoon the school children attended in large numbers and during the week end many citizens viewed with interest the fine exhibit which gave a very clear conception of the great work our church is doing especially along missionary lines.

On Monday evening a grand Young People's Rally was held and a mission ary program was given. There were comments in which facts relating to the missionary work of the United Church of Canada were given. Many county Y. P. societies were present as well as the from Belleville.

Sunday, several missionaries preached at charges throughout the county At Picton United Church Rev. Dennis G. Redout gave a splendid address in the morning while Rev. O. E. Rackham, of China, was the speaker at the evening service.

On Sunday next, Mother's Day will be observed by special services throughout town and county and as in previous years, larger congregations than usual are looked for.

The Oddfellows attended dinner ser vice at St. Mary Magdalene church, on Sunday morning. Rev. Cecil Winter, the rector, gave a very fine address.

There was a display of Aurora Bore alis over the week-end. Cold weather is expected.

NEW POWER BOAT

London, May 10—The largest and most powerful commercial boat yet built in Great Britain, the Blackburn Rolls-Royce Sydney, is being constructed on the Thames and will be entirely of metal. As soon as successful tests have been made with this machine construction is to begin on a still larger flying-boat capable of carrying 50 passengers and as powerful as the great German Do. X. This new machine will be capable of long day and night non-stop flights and will have sleeping berths for the whole of the 50 passengers, in addition to kitchens, where meals can be cooked while the machine is flying at over 100 miles per hour.

WON'T USE PROPORTIONAL VOTE IN COMING DOMINION ELECTION

System is Unlikely to be Adopted Until After the 1931 Census.

(Special to The Ontario Intelligencer)

Ottawa, May 7.—Proportional representation will not be a factor in the next election is it understood. The government has decided not to introduce any such measure this session, or at least, not to put it into effect should there be an election. Should the session continue to a logical close this year, a bill will be brought down for educational purposes and no direct ed.

The cabinet is said to believe proportional representation would be a good thing and would give a more equitable representation in parliament. The usual instance quoted is Toronto which has not a single Liberal member to represent the thousands of Liberals within city. It might give two or more Liberals.

The government's opinion is however that any such radical innovation in the electoral system should not come over after a redistribution. Such redistribution follows the Decennial Census and there is to be a census in 1931. Some of the larger cities may then be made into one big riding, electing several members. It is not expected that the new voting system would change the present standing very much. In some provinces the Liberals would get an extra member of two in the cities and lose in the rural ridings, and vice versa in other provinces.

DOG OWNERS AROUSED

Do Belleville dog-owners want to have to go to a pound to claim their dogs if they should break loose from the premises and find their way upon the streets where they may fall into the net of the dog-catcher? A 1930 tag on the neck is no protection against the catcher who will have the right to pick all and sundry dogs, impound them and leave the owners liable to a penalty. Claimants of dogs have to prove that the 1930 taxes have been paid. Tonight the council may name a dog-catcher.

There is no claim that dog owners who do not pay the taxes on their animals should not be made to pay. That is right. Let the waifs which run the streets be cared for, or destroyed if necessary, but has Belleville reached the stage of the big city where dogs have all to be under control with leash or chain? Should the regulations be so strict that if a dog sticks his nose on the street without a leash, he immediately becomes subject to arrest?

Owners should know where their animals are part or most of the time but it does not seem necessary that every dog should be deprived of his freedom the entire time. There has never been any real trouble over the dog situation here and there is no rabies.

If there are those owners who let their dogs run regardless of the rights of everybody, and who do not care where they are, is it right to place wholesale restrictions on others who take care of their dogs and only too gladly take care of them?

Let there be a check up on the owners of the dogs and see to it that all delinquents who continue to disregard the bylaw pay a sufficiently large fine so that it will be to their interest to obey the bylaw or suffer the consequences.

The present dog control measure if put into force will doubtless be one of the most unpopular moves of any city council for men and women do not welcome such a restrictive measure and with comparatively few exceptions would feel resentful if any such restrictions were imposed.

What with taking time to take the dogs out for exercise on the leash and with making the way to the pound to learn if an escaped dog is there and in paying a fine if it is found impounded, there cannot but be a great deal of unrest imposed.

By all means let owners of dogs on which taxes are not paid be made to pay taxes, but why tie up all the dogs in the city when the dogs in the adjoining townships can overrun the city at will?

It is said that it has been suggested that the dog catcher and the poundkeeper be the one person and that the official receive so much for each dog captured. This proposal if it has been made seems insidious and cannot seriously be entertained. Surely the council would not pay an official on the basis of the number of dogs he can catch and impound.

We hope the city council will defer acting any action such as has been contemplated regarding the wholesale restraint of dogs for there appears to be no particular reason why drastic action should be taken at this present time.

MOTHER'S DAY

Motherhood in song and story was the theme of services in many churches, motherhood in the practical activities of life and in the idealism of the race. Poe sang of Israfel's "Mother of Mine" wherein he paints the undying love which is ready to go through shame and misery to follow the child as man and man or girl and woman, dominated the day.

Probably it is only story, and only music which can approach that supreme expression of emotion which can represent the spirit of motherhood. Motherhood is so linked with the spirit that phrases and even attitudes, for motherlove does not talk of itself, but is silent. We must see the mother in action whether the action be painful or joyful or in hymn and song. Words which are not swept forward with music or with the richest sentiment fail utterly to convey an impression of what motherlove is.

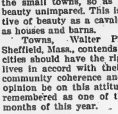
Indeed motherlove is so potent a force in the lives of all, that words do not seem required to convey the impression of it. Words unless wisely chosen are like sounding brass and tinkling cymbal. A representation of motherlove in relation to child speak intuitively to the soul of men and women.

The setting of a day for observance does focus the mind on that love which does not speak of itself.

THE ROADS IN MAY

Rural roads and highways are the attraction these days. With weather of the most delightful character, which has advanced the season of leafing, the highways and rural roads are thronged.

There is a different spirit among motorists at this season than later in the summer. Nature is so fresh in the amazing wealth of color in the young leaves and grass, in the blue sky, and its reflection in the waters, that the whole panorama is new to man.



Motoring these days is more for the pleasure of driving through scenes of beauty than it is later when cavalcades of cars will pass by, filled with passengers bent on their way to pleasure resorts; it is with the desire to be out in the glad sunshine and to feel the breezes and zephyrs blowing across spring fields.

It is a pity that such a sympathetic attitude towards a nature cannot be preserved throughout the year, but the eye grows accustomed even to the dusty summertime and there is a sense of satiety and saturation.

Much of this spring appeal of motoring could be preserved if the highways were left without too many hot-dog stands and shacks, and cottages which have gathered like tin cans about the roads where traffic is the heaviest.

It is contended that the best means of preservation of the highway beauty is to build through roads which are to be taken out of the small towns, so as to leave the natural beauty unimpared. This is no sight so destructive of beauty as a cavalcade of trucks as big as houses and barns.

Towns, Walter Pritchard Eaton of Sheffield, Mass., asserts that small towns and cities should have the right to live their own lives in accord with their ancient plans of community coherence and dignity. Whatever opinion be on this attitude, May 1930 will be remembered as one of the finest motoring months of this year.

SIDELIGHTS

IT IS SAID that one shouldn't look gift horses in the face. Why not? Something for nothing is generally good for nothing, or worse. Have just received another of those delightful circulars informing me that on account of my high standing in the community, etc., etc., I have been selected as "one who would be interested in receiving COMPLIMENTARY, a complete set (in ten volumes) of New Reference Encyclopedia." I understand that a number of other leading citizens, (light and leading) have received the same flattering news. This circular comes from Winnipeg, others recently received came from Toronto, so the "complimentary" wave seems to be spreading. Why these folks should be so anxious to give their wares away beats me, but I have a dim and dismal recollection of having years ago been elected to the leading citizen class and entitled to a set of "complimentary" books, falling for the taffy and getting hooked for forty dollars in more or less uneasy instalments of two dollars each. Prior to that I got hooked for twenty volumes of ancient and modern eloquence which still encumbers the attic and was taken without being read. Reminds me of the time early in our married life when wife consented to have some famous lady diction enlightener free of charge and the fight I had with the salesman guy who wanted $5.89 for gold-lined frames. The enlightenment racket is swift. I live one in some localities, in others the subject is such a live one that any attempt to work it would mean a dead high pressure salesman. So now when anyone wants to give me anything I just naturally begin to take my coat off and roll up my sleeves, I simply will not do business on these lines.

ADOLF ZUKOR, movie magnate, another of those more than millionaires who migrated from the densest Europe, entered New York via steerage, pressed pants in sweat shops for fifty cents a day, ate humble pie and humbler fare generally, and started on his second million before most of the native born had started on their first, returned to his native village in Europe and was received like a king. A despatch from Budapest states that not even the Paramount film organization, of which he is the head, could have improved on the royal welcome given to Adolf Zukor on his return to his native village of Ricse yesterday. His automobile passed through a triumphal arch erected by the inhabitants to honor the man who is not only Ricse's most famous citizen, but its most munificent benefactor.

A rain of flowers fell on Mr. and Mrs. Zukor as they left their car, which had been escorted by mounted peasants to the one-story cottage where they once lived.

The Mayor praised "the greatest citizen of our village" and mentioned that, largely as a result of Mr. Zukor's interest in its development, Ricse is to become the district headquarters.

The festivities in honor of Mr. Zukor's return centred in the synagogue, but a deputation of Protestant inhabitants thanked him for paying for the repairs to their church, and when he visited the school which he built and maintains the school children gazed with admiration on their benefactor.

"There is obviously no more illiteracy in Ricse," said Mr. Zukor, "since everybody must by this time have had a petition to me."

A peasant woman demanded payment for a snapshot Mr. Zukor had taken of her on a visit home several years ago. "You must have made a lot of money out of that picture," she said.

COMPANY SUE TOWN OF PICTON

Florence Millman Appointed Chief Operator of Bell Telephone

(Special to Ontario Intelligencer)

Picton, May 12.—Tuesday evening at a meeting of the Town Council, Clerk R. H. Calnan informed the council of the defendant's failure to repair their water hydrant for fire protection on Lake street, in the town of Picton —He said corporation having had notice of the defective condition of the hydrant.

It will be remembered that Hyatt and Hart's mill on Lake street, was destroyed by fire early in the year, together with a large quantity of feed, flour and coal. A pile of coal, containing many tons, burned for over three months. Messrs. Hyatt and Hart claim that the building could have been saved had the water hydrant been in proper repair.

F. L. Ward, town solicitor, was retained by the council to defend the corporation against the action instituted by Hyatt and Hart Co.

Daylight Saving Petition

A petition signed by 54 ratepayers, was presented to the council. This asked for Daylight Saving to become effective May 18, and continue until Oct. 5. There was a short discussion, but no action was taken.

Councillor Palmateer objected to so many cars speeding on Main street and others objected to trucks being parked on the streets, thereby causing traffic congestion.

$100 was granted the Poultry Association. Other grants included $200 for publicity and $50 for the Salvation Army Self-Denial Fund.

Miss Florence Millman has been appointed Chief Operator in the Bell Telephone office here. She succeeds Miss. Robert Thompson who has held the post for eight years. Miss Millman has been with the company for seven years.

Dogs Attack Sheep

Two flocks of sheep, owned by farmers in Athol Township, have been attacked by dogs during the past few days. None of the animals were seriously injured however, though the ears of several in each case were badly bitten. Last year many hundreds of dollars were paid out to farmers as a result of sheep being worried to death by dogs.

Dynamite stolen from the building on the Ridge Road, Hallowell Township, was valued at $78 and not $7800, as reported in the daily press. There were eight boxes weighing about 50 pounds each. No trace of the dynamite has been found, though the police of the district are keeping a very close watch.

The explosive was missed at the first of the month when the Raynor Construction Co., the owners, went to get it for blasting purposes.

Mrs. Joseph Robin

After a lengthy illness, Mrs. Joseph Robin, a highly esteemed resident of Bethesda vicinity, passed away. She was a great worker in the community and loved by all. She leaves her husband and one daughter at home; two sisters, Mrs. Allan Osborne, and Miss Lillie Foster, Picton, and four brothers, Rector Foster, Solmesville; Frank Dan and Ass Foster in the West. Hev. D. M. Smith was assisted in conducting the funeral services by Rev. Mr. Tavish, Campbellford, a former minister.

MOHAWK BRANCH GIVEN BANNER

Honours Won by Two Little Girls For Highest Marks in Competition

Tyendinaga Reserve, May 12 (Special)—The Mohawk Branch of the W. A. was well represented at the tenth fourth annual meeting of the Women's Auxiliary which was held in the Sunday School rooms of St. Mary Magdalene church, at Napanee, on May 6, 7 and 8.

The delegates who attended were: Mrs. (Rev.) Herbert Pringle, Superintendent of the Junior Branch; Mrs. Elmer Amey, President; Mrs. Benjn Brant, Little Helpers' Secretary; Mrs. Jerry Brant, Dorcas Secretary, and Mrs. Henry A. Brant, Secretary.

The Junior Mohawk Branch obtained a very high standard in the recent Diocesan Competition held during Easter week.

Every member wrote on the exams, and two little girls from the Six Nations Parish of Tyendinaga, Miss Velma Tompkins, and Miss Sarah Hill, won the honors for the highest marks in the Diocese, 97 per cent., and were awarded silver W. A. pins. Miss Mae Marsden obtained 90 per cent.

The Branch won the keenly-contested W. A. banner.

These with other well certificates of merit were presented the members at the annual Diocesan meeting, by Mrs. S. E. Marcon, Secretary for Junior Work.

The Juniors prize their banner very highly, and the Senior Branch is arranging a banquet in their honor, to be held at the Rectory next Friday.

Today's Poem

HOMELY THINGS

There is no small work unto God.
His creatures of no greatness;
Of his last creations
A slight aquatic nature
Stature superb and bright complexioned.
He sets to no humble duty.
Each act that he would have us do
Of highest sound with deepest beauty.
Terrific deeds and cosmic tasks
Of His plainest child he asks.
Often I polish the bronzen pan
To hear a creature laugh afar
In the gardens of a star,
Fond from his burning presence run
Flaming wheels of many a sun. . . .
Prayer of all men's thoughts and ways
With labor do I sound Thy praise,
My work is done for Thee.
Whoever makes a thing more bright,
He is an angel of all light. .
Therefore let your spirit spread
The beautiful cleanness of my God.

Roses Two Cents

When I stepped out of my window upon the balcony this morning to listen to the birds, my eye feasted on a riot of color in the square across the street. The flower-market had come to town. If my knowledge was lacking, my admiration was not. There were not stalls, but the flowers were arranged in rows and vases on the ground, so that you walked as in a garden; and massed in colorful heaps against the gray stone of the church walls they made an unforgettable picture. The market was the most extensive I had seen, stretching in a long, narrow line, and the air was heavy with fragrance. I bought with the reckless abandon that pleases me in flower shops. Then, more careless of what I would do with them—once they were bought, and I surpassed again at the hotel just visits under a load of roses, freesia and carnations, sweet-pea, and forget-me-nots. Beneath it I paid the first price asked of me I am afraid I incurred the resentment of several good thrifty housewives. But who would stop to bargain when told that the house roses are two cents apiece, and a bunch of twenty-five sweet-peas can be had for four cents!—Adele de Leeuf, in "The Flavor of Holland."

THE BEAUTY BOX

Shoes of special design and build are recommended for bow-legged ankles. They tend to throw the weight on the inner side of the foot, instead of the outer line. The next generation won't include any bow-legged girls. There won't be any.

In middle age freckles have a mean, sneaking way of developing into moth patches. Exposure to wind and strong sunlight encourage the discoloration to form. A lotion that will remove them if they are not old timers is made by combining four ounces of rubbing alcohol, two ounces of rose-water and fifteen drops of simple tine ture of benzoin. Be benzoin is the bleaching agent. It fluffs away the epidermis, in flour-like meal particles. Owing to the peculiar heavy structure of some faces, cheeks are gaunt and hollow. More often the cause is found in a diet that does not contain fat-producing elements. Proper local treatment consists of nightly massage with a heavy cream. Fingers and thumbs are outspread over the cheeks and come together with a clawing movement which stimulates circulation in the trumpeters muscles.

Chest development is possible by exercise. One good stunt is to flap the arms as a rooster flaps his wings when crowing. The hands, tightly clinched, should be placed on the chest. With each flap lift the body higher and higher. The air will go sweeping down into the lower cells of the lungs. The chest muscles will grow strong.

Whenever the gums bleed, there is danger of pyorrhea. He then to the dentist who will scrape the teeth well up toward the roots. When brushing the teeth use a rolling movement, up and down, sending the bristles between the teeth. Massage the gums daily, using a tooth paste while doing it.

The average coffee tree yields about a pound of beans each season.

Fashionably Speaking

By Lucille

DEAR READERS:

Well, well, well, they're still wrangling over the long skirts. Here we thought that everyone had accepted the fact that for evening and formal wear, they were graceful additions to one's frock, while for sport and business wear the shorter modes are better. But over in England the controversy still goes on.

Miss Ethel Wilkinson, member of Parliament—London, England, said she regarded the introduction of long evening skirts as a cloud on our fair male horizon." She remarked that it was all very well to say that there would be short skirts for day and long skirts for evening "but you know very well that once the long evening dress comes in the long day dress will follow." The occasion of her words was the meeting of two hundred and fifty clerks and typists to discuss long skirts. A vote was taken and the knee-length skirt won!

Lady Duff Gordon, the Canadian girl who has risen to great fame as a dress designer, said that she was convinced that trousers would be the next development for women.

Certainly the vogue for shorts, and for the picturesque beach pajama affairs does point to the popularity for trousers, glorified trousers of course. For no woman is going to adopt the sombre looking apparel that men affect.

The blouses and shorts are gay affairs. They come in one piece and the adventuresome wear them for tennis and games, while the more modest wear a skirt over the shorts, and with a brassiere under the blouse their costume is complete.

They are gay for camp and sports but I think it will be some time before Belleville girls will wear them, don't you?

Fashionably yours

"Girl Unafraid" By Gladys Johnson

Ardeth Is Adamant

But Mary's generous opinion, or the world's spiteful one, made little difference after all to Ardeth.

Tranquil days and deep, star-filled nights, each one bringing returning strength to Ken. Little by little reality pushed in upon him once more. He watched the girl moving about the room and his mind groped back over the past days. Something his terror came into his eyes.

"It's all wrong, dear," he said slowly. "Oh, you shouldn't have done this! What will people—what will everyone say. And"—his thin hands moved nervously. "I can't make it right for you."

Ardeth had been sitting by the window shelling peas for dinner. She rose and came over to his side. She held his head against her breast, kissed his closed eyes.

"It's all right now," she said softly. "It's only wrong when we're apart, Ken."

When Tom climbed the front steps of the Parker home and asked for Mrs. Gleason, Cecile sent back word that she was not well and asked to be excused.

Tom checked a grim smile. He had never been a favorite with Cecile; still less so, he imagined, since he had been attentive to Ardeth.

He drew a card from his pocket and wrote on the back. Replacing it on the butler's tray, he directed, "Take that to Mrs. Gleason and tell her that I will await her."

He stepped into a small, bright room to one side of the front hall and seated himself on the divan.

On the card he had written "Concerning Cyril Underhill."

Cecile appeared in a remarkably short space of time. His first glance told him that she was annoyed and alarmed, both qualities which she tried to hide under a mask of false sweetness.

Cecile Succumbs

She wore a dress of black chiffon, lavishly printed with flaring red and green and orchid flowers. The effect of this was to heighten the white of her face and throat and turn her eyes to fire-opals. Her long, taffy-colored hair was combed sleekly back and bound into a French twist. Her lips were the usual startling and unconvincing red.

To Tom she was more astonishly artificial than ever, reminding him of the featureless and futuristic clothing models he had noticed in the large shops of town.

Cecile sank boneslessly upon the divan beside him.

"You have made me so curious with your inscription about Mr. Underhill," she smiled. "Please do relieve my burning curiosity."

Tom did not return her flashing smile. "I regret that I had to use his name. But it was necessary that I see you."

She made large eyes at him. "But, Mr. Corbett, it is a pleasure!"

Tom Strikes Hard

Tom took up the burden, very red in the face. "No, this is not going to be a pleasure for either one of us," he said desperately. "And we'll make it easier for ourselves if we drop all pretence of friendliness and act naturally. I must be frank. Brutally frank. I am going to speak of very personal matters and of course you are not going to like it."

Cecile's eyes had narrowed as he spoke and they were like the watchful half-closed eyes of a cat.

"Well?"

"Well—you know that I am an old friend of Ken. Ever since we went to college we've been thick"—

"Not so thick lately, I believe."

"No," Tom's eyes narrowed now. "I see we understand each other. But notwithstanding, I am here on Ken's behalf now. I am asking that you give him a divorce."

Cecile's eyes glinted. "A most peculiar request for a man to make even for such a dear friend....."

"Perhaps. But then you are fatter chance, rather—has placed some very peculiar weapons in my hands."

"Such as?"

"Did you have a pleasant trip when you went South last time?" Tom was speaking profusely. The role of the subtle villain was not in his line but he held himself doggedly to it.

The blood drained away from the woman's face until her lips stood out startlingly from the background. "Why do you ask that?"

"Because Mr. Underhill has a very intelligent Chinese servant named Lee whom I imagine he is shortly going to discharge and whom I shall arrange to take into my sister's home. Luckily Carolyn needs a cook."

For a moment she looked at him speechless and there was murder in her eyes. She moistened her lips. "The word of a servant!"

Tom shook his head regretfully. "Ah, but people are so willing to believe the worst!". And in his mind he was thinking, "This woman dreads Lee!"

"So——." Cecile swallowed and he could see the convulsive movement of her long throat. "It is blackmail...."

"Oh, surely not that!" he said gently. "Let us say that I would not like to see the wife of my friend—misjudged—on the word of a Chinese servant. For my own part, I am discretion itself if I think the other party is willing to do the right thing."

"You can't bully me into your dishonesty!" Cecile was beginning violently when she became conscious that she was suddenly badly frightened.

"Dishonesty.....nonsense has been lying rboui me—seriously lying—" she stopped at the sight of his hardening face. She sank down again on the divan and covered her face with her long white hands. Her muffled voice sounded. "Oh—this is ghastly! My God.....!"

Her quick mind was darting back and forth like a shuttle as she searched for a way out. She dropped her hands. Spoke with feverish intensity.

The Victory Is Won

"I know why you're doing this! It isn't for Ken. It's for her! For that girl! Oh, what a fool you are! Can't you see if I divorce Ken it will make it possible for him to marry her? Make sure you're really lost her. Let a few months go by. They'll get tired of each other. She'll be glad enough to come to you on your own terms."

Tom was looking at her just as he might have regarded some strange and repulsive bug. "Lord, you are rotten!" His voice was thick.

"Rotten—yes—as Machina

"I shouldn't delay if I were you. And in return I will develop a very sympathetic case—your sister-in-law wouldn't worry about that Chinese boy if I were you—unless I take a fancy to you. You might tell that part of the Spy that I am only waiting the chance to get him for libel at the first opportunity and that when I get that chance I'll go through hell and high water to see that he's thrown in jail. I have an idea that the days of The Spy are numbered. And—I guess that's all.

He took his hat and walked from the room without another glance at the wonka watching him venomously from the divan.

A relief—to be out in the sunshine and fresh air. He threw back his shoulders. He drew deep breaths as he plunged down the hills.

A wearying business—and distasteful—his playing god-of-the-machine.

London, May 12—Canadians will be interested in hearing that Sir Rennell Rodd, M.P., (who lectured here) won the challenge cup for verse reading and speaking in foreign languages given by Mrs. Minahall, vice-president and governor of the Poetry Society, to commemorate the society's coming-of-age, at the poetry society's headquarters in London. There were 18 competitors, most of them women. The language most chosen was French, although there was a good deal of Italian and German and a little Spanish.

London, May 12—A scholarship is offered by the Governing Council of Ruskin College, Oxford, for women actively engaged in trade union, cooperative, Labor party, or similar work. This scholarship will be tenable to Ruskin College for the college year beginning on September 26 next and ending July 4, 1931, and will be of the value of $300 (£625 college fees, inclusive of board, lodging and tuition, and $115 for the student's personal expenses.)

Toronto, Ont., May 12—"I am emphatically in favor of the sterilization of mental defectives. The law has decreed that the individual may marry, live, but the balance of humanity should be granted the right to see that there should be no reproduction to the detriment of the race," declared Dr. Spencer thought the day was coming when there would be annual medical examination for every man, woman and child in Canada. This, he felt, would be an excellent thing. Bad health, he said, "has a direct relationship to insanity, criminality and the other evils which beset mankind. .

Correct Manners

—Mrs. Cornelius Beekman—

Gracious Messengers

Dear Mrs. Beekman:

For a home wedding where only friends and the families of the bride and groom are to be present, should personal invitations be sent or does it suffice for them to ask the guests by word of mouth?

If a letter should be sent, does the intended bride or her mother write it?

READER.

For a small, informal home wedding the bride may ask the guests verbally or she may write them notes of invitation. Either is correct. Or she may do both. That is, she may herself go over to the homes of her friends and ask them and write letters to those not so close. Personally I am very much in favor of the writing of notes. I think that these notes should be made such gracious messengers of her friendliness and they can make every guest feel that he or she is a very special part of the "audience." Then, too, it seems to me safer, for the bride is less liable to refer to the mistake can be made as to date, hour, and so forth.

The bride's mother or the bride herself may write the notes—either is correct. But, although it is more often that the bride writes these invitations it seems to me more appropriate that the bride's mother write the notes, since she is the hostess of the occasion.

(Mrs. Beekman will be glad to answer questions on etiquette submitted by readers).

APRIL ESCAPADE

By Kathleen Norris

"You wanted me to make me do something didn't you?" Chris pursued.

"I thought you had—harmed Molly," Martin admitted slowly.

"You don't think so now, do you?" "She boy's eyes moved slowly to his wife. "I don't think so now."

"You were going to make me ask her to marry me, weren't you?" Chris said. Mary Kate's color rushed up like a blood flag; Gus lighting a fourth cigarette, halted halfway.

"I suppose so," Martin admitted sternly.

"Why, you know no! You all but said so, today," Chris remanded him.

"When?"—Martin said.

Chris locked suddenly young and tired, and boyishly stubborn, in the public lamplight. There were circles about his eyes; he shook his heavy mop of fair hair backward patiently.

"I do ask you to marry me, Mary," he said, distinctly. "I realize that—that I had no right to—

"Anyway I wish you would."

A dead silence. Then Chris repeated, rather flatly:

"I wish you would."

CHAPTER XXXIX

The color had drained from Mary Kate's face and she looked young, too, with her pale cheeks and dilated dark blue eyes, and her soft tumble of hair, as she sat on her mother's lap, one slender arm still lying about her mother's neck.

"Oh thank you, Chris," she said, very faintly. "But—but—" She stopped short. "But thank you very much!"

And she looked at her mother in perplexity, like a child who is about to cry.

Since I came here to-night," Chris said, "I've come to realize what —what your family means to you, and what you mean to them—

"I don't believe I have much to offer you. Money of course—"

Another silence.

"Money," Mrs. O'Hara pronounced superbly, ending it, "buys very little."

And suddenly they were all in a gale of laughter, Martin laughed, Gus laughed, and Mary Kate laughed almost hysterically. Even Chris relaxed, caught by the contagion of their mirth.

"Ma you are priceless" said Mary Kate.

The atmosphere cleared. She and Chris were still on their feet; Mary Kate looked at herself in a little mirror by the sink, and made a few quick additions of collar and hair, and Cass held Chris' coat for him. Martin his wounded arm strapped to his breast, watched them from his chair, and Mrs. O'Hara, sitting into deep thought with the amazing facility of her mystical race, continued to occupy the only odd piece of furniture known for many years in the family rocker; her eyes narrowed thoughtfully, her full, disciplined, patient mouth slightly pursed.

Chris, overcoated, hat and big brown gloves in hand, went over to Mar.

"Good-by, and good luck!" he said. "I hope—I hope you'll decide for Germany."

"Thank you," Mari said, gruffly, but in a friendly manner, too. "I'm sorry if I—blew up," Mart continued, awkwardly. "We have no father, you know. Stood, Molly and I, and maybe—may-be I forgot that she's perfectly able to run her own affairs."

"Oh, that's all right!" Chris said. He turned to Tom.

"I know Thorckmorton," he said. "What?" Tom shouted.

"If you really want to go in for aviation," Chris continued, "I'd be glad to give you a letter—

"Let me know, will you?"

"Oh, Ma!" Tom said, almost crying. Chris shook hands with Cass.

"I don't have to tell you that I congratulate you," he said. "You have my best wishes. You're—" He paused. "You're very fortunate," he said simply.

"Thanks," Cass responded.

"Good-by, Mrs. O'Hara." Chris was bending over her, he had her hand. "I—I certainly admire your family," he said, with a brief laugh. They all laughed. "I think they're all—start. They have the—the vitality of—of—

"Anyway, they're all start."

"You've seen us at our worst tonight," Mrs. O'Hara assured him. "Maybe you'd come out and have dinner with us some night, and we'll treat you a little better?

"I'm sailing on Sunday."

"Well, good-by and God bless you!" then," Mary Kate's mother said, with a sudden penetrating glance that says through all the layers of veneer to the lovely, fine heart of the child inside him. Her changed, lowered tone spoke only to that.

"Thank you," Chris said, stirred, clearing his throat. He blinked his eyes as he smiled at her, and bent his head widely over the fine workworn, capable hand.

Then it was Mary Kate's turn. She stood by the door, and Chris took both her hands, and looked down at her, as he said, unexpectedly, incoherently:

"And won't marry me?"

The girl looked very tall and very pale and was oddly unsmiling as she answered unsmilingly.

"No. But thank you for asking."

"Thank you." Her face reddened and his voice hardened, and for a moment their hands held them united, and their bewildered eyes were fixed upon each other.

And it was as if both were asking the same question.

"What are we saying? What does all this mean! Is this good-by?"

Suddenly Chris, laying aside hat and gloves with a quick gesture, gathered both her hands, against his heart, and bent over her, so that his bronzed stern face was close to her own.

ssk'MaYPal Kp'dh'nev e-lmr'..".

"There's one thing I left out, Mary," he said. "They may as well hear this too.

"It's this," he went on, in a dead silence. "I didn't count on this. But I love you very much. Did I say that?"

The ground began to sway gently beneath Mary Kate's feet. Waves — waves lifted her from the floor, and the drumming and rushing of many waters was in her ears.

"No," she whispered. "You did not say that!"

GIANTS TIGHTEN NATIONAL LEAD

Frey—Reg's Sensational Young Pitcher, Has Fourth Victory

BROOKLYN, May 12.—The Brook lyn Leaguers moved into undisputed possession of third place with a 5 to 3 victory over the Pittsburg Pirates in a one-day stand before a crowd of 30,000 fans.

The Robins pounded French, and Stoner, who relieved him, in the eighth inning, for 18 hits, but 16 runners were stranded on the bases.

Danny Vance was in good form and held the Pirates to four hits in front of effective backstopping by his mates.

CINCINNATI, May 12.—Benny Frey, Cincinnati's sensational young pitcher, landed his fourth straight win by pitching the Reds to a 5 to 4 victory over the Phillies in a game that started in a tizzle without either team having any batting or fielding practice.

After the Phils had bunched two singles, a walk and an error and a wild pitch for three runs in the fourth the Reds batted Alexander out of the box and scored four. The Phils tied the game in the eighth but in the ninth Frey's third hit of the game, Gallaghan's sacrifice and three straight walks produced the winning runs.

St. Louis, May 12—The St. Louis' Cardinals swept both ends of a double header with the Boston Braves, taking the first game 6 to 3 behind Jess Haines' knuckle ball, and the second contest 7 to 6.

It was the sixth straight victory for the Cards and the sixth consecutive defeat for the Braves.

The Cards got away to an early lead in the second game, scoring one run in each of the first and second innings off Bob Smith, who went the route for the Braves. The Braves came on strong in the last two innings to score on Bill Hallahan, who fanned seven.

Chicago, May 12.—The New York Giants tightened their hold on the National League lead by defeating the Chicago Cubs here 9 to 7. The Cubs used four pitchers, who were pounded for 17 hits, 6 of which were singles. Hubbell was on the mound for New York, but was removed in the eighth after the Cubs had scored four times.

Fitzsimmons finished the game.

The Giants now boast two straight victories over the Cubs.

66 YEARS IN BUSINESS

Gananoque, May 10.—James Donevan, hardware merchants, Friday completed 66 years selling goods on the main street of this town. He started as a clerk with the late D. P. Britton, later entering into a partnership with the late W. R. Britton. In 1886 he became sole owner of the business which he has conducted ever since. Mr. Donevan is at business every day, and is energetic and scarcely knows what it is to be ill.

HAUNTED HOUSE HAS NO HORROR AS HARDY HERMIT BUYS FOR SONG

St. John, N. B., May 10—At last the town officials of Yarmouth, N.S., have located a person willing to take a haunted property off their hands. In 1921, Capt. George H. Perry, retired mariner and shipping master, was found murdered on the rear porch of his house. His skull had been crushed with an iron bar.

His wife, Mrs. Clara Perry was arrested and accused of the murder. No evidence connecting her with the crime was presented and she was acquitted.

Mrs. Perry and her two daughters abandoned the house, and it was seized by the town of Yarmouth, for non-payment of taxes, in 1928. Since then, the town authorities have been trying to sell the property at almost any figure. Recently, Wilfred Korlieist, a newcomer to Yarmouth, bought the Perry property for $300 about half the amount of the tax arrears owing to the town. The property consists of what stated in the town.

Claims have been freely made that ghosts were seen around the buildings and that uncanny noises emanating from the house at varying hours were not unusual. William Malone, who came from Shelburne to Yarmouth in 1927, squatted on the haunted property, off and on for the past year. He recently felt the force of the just peculiarly connected with the Perry estate, when he was arrested in the haunted house, and placed in the Yarmouth jail, charged with burglary of a store at Eel Brook, 12 miles from Yarmouth. The police alleged they found some of the stolen goods in a search of the Perry house.

The town of Yarmouth offered the Perry estate at public auction some time, and have had it upon to private sale since the setback. Mrs. Perry could have had the property back at any time on paying the taxes, but manifested no interest whatever, refusing even to take it over again and sell it out. The valuation of the property when Capt. Perry was slain was $3,500.

Dust Causes Asthma. Even a little speck too small to see will lead to agonies which no words can describe. The walls of the breathing tubes contract and it seems as if the very life must pass. From this condition Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Asthma Remedy brings the user to perfect rest. It relieves the passages and normal breathing is firmly established again. Hundreds of testimonials received annually prove its effectiveness.

PICTORIAL GOLF INSTRUCTION
BY H. B. MARTIN

Follow Through Most Important Feature in Putting

The scientific putter who is always the successful putter is never guilty of flicking the putter and dropping it on the ball. Neither does he draw the club back further than is absolutely necessary.

The stroke is firm and well in hand all the time. One thing that is absolutely necessary is to follow through. One professional expressed it just right when he said permit the club, in putting, to escort the ball. This means, of course, to let the club continue on in the line to the hole which should make sure of certain direction.

The hands alone will be sufficient to make the stroke on all short putts. It is only when we must travel across the green that the arms might be needed.

TORONTO BLAST JERSEY PITCHERS

Montreal Pitcher Turns in His Fourth Victory

Montreal, May 12.—Herb Thormahlen turned in his fourth straight victory of the season yesterday afternoon by defeating the Baltimore Orioles, 9 to 2. It was the big southpaws' second win of the season against the Birds and Montreal's second straight victory of the current series.

Thormahlen hit a home run in the second with none on to give the Royals a lead they never relinquished.

Lee Head, leading hitter of the league, further fattened his average by getting three hits in four times at bat, one of which was a double. Eighteen thousand people saw the game.

Rochester, May 12.—Rochester and Newark waged a game of shifting for turns here yesterday afternoon before the home team finally won out in the eighth when Pepper hit a home run for the Wings with Lucas on base. The home run clout gave the champions the game 10 to 6.

Rochester paraded three pitchers during the course of the game and Manager Tris Speaker used five hurlers in an effort to stag the decision.

Jersey City, May 12.—A gathering of 12,000 fans, including Mayor Frank Hague saw the Toronto Maple Leafs grab the third game of the series from the Skeeters in their one-day stand here yesterday afternoon, winning a dramatic battle 3 to 2.

Nick Harrison, the lanky righthander, was in great form and held Jersey City to six hits. Aside from the second inning, when the home team reached him for two runs on a batch of four solid hits, Harrison was a puzzler.

He improved with every session and only three men faced him in five of the last seven innings. Harrison and Selkirk punching out singles in the seventh and ninth to spoil the record. Harrison struck out three batters and walked two.

Dusty Rhodes, the New York Yankees' farm hand, opened his first assignment in a hockey uniform, but barely lasted two innings, the Leafs punishing him for all their tallies in the first half of the second.

Buffalo, May 12.—The Buffalo Bison took another fall out of the Rochester Red Wings here yesterday afternoon when they batted Dick Bonnelly, one of their mates until a few days ago, from the box and took an 8 to 4 decision.

Extreme wildness kept Bonnelly in hot water and he dispensed eight free trips before giving way to Greene in the seventh inning.

Lee Mangum started to twirl fine ball for the Bisons, but injured his shoulder and had to retire in four innings.

Better Understanding May be Effected

In an effort to reach an amicable understanding, William Fry, former President of the C.A.H.A. and the O.H.A. and W. A. Hewitt, secretary of the O.H.A., interviewed National Hockey League officials and President Frank Calder here on Saturday afternoon. They made the suggestion that no player, except in certain circumstances be signed by a professional club until he had reached the age of 21, and in return for this privilege that the amateur associations would permit players to try out with professional clubs, their expenses and salaries, being paid by the clubs. The National League heads had no comment to make, but they did express Conny Smythe of Toronto and James Strachan of Montreal as a committee to further discuss this matter with C.A.H.A. officials. Amateur hockey has been hit hard by the loss of many star players, some of whom made the leap to the professional ranks when still juniors. It is feared that unless something is done certain amateur clubs will not be able to carry on, and in time long run the professional leagues will also suffer, because of lack of high class material. The time may be far distant, but it is bound to come unless the amateurs receive some protection. The matter is well worth considering, and it is expected that an agreement will be reached. Conny Smythe and Jimmy Strachan are fully alive to the situation, and no better men could have been selected to talk this matter over with the Canadian Association representatives.

"HAPPY DAYS"

"Happy Days" are here folks an d if you have any doubt on the matter run up to the Belle and see. To-night your last chance however and you'll be mighty sorry if you pass it up. For pep, th e show reigns supreme, but one still amongst in the whole production due to the combined efforts of Victor McLaglen, Edmund Low, George Jessel, Will Rogers and a dozen and one other stars. Little Miss Mary Ellis Gale White plays the feminine lead and she told she is a Toronto girl. Oh these Canadians there's no holding them in their climb. The story revolves around a minstrel show, brought strictly up to date but keeping the essential things such as the genial interlocutor and the end men without which a minstrel show would simply pass out. El Brendel has a part in the production too and Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell. The theme song "Happy Days" goes over big and "Moan" is another hit. "We" Build a Little World All Our Own" sounds enticing as sung by Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell. Ann Pennington struts her stuff too in a snappy dance number entitled "Crazy Feet" and another also, "Broken Hips". Just to complete a great show there is a Graham McNamee newsreeling and one of the funniest of Harry Langdon's talkomedy.

Regular Monthly Meeting at John St.

The regular monthly meeting of the W.M.S. of John St. United church was held on Wednesday afternoon, May 7th. The president, Mrs. Cook, occupied the chair, and opened the service with hymn, "Come let us sing of a wonderful love," followed with the Lord's prayer. Excellent reports were received from the Secretary and Treasurer and of the various other departments of the society. Mrs. H. Hill then gave a Temperance Education Talk on the penitentiaries of the Dominion of their over crowded condition caused chiefly from strong drink.

The program was in charge of Mrs. Archibald's group. The devotional service was taken by Mrs. Bevis, based on the theme, "The Indwelling Christ" from the book, "The Christ of Everyhead" with interjections of music between by Mrs. Middleton. Mrs. Donaldson then read an interesting letter from Miss Haig, of Japan, on the work there.

Social Service Centre, Alexiwan.

Miss Melendo followed with a beautiful talk, after which Mrs. Webb gave a talk on the Victorian Order of Nurses, their duties, training of nurses general organization, method of support of nurses, the scope of the work, and the growth in the local centre.

Mrs. Archibald then gave the history of the Angola Mission which is having its jubilee celebration on May 8th to 18th. The hymn, "Come all of the Lord, Awake, Awake" was then sung. The meeting closed with the Benediction by Mrs. Archibald.

Wise and experienced mothers know when their children are troubled with worms and lose no time in applying Miller's Worm Powders, the most effective vermifuge that can be used. It is absolute in clearing the system of worms and restoring those healthy conditions without which there can be no comfort for the child, or hope of robust growth. It is the most trustworthy of worm exterminators.

The royal antelope, the smallest of all rud-chewing animals, stands but ten inches high at the shoulder. The legs are but slightly larger than a lead pencil.

Unless worms be expelled from the system, no child can be healthy. Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator is an excellent medicine to destroy worms.

CITY OF BELLEVILLE

Notice of Intention to Construct a Permanent Pavement on North Front Street from the Upper Bridge to the North Limits of East Street

TAKE NOTICE THAT:

1. The Council of the Corporation of the City of Belleville intends to construct as a Local Improvement a permanent pavement on North Front Street from the Upper Bridge to the North Line of East Street together with curbing on each side of the pavement, together with all necessary and extensions of water services, gas services and mains and to provide all connections from the main sewer to the street line and all necessary works to provide for surface drainage.

2. The estimated cost of the above work is $7,567.00 of which $4,630.00 is to be paid by the Corporation. The estimated cost per foot frontage is $0.10. The special assessment is to be paid in fifteen annual installments and the lifetime of the pavement is fifteen years.

3. A petition to the said Council will not avail to prevent the construction but a petition against the work or the manner in which it has been undertaken must be presented in Section 8 of the Local Improvement Act to the Corporation before said Council at a meeting of the owners representing at least one-half of the value of the property which are to be specially assessed therefor.

4. A by-law for the construction of the work will be considered by the Council at a meeting thereof to be held on the 9th day of June 1930, or such a meeting or special meeting to be held thereafter.

Dated May 12th, 1930

FORTY-SIX ARE EMPLOYED NOW AT THE AIR PORT

(Special by Staff Reporter)

Trenton, May 12.—Forty-six men are working on the airport at present but many more are expected in the near future. 11 teams, two ditchers and three tractors as well as trucks, graders and scrapers are being used by the contractors. Ditching is the most important job at present, this machine digging the required trench at about the rate of a mile per day. Thus it can be seen that this work will be completed in about a month, as there is a little over thirty miles of ditching to be done. As soon as the place is properly drained, it is stated that construction of the buildings, which are to be thoroughly modern, will be started. This should give many who are out of work their opportunity.

RETURNING TO FORMER HOME

Dr. G. G. Clegg will Open Practice at Trenton

(Special by Staff Reporter)

Trenton, May 12.—Returning to Trenton after an absence of several years, Dr. G. G. Clegg, at present of London, will take up the practice of the medical profession here in the near future. Dr. Clegg, who was educated in Trenton schools, has been superintendent of the Royal Victoria Hospital in London, Ont., for some time, but is giving up that position to return to Trenton. Dr. Clegg has purchased a home on Henry street. He was born in Murray Township, nine miles from Trenton, the son of the late Mr. G. Clegg and Mrs. Tweedle, now of Toronto, and during the War served with distinction with the Canadian forces.

BASEBALL FIELD OPENS WEDNESDAY

TRENTON, Ont., May 12.—(Special by Staff Reporter).—With the opening of the new C.P.R. Recreation field next Wednesday, this Club brings to a close one of its biggest proportions, that of building a suitable grounds. Now the heavy work will be in rounding out a winning ball team. Tweed opens the Bay of Quinte League here on Wednesday afternoon, and it should be a real old time ball game.

BEAT HASTY RETREAT FROM TRENTON COURT

TRENTON, Ont., May 12.—(Special by Staff Reporter) — You can go a long ways in half an hour, Alec Johnson and Charles Boyd, no addresses, have discovered from past experience, and when Magistrate O'Rourke asked them if they could get out of town in that length of time, both replied with an emphatic affirmative. They were charged with vagrancy, and the last seen of them they were hiking down a street headed for the broad open Highway.

New Instructor at Trenton Collegiate

TRENTON, Ont., May 13.—(Special by Staff Reporter)—At the regular meeting of High School Board of Trenton, Mr. T. W. Spear, B.A., of Toronto, was appointed to the staff of the Trenton Collegiate to take duties to commence immediately. He takes the place of Mr. W. Scouten, who resigned. Mr. Spear should be a welcome addition to the Collegiate staff. No other business of importance was done at the meeting, only routine business being discussed.

Softball Season Opens Tonight

TRENTON, Ont., May 13.—(Special by Staff Reporter)—The Softball season in Trenton will open tonight at six fifteen at Hay Shore Park when the C.P.R. team play the L.O.L. This should be a snappy game as both teams have been practising faithfully for the past week and a half. The new run night the Cotton Company takes on the Continentals, while on Wednesday night the other two teams in the league hook up, the players the Senators and Benedict-Proctor. Bay Shore Park has been put into good shape by men working under the direction of the Parks Board, and it is now in excellent condition. The diamond has been laid out fine, and spectators as well as players will undoubtedly appreciate the work which has been done.

POTATOES SELL FOR $3.00 BAG

TRENTON, Ont., May 13.—(Special by Staff Reporter)—Trenton's Market Square was crowded on Saturday morning by both vendors and buyers. Perfect weather brought out the crowds, and good prices were realized. Potatoes ranged from $2.75 to $3.00 per bag, eggs sold for 25 cents per dozen, butter went at from 38 to 40 cents per pound, and there was very little cut meat shown. Shoats sold at from six dollars to six-fifty each. Green vegetables such as green onions and lettuce sold freely, the former being 5 cents per bunch, and the latter as high as 10 cents. Tomato plants and cabbage plants were also offered, and were snapped up at fifteen cents per dozen plants. Plants sold for 20 cents a box, while beans were 20 cents per quart.

FRANKFORD DRIVERS WILL FACE COURT

TRENTON, Ont., May 13.—(Special by Staff Reporter)— When D. Dadds of Frankford drove his car into a tourist's car standing in front of Farrar's store on Dundas street, considerable damage was done to both cars. How the accident happened is a mystery, as there was very little traffic on the street at the time, and Dadds had a clear view. He is charged with negligent driving and will appear before Magistrate O'Rourke in the near future.

BELLEVILLE WAS REPRESENTED IN SOUTHERN CLIME

Visitors Pleased With Entertainment and Sport in Florida

By John Lodwick

St. Petersburg, Fla., May 13 (Special)

— Belleville had its largest representation of residents passing the winter months in the Sunshine City, registration records at the local Chamber of Commerce show, with six names being written upon the books during that time of the year when ice and snow covers the Northland.

Railroad, City and Chamber of Commerce officials estimate that 345-0.0 tourists visited here during the season now coming to a close with the advent of summerlike weather in the North. Sixty percent. of the tourists came here by automobile, such as shuffle board, tennis, golf, roque, lawn bowling, archery, horse back riding, trap shooting, bridge, 500 chess checkers, dominoes and quoits.

Most of the Belleville tourists who visited here during the winter have returned home, but not before most of them have made reservations and other arrangements for their return here in the Fall. In many instances, the visitors are planning to bring their children in the autumn to attend private and public open air schools in the Sunshine City.

Included among the Belleville Winter visitors here during the season were, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Cullen, 118 Dundas street; Mr. and Mrs. B. L. Hyman, East Bridge street; Mrs. Burrell Tier and Morgan Tier.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Mary Maddigan, an aged and highly respected resident of Napanee, passed away in Hotel Dieu, Kingston, yesterday afternoon. She suffered a stroke some months ago and her suffering was borne with Christian fortitude. Mrs. Maddigan, formerly Mary Curry, was born in France, 76 years ago, and came to this country at an early age and lived in Napanee practically all her life. The deceased was a member of the Roman Catholic Church and an active worker in all branches of the Church. Left to mourn her loss is one sister, Mrs. Louisa Fitzgerald, of Michigan, besides a number of nieces and nephews. Mrs. Claude D'Eer, of this city is a relative. The body was brought to Napanee today to her late residence and Mass will be celebrated in Napanee church tomorrow morning. Interment will be made in the Catholic Cemetery.

New Brunswick Lady Relieved By Taking Dodd's Kidney Pills

Mrs. Edward K'nade Speaks Highly of Canada's Leading Kidney Remedy

St. John, N.B., May 12 (Special)—"I was advised to use Dodd's Kidney Pills for my kidney trouble," writes Mrs. E. Kinsade, 92 Durham St., St. John, N.B. "I was troubled with pains across the back, and after taking Dodd's Kidney Pills I found great relief. I had heard my friends speak about them. They are a good pill."

Dodd's Kidney Pills hold their popularity not because of the promises they make, but because of the good they do.

Dodd's Kidney Pills are purely and simply a Kidney remedy. They strengthen the kidneys so they can do their full work of straining the impurities out of the blood.

Pure blood coursing through the body carries to the different organs the nourishment they need to keep them sound and healthy.

Dodd's Kidney Pills can be obtained from all druggists, or The Dodds Medicine Co., Ltd., Toronto 2, Ont.

HEAVY BLASTING IN THE NORTH

Madoc, Ont., May 10.—Heavy blasting operations have been taking place for the past few days on the Madoc road in this vicinity, as considerable work is being done on the roads, and crushed stone is being used. The crusher is located at present near Elvaston. All the old rail fences along the highway are being torn out and wire fences will take their place. A gang of about twenty-five men are being employed there at present.

CHAPTER XV

Knowledge and Ways of the Wild Things.

In the previous chapter I have just given you a faint taste of some of the enjoyable hunts Providence has permitted me to have. If it were possible I would like to throw in a whiff of the home-grown savory dressing, when mother opened the old-fashioned elevated-oven door. But as I grew older, ducks, like all migratory birds, got scarcer until I seldom ever went to hunt them. Yet I have always liked to see wild ducks, both on the table and in the air.

In April, 1902, I secured some wild duck eggs and succeeded in raising seven, two males and a drake. But it was several years before I got a pond suitable, as artificial ponds cost more than duck eggs. Then in 1905 Mr. Ernest H. Conover of Leamington gave me three young black mallards that were hatched from eggs direct from the marsh. In 1907 I built my first real spring-water pond. I always kept the wings of my old birds clipped or pinioned, and the young were usually sold to sportsmen for decoys, but in 1908 I concluded that it was worth more to me to see them flying around, and that fall a bunch of the young went away. I naturally thought they had gotten out to the lake and were decoyed before some gunner.

The next spring several black mallards dropped in the pond and acted and looked for all the world like the ones that had gone away the previous fall, but the question was, these ducks came several days apart, and if they were the same ones they would come back together; so I just gave in, and said my were tame because they were with my domesticated wild ducks that was all. Another point I argued with myself against their being the same ducks: These young tame ones that had left the previous fall, would be shot by the first man that ran across them, because they wouldn't know an enemy.

However, about April the 20th all the wild ducks left. One Sunday evening in June I was tapping the food tin and calling a few young wild ducks in the park when my wife's voice rang out from the house saying "Here are your ducks outside." As I looked up, here was an old black mallard duck and eight young ones, about one-half grown, working away to get in at the gate. For a few minutes I stood perfectly bewildered, in thought. My ducks were all around my feet; what duck was this, with eight young, trying and trying to get in at the gate? How did she know there was a gate there? At length I went and opened the gate and she withdrew to the north along the fence; the gate opened to the north but the young were to the south a few feet, and as I stepped around them they toddled, in single file, along with fence and worked their way in through the opening. As soon as the mother saw they were all through the wire netting, she just stepped back from the fence and flew over, like a crow; drop ping down she spoke to her family and all walked into the water together. I then went and got my feed tin and tapped it as I usually do to call all the ducks, and sure enough, this strange duck came right up, but her family stood back; in fact, they did not come out of the water. Again I tapped the tin and she turned her head sideways, looked at me with her one eye and then the other, as much as to say, "How long will it take you to tumble? Don't you know I am one of the ducks you raised last year, and that I returned here to my home last March, and went away to my nest about the 20th of April; and now I have brought my family here to Safety Inn."

The fact was hard for me to believe, but I was compelled to, for the very next week another black mallard, which was evidently her sister, came home, and when I got up one morning she was standing at the gate with a broken family of four ducklings as much as to say, "Will you please let my babies in?" Useless to say her request was soon granted.

In less than two weeks these old ducks and their young would all set out of the pen; in fact I would get feed in my pockets and the ones would climb up on my lap and put their heads in my open pocket and scatter feed for their young.

This duck story I know is beginning to sound strange to you, but remember, I have only just started telling you how they have cornered me up and made me frankly confess I didn't know anything about them. Why do these old ducks, in every case when they return with their young (that of course cannot fly) bring them around to this gate to be let in? How do they know there is an opening there? It is plain to be seen they have thinking ability enough to know that that is where we human beings enter the park and that there must be an opening there.

Another mystery is, where did they birth them, and so forth? In answer to this young ducks, at three days old, can run as fast as adult Bob White quail.

Since this happened, we know of one old duck that hatched her young over four miles away and was home with them inside of a week. In another case a lady telephoned that the school children were trying to catch some little wild ducks in the ditch, and that the old duck had a tag on her leg; this was after four o'clock, and these ducks were over a mile away from here, but at six o'clock she and her family were in our north pond, scudding over the water, catching flies.

But perhaps the most interesting case I had was when a farmer phoned me to come over and help him catch in that water at me with the

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

WAKE OF THE STORM

by

Jessie DeLoria

Copyright, 1930, International Features Service, Inc

The Jane T was meeting heavy weather rounding the Cape. Hugs and battered and pounded the old schooner until she groaned in every timber. Night was an indistinguishable blur of spray swept fury. The night when eight stout vessels were lost along the New England coast.

"The Mary's comin' up on us, sir." The mate spoke with a nervous glance astern.

The tall, loose figure of the skipper wheeled abruptly as he glared at the compass in front of the wheel. The tiniest lamp's yellow gleam showed the stubborn set of his angular jaw and the keen b'he eyes that were squinted against the stinging salt spray.

"Keep her as "she is!" his voice echoed harsh against the gale.

Length by length the following schooner worked down on them, her side lights gleaming in the dark like malveolent eyes. For an instant the two vessels raced side by side. White faces stared at white faced, while it seemed that the two ships would lock together as they passed.

"You darn road fool!" thundered across space from the Mary.

The skipper of the Jane T made a derisive gesture in return. He heartily disliked letting the Mary pass by but the narrow channel was no place for a chance. The Mary was carrying too much sail for such a night, and she was loaded with stone besides, a man like Jerod Tait had never enough for anything though Amos Judd hitherd.

Eight bells struck and the gale took a fresh hold. Twenty miles ahead, in the lee of a little island, lay the only harbor. The same harbor where Amos and Jerold Tait had been brought up. Living side by side through childhood sailing together as boys when they had run off to sea: shipmates always —until the quarrel. A hot headed dispute over a girl whom neither cared a flip for now, and the girl had cared little for them, for she had refused them both.

Long ago she had married and moved away, but the quarrel was still a wall between the two men. Neither one nor the other would give an inch. Amos Judd had scrawled many a letter of peace, invariably torn to bits and whipped away on the four winds. More than once Jerod Tait had resolved to extend the hand in friendship yet lacked the courage to face it.

And now the son of Jerold Tait and the daughter of Amos Judd were in love. "It's still" whispered the village "Wonder what their pa'll say when they know!"

Whatever had been said, it did no good. Sara Judd and Tim Tait were together, just as always, in spite of it all!

"Distress signals, dead ahead, sir!" The mate's voice startled in Amos Judd's ear. Together they watched by the windward rail and saw a pale star of flame hang for a moment in the darkness.

"Must be the Mary" shouted the mate. "She's stuck on Long shoal!"

Captain Judd still stared into the blackness.

"Can't do much 'till this gale goes down, can we, sir? We could anchor on Short Shoal and do more at daylight."

The Captain stopped his pacing "I'm skipper here, Mr. Bailey!" he reminded curtly.

At daylight the Jane T joined the Mary on Long shoal. Captain Judd's brave manouvertngs against the gale had done no good. His efforts to rescue the Mary's crew he had risked everything. Now the two vessels lay within a hundred yards of each other. Already the Mary's masts were splintered stumps and she had listed heavily on the breakers swept her fore and aft. Captain Judd watched these things and his mouth tightened.

"We'll take our yawl boat and see if we can reach the Mary, I guess," he told the mate. "They'll be safer over here."

The mate's mouth dropped. "Yes, sir." He shivered slightly as he looked at the pounding breakers.

The little yawl boat was both heavy and seaworthy, with a good engine and air tanks along the side. Very carefully the Jane T crew lowered away, and on the crest of a wave head off off the Mary.

Amos Judd had the tiller, and a husky seaman was at the engine, shielding it from the spray that broke over them. Tied to the stern of the boat was a slender line, payed out from the Jane T that would mean safety to the crew of the Mary.

How the yawl boat reached the Mary no one knew. A dozen times a wave rushed for them and at just the right moment Amos Judd would shift the tiller a few inches one way or another. With careful judgment the small boat came close enough to the larger vessel to heave the weighted line.

"Rig a bosun's chair and come over yourself last longer's you!" came the yelled curtly and turned his boat toward his own ship.

Almost to the Jane T a white bearded comber swept down on the little motor boat. The swung herself around, rose carefully on the crest, but the sturdy motor coughed, sputtered and died, drowned in the knee deep water that flooded her.

The last line could be seen of the boat by the frantic crews of the two vessels, were the figures of Captain Judd and the sailor Jack-hrifting back and forth as they bailed.

Three hours later the Coast Guard cutter Resolute found the Jane T, a water logged wreck, with her deck gone but the lumber cargo in her hold keeping her afloat. Twelve men were huddled on top of the after cabin in the lee of the torn spanker sail. Close by was all that was left of the Mary; three jagged stumps and a broken jib boom showing above the storm swept waters.

Captain Tait went aboard the cutter in a despondent way to see about getting the ships best. All his fault—too stubborn for any use. He climbed up the side of the cutter and reached over the group of men that were standing by the rail. He couldn't let them see the pain in his eyes. Better he had him by the arm. He tried to shake the hand off.

"Jerod!" the voice was too familiar to be true. His ears must be deceiving him, yet he looked up.

"Amos!" The two men stared at each other.

"You old fool!" blubbered Jerod uncertainly.

"I know it!" Amos agreed. "I know it!"

In the galley, over steaming mugs of coffee they pieced their story together. The cutter had sighted the helpless little boat shortly after it had disabled and upon Amos' tale of his wrecked companions, had rushed to the rescue.

The wedding of Sara Judd and Jim Tait, which was one of the most elaborate affairs ever seen in the village took place the week after their fathers' vessels were lost. According to some opinions in the village it was a mighty peculiar time to take for such an occasion.

"After lookin' their ships an' all—" "M-mm"—" Cap'n Judd smiled over his pipe. "Me'n Jerod though, figured it was the best way to celebrate." And Captain Tait solemnly nodded his agreement.

St. Paul's League Met at Stirling

Stirling, May 10 (By Mail)— St. Paul's League met as usual on Monday night with eighty-one present. The president, Mr. H. Hullin, presided over the devotional part, Dorothy Moon read the Scripture lesson and Gladys Joblin led in prayer. Miss Grace Vanderwater, vice-president of the red side then took the chair and after singing a hymn Pearl Stapley gave a reading, "Mother's Day," followed by a pleasing piano solo, "Falling Waters" by Evelyn Lindenfield and Jean Monroe read "My Mother". This was followed by an earnest and instructive address by Mr. Harry Hullin based on I Cor. 4:3-4, regarding judging oneself and divided his theme into four points:

I. As the World sees me.
II. As intimate friends know me.
III. As I know myself.
IV. As God knows me.

And many good points did he bring out from these principal ones.

Mrs. Jackson then sang "The Magic Month of May" and Fred Hullin conducted a Bible contest.

"Keep the ROMANCE in MARRIAGE"

BEATRICE FAIRFAX

advises the women of

BELLEVILLE

HOW to hold a man's love? That question is asked me oftener than any other except how to gain a man's love.

The answer to both is the same—make him feel how feminine you are!

Many women know that clothes can play a tremendous part in expressing feminine charm.

Wearing pretty, feminine things has an enormous effect on your own personality. You feel more feminine, more charming, and therefore you are charming.

The clothes that don't allow are just as important as the ones that do. Exquisitely tinted lingerie makes you feel almost fifty times as dainty and feminine as when you have on plain or faded underthings.

Now, that psychological difference is highly contagious—men and women both sense it, and very quickly.

A Sure Way

So quickly, so surely, that women who are wise in the ways of attraction are careful to invest money in the silky, lacy things that make them feel, and therefore appear more dainty, more feminine.

They know that they can take such simple, economical care of these engaging garments with Lux that the psychological advantage of lovely lingerie is within the means of everyone.

The most fragile silks and laces will last and last, the most delicate and enchanting colours stay fresh and thrilling if you always wash them with Lux.

Keep Your Home Charming, Too

It is important, too, that your home should always seem dainty and charming to your husband. Keep the glamour of lovely fresh colour, not only in your house frocks, blouses, scarfs, handkerchiefs, but in everything about the house, for men love cheerful colour. Curtains, linens, spreads, cushion covers, all retain colour-charm with Lux.

(Above) Washed 12 times in Lux, silk and lace fibres intact, colour keeps as new. You feel and are charming when your lingerie is so exquisite.

If it's Safe in Water . . .
It's Safe in LUX!

COBOURG ADOPTS DAYLIGHT SAVING

Last Town Between Belleville and Toronto to Adopt Measure

Cobourg, May 10—By a vote of five to three the Cobourg town council decided on Monday night to fall in line with other municipalities on the shores of Lake Ontario and adopt day light saving time. Clocks in Cobourg will be set forward one hour at midnight on Saturday, June 14, and remain one hour in advance of Eastern Standard Time at midnight on Labor Day, Monday, September 1.

Two alternatives were placed before the councillors, all of whom were appearen by in favor of the advanced summer time. One proposal was that daylight saving time only during July and August, and the other to have it in use additional weeks.

Voting for the longer period of summer time were Mayor A. R. Willmott, Harry McGuire, Gerald Rivers, Jack Davidson who made the motion, and Maurice Booth, who seconded the motion. Voting against the longer period were John P. Delanty; Deputy Reeve W. B. Pratt, who made a previous motion that daylight saving time be effective only from June 29 to September 1, and W. J. Corbett, who seconded Mr. Pratt's motion.

Four petitions were presented to council early in the meeting containing a total of 483 names representing all classes of Cobourg citizens and asking for daylight saving schedule for at least three months, June, July and August.

School Question

The argument placed before the council pleading that the shorter period of daylight saving time should be approved was that during June school children were writing examinations and that the change in schedule at that time would disrupt many of them.

It was pointed out to the meeting several times that Cobourg was the only town between Toronto and Belleville where the summer time is not in effect, and that although Cobourg once tried the system and found it wanting, the present great difference in circumstances makes the change imperative.

Coun. McGuire, who announced himself in favor of the advanced schedule, said he knew of instances where man and wife had voted against daylight saving time at the last election but when they heard a petition was being circulated had sent their boy to say they wanted to sign it.

Coun. Jacob

It was also announced during the meeting that three firms declared when the petition was being circulated that they intended to place summer time in force in the factories when the council approved of the plan, but would rather have the change synchronize with the town's schedule.

RUM RUNNERS PLAN CACHES TO THWART BAN ON EXPORTS

Hope to Store Liquor on Canadian Islands for Shipment to U. S.

(Special to The Ontario Intelligencer
Copyright 1930)

Detroit, May 10.—Rum barons who supply the United States with most of its imported liquor, are seeking means to evade the Canadian regulations which will outlaw exports of intoxicants to this country, but so far been unsuccessful.

One man engaged in the trade said: "The boys have always been a step ahead of the law so far, and they'll find some way of beating this one. It's liable to be tough for a while, though."

Various plans have been suggested but all have been impractical, although the runners have been known to act on at least two. One of these was the idea of "planting" huge stores of liquor on Canadian islands and then bringing it in when the new regulations were put in effect. The other, which is necessary can be worked only by small operators, is to obtain many individual liquor permits and attempt to obtain supplies for exporting from the government liquor stores.

One man, well known in down river "importing circles," said it was foolish to think of storing liquor because of the danger of hi-jackers. However, such "plants" have been made. It was learned, several shanties on the Canadian side of Lake St. Clair have been used as storehouses, and it is said some "importers" have gone so far as to bury supplies on Canadian islands.

Colonel Heinrich L. Pickert, Detroit collector of customs, said he had heard of the "plants" in an indirect way. "If any is stored, our patrol will see that it does not get into the United States," he gave assurance.

Col. Pickert said the first evidence of rumrunners getting their supplies from government liquor stores came recently when a young man was stopped at the Woodward Ferry, and eleven bottles of whisky were found in a false compartment of the gas tank. Confronted in the car were found 12 different liquor store permits all signed by fake names by the man. They showed that in addition to the 11 bottles taken that day, he had bought 40 cases of liquor in small lots from the stores under various names.

CANADIAN SEA FLEA SEASON OPENS OFFICIALLY ON MAY 31

Entries Expected from All Over Canada and U. S. for Gallopin'-Fish Meet

Toronto May 10th.—The first big days racing of the Canadian sea flea season will be at Oakville, Ont., Saturday May 31, for the Ellsworth Flavelle prizes.

Last season Mr. Flavelle sponsored the wildest and most strenuous race of the season, the Toronto to Oakville race, from port to port,while the lighter and speedier class "B" and "C" flying fish will go by trailer or truck and put on a series of five and ten mile races in all and any driver who belongs to a club affiliated with the Canadian Power Boat Association or who is himself an individual member of the C.P.B.A. will be eligible for these races. The meet will be conducted under the auspices of the National Yacht Club of Toronto.

The Gipsy Trail.

Hugh Campbell of Peterboro, a member of the Ontario Board of Governors of the C.P.B.A., Harry "Hec" Foster and L. L. Harrison of Toronto are planning a two weeks' gipsy trip for C.P.B.A. drivers through the Muskoka Lakes. Campbell is busy arranging race dates with the proprietors of various summer resorts. About twenty drivers are expected to make the trip. They will take their boats up by trailer to some central point "inspan" and work around the circuit using the one headquarters for all racing, exploring and fishing.

Challenge From Montreal

At the recent meeting of the Outboard Racing Committee of the N.Y. C. secretary Tommy McClure reported a challenge from the Iroquois Yacht club of Montreal for a team race for a big trophy. He was instructed to reply that the N.Y.C. would send a team for four man team to Montreal if the Iroquois Yacht Club would pay a return visit for a similar race for a N.Y.C. trophy, the race to be part of the great C.N.E. program.

BABY CRIES FROM BACHELOR'S ROOMS CAUSES FUROR EXCITEMENT

(Special to The Ontario Intelligencer
Copyright, 1930)

London, Eng., May 10—A crying baby in a bachelor's apartment caused mild scandal here the other day.

It happened in one of the expensive flats of the West End when residents became surprised at the cries of a baby issuing from the bachelor's rooms. When the cries persisted for several days, the surprise deepened in suspicion, and surged with some trivial excuse, a neighbor called on the bachelor to find out the cause of the trouble. As soon as he entered the apartment, however the cries ceased, and no sign of a baby was to be seen.

The following two or three days, the cries of a baby in anguish continued to arouse the curiosity of the whole district, until finally it got the better of a nearby feminine neighbor, who adopted other tactics, and demanded to know where the baby was.

To her amazement, she found the bachelor, pacing up and down the room smiling cries as he walked. Suspicion immediately turned into alarm, and the kindly neighbor called up the police to have the 'insane' man removed to an asylum.

A few moments later, three attendants presented themselves at the door to take the man away. He looked at them in astonishment, and suddenly burst out a roar of laughter.

He explained that, owing to the obvious difficulties with real babies in talking picture productions, he had purchased from a toy company in "cry the baby parts," and was merely doing his practising at home.

CHAMPAGNE? WHY ASK? SAY JUNIOR LEAGUERS

Smoking Almost Universal Among More Active, More Blase Generation.

(Special to The Ontario Intelligencer
Copyright, 1930)

New York, May 10—Three hundred young women of America, Mexico, Honduras and Canada today continued a business deliberations and social activities of the fifth annual conference of the Association of Junior Leagues of America.

These young women are conscious of the place in society they hold, their conversation, their every little act, their carriage, all stamped them with indefinable refinement and culture.

The position in American social life once monopolized by the exclusive "400" is now held by a younger generation of representatives of intellectuals, philanthropists and business women —young women who no longer live a life of ease and comfort, but take their place in a world of activity. Several hold responsible posts in the business world. Others conduct their own homes of family. The majority, however, are married and have a home and husbands and children.

Seem to like it

All—well, nearly all—smoke. Ash trays were repeatedly emptied and refilled. Many light from cigarettes from the butts of their old ones. They smoke as if they enjoyed it—not for the sake of mere show.

That during the days of the convention there will be a lot of cocktail parties is not denied by anyone. In fact, they seem amazed that such a question be asked. Drinking appears to be "quite the thing" among modern womanhood. One day will be spent on the newly-furnished liner Paris, which is docked in New York harbor, and it is not likely the gathering will be entirely without champagne.

"My dear," said one, "I'm so exquisitely happy. I've been given the most gorgeous room in the most wonderful home in the world. And my hostess is the dearest thing imaginable."

Miss Frances Robins of New York City was asked why the press had been excluded from business and social gatherings of the convention. Fear of fanatics

"I guess you don't know New York reporters," she said. "Let them into any social function these days and the next morning there's a column of scandal in the papers."

Notwithstanding a general atmosphere of enthusiasm for the Junior League movement and for their present convention, there can be detected among many of the young women a sophistication bordering on boredom. Their expressions oftentimes evidence a blase attitude toward life.

There are no flashy garments in the whole delegation. Close-fitting hats seem to be the prevailing mode. There are many tailor-made suits.

Compared with the brilliance and glamor of the jewelry worn by another generation of society butterflies these 1930 leaders of the gay set appear extremely conservative. But their costumes and settings are definitely rich in quality and marked with good taste and a sense of refinement.

Pearls Everywhere

There is a richness in talent, character and money among those present which would be difficult to estimate.

Outside the lovely quarters of New York's Junior League, on East 71st Street, every delegate arrived in luxurious limousines. Packards, Rolls Royces, Studies and Willys-Knights swung up to the curb in rapid succession. Not a flivver among them. And not a taxi. New York hostesses had made complete arrangements to meet their guests from out-of-town, and spared no trouble in placing at their disposal all the comforts and extravagances riches make possible.

The phase of Junior League activity which received most discussion was the social welfare work of the movement. Experimental projects, community surveys and civic developments were discussed. Health centres preventoriums, nursing camps, milk stations for children, day nurseries and clinics were the subject of much debate.

Canadian Delegates

There was a decided genuineness in the reception that three Toronto delegates were given at the conference. Mrs. Greenville Phillips, Mrs. G. M. A. Armstrong and Miss Madeline Mara, immediately won a warm place in the hearts of all delegates. There were two other delegates from Canada, Mrs. Gordon Konantz, (Margaret Rogers) and Mrs. S. T. Gemmill (Marjorie Woods) of Winnipeg.

MISSIONARY IS CHURCH SPEAKER

Rev. Williams, Sect. - B. of Q. Conference, Heard at Rawdon

Rawdon, May 9 (By Mail).—Rev. T. Williams, Secretary of Hamilton and Bay of Quinte Conferences of the United Church, who previously was a missionary in Formosa, gave a wonder ful talk on the country and his work there, at the three churches in Rawdon circuit, on Sunday. The pastor, Rev. F. Joblin assisted with the service. In the evening at Mount Pleasant the choir sang an anthem, "Be a Reaper" and Mr. John Coggins rendered a beautiful solo, "Don't Forget Jesus."

Rev. Williams was designated as a missionary from Campbellford church and preached in that district before going half way around the world to Formosa. Dr. George Leslie McKay of Woodstock was the first missionary to that land fifty years ago and wonderful results have been accomplished. The speaker pictured the glorious veg etation, where nearly all the trees are of flowering varieties, with lovely fra grance. However, amidst this beauty they have large snails and poisonous mosquitoes. Missionaries are badly needed as he was the only male mis sionary among a million and a half people.

While there he had many thrilling experiences. There are a huge num ber of lepers in that country and owing to insufficient funds the hospital remained closed during the years he was working in Formosa.

He closed with a plea to the young folks. Them, too, the older folks who cannot go can give of their substance to help carry on and he trusted that the members of the United Church would support the work liberally and loyally in order that the work may be carried on and that no doors be forced to close because of lack of funds.

Mrs. Lewis Pasley spent a few days at the home of her sister, Mr. and Mrs. James Thornton, Stirling.

Misses Charlie Smith, Chatterton, and Harry Ryan were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Ryan.

Mr. and Mrs. Donald Sharpe attend ed the funeral service on Saturday of Mrs. Dan Collins, in Knox Presbyte rian church. Rev. MacTavish, of Belle ville, conducted the service. Deceased was sixty-three years of age and had been suffering for some time with a lingering illness. The past two weeks she was in Belleville Hospital under ing treatment.

The pupils of the schools celebrated Arbor Day on Friday, raking and clean ing the yard. Owing to the wet weather some of the teachers allowed the children to play games and eat their lunch at school instead of going to the woods.

The delegates who went to Bowman ville last week to the W. M. S. Branch Conference, were given a delightful drive to the Boys' Industrial School. This school is under the leadership of the Province of Ontario and is super vised by several teachers who are ex perts in their line. The delegates were shown through the various buildings, School rooms, carpentry and electrical rooms, gymnasium, chapel, rest and play rooms, sleeping and eating rooms barns, etc, and many questions regard ing the school were answered and ex plained. Any boy who does not obey his parents at home may be sent to this school for a small sum of money and if he does not like books he can choose some other vocation. A special collection was taken Thursday after noon at the convention to buy testa ments for all the boys of the school, who attend the United Church.

Mr. J. A. MacMurchy, of Toronto, is holidaying with his daughter, Mrs. Frank Smith.

Mr. Harry Brown and his sister, Alma, of Carmel, spent Sunday even ing at Mount Pleasant.

VETERAN JEWELS PRESENTED TO LODGE MEMBERS

Prince Edward Women's In stitute Will Hold Series of Meetings

(Special to The Ontario Intelligencer)

Picton, May 10—A very interesting feature of the special meeting of the Rebekah Lodge was the presentation of veteran jewels to members of the Lodge in good standing for a period of fifteen years. Those receiving jewels were Sisters Emma Bowers, Helen VanCleaf, M. Francis, Emma Jones and Nellie Eversheds.

The jewels were given an impressive and the chemical engine to the home and the chemical engine to the home of Mrs. D. Gillen on Monday evening. of Mrs. D. Gillen on Monday evening. The fire was speedily under control, but the meter was burned out, and some injury done by water and smoke. Mrs. Gillen was absent at the time of the fire, but some of the children were at home, and the fire was noticed and reported promptly.

Raymond, youngest child of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Parks, of West St. Law rence street, is seriously ill of double pneumonia. He has been ill for sev eral days, but is still very ill. Reports today are that he is doing as well as can be expected.

Mr. Walter Dingman, who suffered a stroke last week, is still dangerously ill, and his condition is not much im proved.

The dance in the armouries under the auspices of the Library Board on Monday night was well attended, and a very enjoyable affair. The music was excellently furnished by Reg. Brockbank and his Serenaders, of Belleville. Refreshments were served by the ladies, and the revelry was con tinued well past the usual time for dispersing. Needless to say all had a good time.

Mr. Jesse Reid, of South Durham St. is making several improvements on and around his house. A new bath room has been installed, and the house refreshened by much interior painting and re-papering. The grounds have been enlarged, and generous plantings made of tulips, roses, etc., making a great improvement in the appearance of the street.

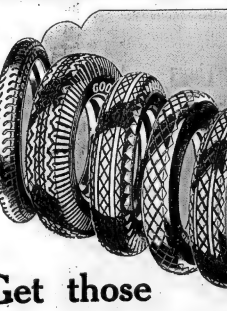
Masterpieces

LOVELY paintings, deli cately chiselled statues and violins that produce rare music are popularly known as masterpieces. But masterpieces are not always confined to museums and palaces of art. They appear too, in professional endeav our and industry. Whatever leads in its field—a vault of ingenious construction, an architectural achievement of impressive grandeur, a fine-spun fabric of striking design—may properly be called a masterpiece.

Brantford Asphalt Slates are the masterpieces of the roofing industry—the tri umph of men who have devoted their lives to the production of a finer roof.

When you roof or re-roof with Brantford Asphalt Slates you will understand why they are the choice for thou sands of Canada's most dis tinguished buildings. You will enjoy a sense of security such as you have never known before. Your home will be safeguarded from the severest extremes of wind, rain, sun and storm. And you will have a roof that is fire-safe, colourfully pictur esque and unneedful of re pairs for a long period of years.



Investigate these "masterpieces of the roofing industry". Go to the Brantford dealer and see the hand some, hardy Brantford Asphalt Slates. They do not run; peel, crack or curl—a bulwark of artistic beauty and protection for your home. Also write for free booklet "Beauty with Fire Protection"—a comprehensive treatise on the proper type, finish, design and colour for your roof.

Arrest Follows Car Crash and Injury

SAM BURNS INJURED AS CAR DITCHED AT BAY BRIDGE CORNER

Driver William Brickman Is Charged With Recklessness

CAR IS WRECKED

Burns Thrown From Back Seat Into Windshield Frame

William Brickman, Ramsmore, driver of the car, which crashed into a hydro pole on West Dundas street, late yesterday afternoon, appeared in police court today before Magistrate Mikel, charged with intoxication, while in control of a motor car. He was defended by R. D. Ponton, K.C.; and B. C. Donnan prosecuted. The Crown Attorney requested that the charge be amended to read that by reckless, variation and furious driving and wilful neglect he did do bodily injury to Samuel Burns, Picton," who was seriously injured in the crash. No evidence was taken, Brickman being remanded for one week. Bail was requested by Mr. Ponton and the court set the amount at $2,000.00 with a personal bond of the same amount. The bail was supplied being satisfactory to the court.

Samuel Burns, Picton, was admitted to the hospital shortly after the automobile accident, which occurred on West Dundas street near the intersection of the Bay Bridge Road, having sustained a crushed chest and severe head cuts caused by flying glass. Frank Bahish, owner of the car, was injured his left side being hurt and he also received cuts about the face and hands. Brickman, the driver of the car, escaped practically unscathed accepting for a few minor cuts on the face. Dr. Crook is attending Burns and stated today there was a chance of recovery. Questioned as to a possible fracture, the physician stated the X-ray showed no fracture but the cuts on the top of the head were severe and deep.

The three men were travelling north on the bay bridge road in a large Studebaker sedan, intending to turn east on to West Dundas Street. It is alleged, that Brickman, who was at the wheel, was travelling at a fast rate of speed, and was endangered in making the turn by a car proceeding west on Dundas St. west. Instead of making the turn, Brickman it is alleged, crowded the other car onto the grass on the south side of West Dundas street, and then ran across the road striking a hydro pole breaking it in three pieces. The other car did not stop and the police, who arrived shortly after the accident, did not obtain the number nor the name of the owner. Brickman who was sitting in the back seat was thrown forward over the front seat and into the windshield bracket, while Sola Smith and Brickman were thrown forward. The left front fender was badly damaged, the roof of the car was smashed in at the front, the windshield shattered and the left front door ripped off.

City Police Officer Frink, Sergeant Booth of the local force, and Constable Hammer of the Provincial Police, all hurried to the scene of the accident but Burns had been removed to the hospital by a passing motorist. Investigation led the police to believe that Brickman was intoxicated and he was placed under arrest and taken to the police station. The car was taken to a garage for repairs.

Operated on Self for Appendicitis; Peritonitis Develops, Patient Dies

New York, May 13.—Louis Capetta, 42 years old, owner of a candy store and pastry shop, died last night in Lincoln Hospital of peritonitis caused by Capetta's attempt five days ago to remove his own appendix.

When he complained of pains to friends they told him they thought it was due to his appendix. They explained how a surgeon would remove it.

With nothing more than this advice to guide him, Capetta went to his room back of the store on the night of April 22, and attempted to make an incision in his abdomen with an ordinary razor blade. Before he reached the inner wall of the stomach he stopped. The wound healed of itself, but the pains grew worse, and on the morning of May 7 Capetta made another incision, this time tearing through the stomach walls. He seized an intestinal strand in the belief that it was his appendix, amputated it, and sewed up the incision.

Later in the day the wound became infected, and Capetta could not stand the pain. He went to Lincoln Hospital in a taxicab and explained what he had done. He was placed on the operating table, but the infection had spread, and he died last night, despite the surgeon's efforts.

Neighborhood Shocked by Tragedy Which Occurred on Monday

Norman O'Neill, seventy-one year old farmer, residing at Hay Bay, Lennox County, twenty-five miles east of here, was instantly killed yesterday shortly after twelve o'clock when he was dragged two hundred yards in the mechanism of a field cultivator. His body was badly mangled when it was found by a farm helper.

O'Neill, according to information, was subject to heart attacks and it is believed that he collapsed while astride a tractor and fell off into the path of the cultivator. The tractor proceeded across the field and his body was almost torn to shreds before it was removed. There was suggestion that O'Neill was hurled off when the tractor struck a boulder but this theory has been discounted.

Dr. Galbraith, coroner of Napanee, was called and stated that an inquest will not be held. Provincial Constable Barrett probed the fatality and blames the cause to a heart attack to which the victim had been subject.

The late Mr. O'Neill was born at Tamworth but lived at Violet for many years, Twenty-two years ago he moved to Hay Bay. He was held in high regard, and the news of his untimely death has shocked the community. He was a member of the United Church. Five children are left, three daughters, Miss Lulu, and Mrs. Lemon of Syracuse, New York, and Mrs. Wait of Aberdeen, Washington, U.S., two sons, Carl and Clayton of Hay Bay. Burial will be made at Hay Bay on Thursday, May 15th.

"D. J." AND DOG CATCHER PROPOSAL UNDEALT WITH MEMORIAL QUESTION COMES UP

Manufacturer and Labor Council Present Opposing Views

MEMORIAL QUESTION

Mayor Will Call Meeting on War Memorial Shortly

Daylight Saving for Belleville for this year and the passing of a by-law to appoint a dog catcher and create a dog pound have become "rampant" for some time at least. Last night the City Council dealt with both matters, both on the floor of the council and the other in the committee room. It was the regular session of the city fathers and the session was lengthy, there being considerable routine business to be transacted. Two letters were read on Daylight Saving, one being from the Manufacturer's Association protesting, that Daylight Saving be adopted for the summer and that any future referendum on the subject be held on the Provincial Voters' List, in order to give as many possible of the people (fected the opportunity of expressing their opinion. The other communication was from the Trades and Labor Council requesting the Council not to interfere with the vote of the people, which gave a clear majority against the adoption of the fast time. Both communications were filed with out comment and by the action taken, nothing will be done with the question for this year at least. Fred B. Smith,

Imperial Government Asked No Reciprocal Tariff Action

LONDON, May 13.—CP—Wide extensions of tariff preference for British goods made in the recent Canadian budget came up in the House of Commons today. Rt. Hon. William Graham, President of the Board of Trade, in a reply to suggestions concerning the Manchester cotton trade, pointed out Canadian changes had been made without any request for reciprocal action on the part of the Imperial Government. In consequence the Imperial Government would not feel justified in asking for increased preference for English cotton goods, he added.

BISHOP VAUGHAN OF ENGLAND ON TOUR CANADA

Was Consecrated Reformed Episcopal Bishop in 1913

SECOND TIME HERE

Will Occupy Pulpit of Emmanuel Church On Sunday

Belleville has today a distinguished visitor in the person of Right Reverend Bishop F. Vaughan, B.D., of England, who is making a tour of Canada and visiting all the Reformed Episcopal Churches in this country. Bishop Vaughan is well known in England and has been in the church since 1902. He was consecrated Bishop in 1913 and was Bishop of the Southern Diocese during the period between 1914 and 1920. He was made Suffragan Bishop in 1920 and occupied this office until 1927. On the union of the Free Church of England with the Reformed Episcopal Church in 1927, Bishop Vaughan was appointed to charge of, the Northern Diocese of the United Church.

This is Bishop Vaughan's second visit to Canada, first being made about six years ago. He is now on his way to Philadelphia to attend the General Council which is being held there. He will be here until Monday next, when he will leave for Philadelphia. While here the Bishop will be the guest of Rev. George Marshall, pastor of Emmanuel Reformed Episcopal Church, and will occupy the pulpit of that church on Sunday next for both morning and evening services.

COMMERCIAL NIGHT AT THE COLLEGIATE

Commercial Night, an annual event of great interest, will be held at the Belleville Collegiate Institute on Friday evening, May 16th, beginning at eight o'clock. This interesting event staged by the commercial forms was first introduced last year. It proved an unqualified success and large num bers turned out to watch the pupils at work. The chief attraction on the program will be the speed tests by each of the three forms. The third year pupils will give exhibitions of expert speed typewriting. Miss U. K. Brown, commercial teacher, will supervise the exhibition. Original music composed by the scholars, will also be put on during the evening. A large attendance is expected.

GIRL SUCCUMBED BENEATH TRUCK

Barnia, May 13.—Jean Scarlatta, aged 24, daughter of S. Scarlatta, wealthy fruit merchant, died in General Hospital yesterday afternoon of injuries received in a motor head which she fell out of the front of one of her father's trucks, which was being driven by her brother Jack. The accident occurred in full view of a number of school children playing about the Scarlatta public school grounds. The girl fell from the vehicle when the front door flew open and she struck the concrete with her head, thus fracturing the skull. Chief of Police W. J. Lannin investigated, and the Coroner, Dr. W. A. Carruthers, considered that death was accidental. There will be no inquest. The survivors are the parents, two brothers, John and Frank, and a sister.

ROTARY DIRECTOR

Mr. Charles A. Cameron, who was recently elected a director of the Rotary club has tendered his resignation from the directorship and Mr. H. W. Ackerman has been named in his stead. Mr. Cameron is recovering from an illness and the press of office duties will prevent his devoting the time to the director's work which he feels it deserves.

BANQUET AT Y.M.C.A.

Preparations have been completed for the first annual Mothers, Sons and Daughters Banquet, which will be held at the Y.M.C.A. Tuesday night, beginning at 6.30. Already many reservations have been made and it is expected that the attendance will pass the 200 record which was made last year. The guest speaker of the evening will be Mr. J. P. Hagerman of Toronto, who was heard at the Belleville Collegiate recently on the occasion of the celebration given for the Boys' Hockey team of the Collegiate Institute. Mr. Charles Hanna will preside as chairman. The program following the banquet will be an interesting one and those taking part will be Mr. Billie Pinkle, Mrs. M. LaVole and several others. Mr. Percy Cole will be the sing leader.

LAWN BOWLING POPULAR

The Belleville Lawn Bowling Club will hold its first meeting of the year on Wednesday evening next, at which gathering, plans for the coming year, will be discussed while an election of officers will take place. Lawn bowling has enjoyed considerable popularity in Belleville during the past few years and it is not thought that this season will be any exception to the rule. C. N. Gilman is the present President of the club.

HANNA TO ALLOW HIS NAME TO GO TO CONVENTION

Thurlow Township Organized—J. E. Shorey Named as President

MR. HANNA'S ADDRESS

G. H. Holton Discusses Financial Question of Dominion

Charle, E. Hanna. ex-M.P., fast night at the organization meeting of the Thurlow Liberal Association definitely announced for the first time that were he nominated as Liberal candidate in this riding he would run and would give all his time and energy to seeing that he was elected.

"I would," he said, "much rather that someone else would carry the standard of the Liberal party in South Hastings, but if I am nominated I will put up the best fight that is in my power. I have contested this riding since 1904. In fighting an election it means a sacrifice in a business and a financial way. Nevertheless I have the interest of Liberalism at heart. I have gone on to represent you just as if I had been sitting in the House. I have consented tonight for the first time to let my name go for nomination. I am with you to the finish.

"I have done considerable work for this district. Look at the air camp. It is in my riding. Trenton and Deseronto is the logical place for this airport to be built. This job will mean the expenditure of some $2,500,000 in this district. Four hundred families alone will be brought here.

"I went after the government about the dredging at Telegraph Light at Point Anne. Today tenders for the job are being issued. Do you know what that means? It means that thousands of tons of Nova Scotia coal will be burned instead of coal from the United States. This coal will be used at the Canada Cement plant and at the Canadian Industrial Alcohol Company. I am satisfied that any Liberal candidate can win in this riding this year.

Mr. Hanna read a lengthy letter addressed to himself from Premier King during the immediate formation of Liberal organization in the different sections of South Hastings.

Officers Elected

Last night saw the formation of the Thurlow Liberal Association and the election of officers and executive that will carry on the campaign for this Liberal party this summer. J. E. Shorey is the president of the new organization and Mrs. C. A. Culley is vice-president. Mr. Shorey succeeds Mr. Hanna as president. Mr. Culley is secretary and Walter Sheffield treasurer.

The chairmen of the ten polling divisions were also elected:

Point Anne, Phil Bennett; 1st. concession, W. Reid and Mrs. Harry O'Neill; 2nd. concession, J. Moorman and Mrs. Archie MacDonald; 3rd. concession, F. Walker and Mrs. M. Phillips; Donovan's, C. Braden; College Hill, C. Benedict and Mrs. Clarence Vermilyea; Foxboro, E. Sills and Mrs. Everett Gowsel; Zion Hill, M. Cronkwright and Mrs. Roy Sills; Plainfield, E. Orser; Corbyville, C. Sills and Mrs. H. Walker.

Harold Holton Speaks

G. Harold Holton was the main speaker of the evening. He began by congratulating the riding on having secured Mr. Hanna's name for nomination. After explaining the great need of organization Mr. Holton pointed out the work that the Liberal party has done in Canada since it has come into power. There was, he said, a huge debt saddling the country when they assumed the reins of government. It has since been cut right down. At the same time, it was stated there has been a reduction in taxation. "Mr. Ferguson," Mr. Holton said, "has added a greater debt to Ontario than Canada had before the war."

Sir Henry Thornton, the speaker said had turned a deficit of fifty millions a year on the Canadian National Railways into a surplus of fifty millions a year. The pennies in Canada amount to forty-two millions a year. "We are" he said, "a party that looks after the interests of the people."

Peter McLaren, ex-warden of the County of Hastings, gave a short address. J. Gilbert Sills acted as chairman for the evening. "Word," he said "has come from Ottawa that every township in South Hastings must be organized."

After the meeting had been considered light refreshments were served.

RAILWAYS TO POOL PASSENGER TRAFFIC LOSSES NOTED

Ottawa, Ont., May 13 (CP)—The Canadian National Railways is ready to co-operate in every respect with the Canadian Pacific in the way of reducing passenger traffic losses, Sir Lieuy Thornton, president of the C.N.R., told a special Parliamentary committee of Railways and shipping here today. The C.N.R., he said, would be willing to pool receipts and in other ways contribute towards lowering the annual deficits incurred in this department.

TORONTO GRACE THE TOP RUNG

Leafs Trounce Reading Keys and Advance to First Place

Toronto, May 12.—Out-hit nine to six by the Jersey city down at the Stadium yesterday, the Leafs industriously grouped their hits with passes by George A. Grant and misplays by his fellow-athletes to win 4 to 1 and creep to within half a game of the league-leading Bisons.

But for a time in the early part of the pastime it appeared as if the Checkers were going to blast our Frank Barnes, southpaw flinger, right out of the park.

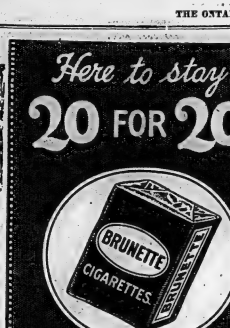
For four innings they cracked the ball hard and often. They made six hits, including a double by Bobby Veach, in that stretch and they were cheated to three bases on balls, but all they capitalized on the collection was one run. Veach's double following Gilhi's single drove in the run.

After the fourth Barnes pitched winning ball—and in the last five innings was railed for only three hits, and the Skeeters did not have another scoring opening until the eighth. After the first two batsmen up in that round had faded out of the picture Gehringer made his fourth hit, a single, and went to third on Manger's double. Jorgens popped out.

Montreal, May 13.—Young Monte Weaver gave the Royals five hits yesterday afternoon, and the Baltimore Orioles captured the third game of the series 5 to 2.

Harry Holeclaw started for the Royals, but was hard hit over the seven innings he worked. He was removed for a pinch hitter in that frame and Buckshaw finished the contest.

The Orioles bunched their blows in the second and seventh to score two in each frame.



Rochester, May 13.—Rochester defeated Newark here yesterday for the third time in succession, 6 to 3, despite the fact that John Berly was nicked for 14 safe hits and gave five bases on balls.

Fourteen of the Bears were stranded on the sacks, and the three runs scored all were unearned, coming after a chance to retire the side in the seventh had presented itself.

The Red Wings made five safe clouts, and used each of them to help in scoring the tallies.

Buffalo, May 13.—The Reading Keys pulled through to a 9 to 8 verdict over the Maroons here yesterday afternoon in a weirdly played ten-inning contest, marking their first triumph in three starts.

Thirty-one players toiled, 18 of them making a valn effort on behalf of the Bisons, who had 16 men left on the bases. Chick Hawks did his best to beat his old mates, driving in five runs with a homer and a double.

Recreation Alleys

In the Ladies' League played at the Recreation Alleys last night the Ciaco took all four points from the Diamonds. For the Ciaco, Miss M. Carmichael was high with 358, 117, 146 for a three string of 668, and for the Breakaways, Miss V. Hobson was high with 636.

In the Junior B. Group the Belleville Hardware and the C. C. Co. broke even with two points each. For the Hardware, W. Harris was high with 217, 152, 282, total of 651 and for the C. C. Co., J. Sherlock was high with 178, 265, 312, total of 755.

Ladies' League

Ciaco—M. Carmichael 658; A. Craig 430; M. Saylor 388; M. Pitman 371; N. Saylor 479. Total 2329.

Breakaway—V. Hobson 636; J. Grant 381; B. Horrigan 230; B. Grant 431; J. Doe 343. Total 1884.

PITTSBURG TEAM TO CLEVELAND

Atlantic City Syndicate Buys Pirates' Franchise in N. H. L.

At the National Hockey League meeting in Toronto on Saturday, the official announcement was made that the Pittsburg franchise has been sold to an Atlantic City syndicate, and that the team was pay in a new arena which will be erected in Cleveland. The sale came like a bolt from the blue, and was particularly distressing to Harry Holmes, manager of the Cleveland Internationals, as he and his associates were prepared to buy the Pittsburg franchise, and operate in the Ohio city. Holmes stated that he had been given assurance tha his club would have the privilege of taking over the Pittsburg team. At one time last winter Cleveland was ready to pay almost a quarter of a million dollars for the franchise and players. Holmes and his champions made good with a vengeance in Cleveland last season and gained a large following, so much so in fact that it is expected that those International Leaguers will attract capacity crowds even with a major league team providing counterattractions. Holmes felt keenly about the sale of the Pittsburg team, but to make matters worse he lost the service of Alfie Moore, the brilliant Cleveland goalkeeper, who is now the property of the Pittsburg club. Moore hewas been drafted. The New York Rangers had made an unsuccessful effort to purchase Moore's services last Thursday and Friday, and it was reported on Saturday's meeting that they will now try to buy Moore from Pittsburg. The Rangers were quite active in the player market. They bought Eddie Rodden from the London club, and lent the veteran Leo Reise to the Pittsburg City. Then in the draft they secured the services of Deacon Waite, the Boston left wing star. Deacon Waite formerly belonged to the New York club, but he was sold three years ago for some unaccountable reason.

FOUR LIVES ARE LOST IN BLAZE

Regina, May 13.—Four lives were lost when fire razed the family farm home of Didier Morrisette, three and a half miles southwest of Ladeche, in Southern Saskatchewan. Morrisette, his wife, their four-year-old son and their 13-year-old daughter, Gilberte, were the victims. Two other sons were injured as they fled in the fire.

Morrisette died when he attempted to rescue his invalid wife.

The fire is believed to have originated from the kitchen range, where Gilberte started a fire, and is said to have used coal oil. The father and one son, Octave, rose at 5.30 o'clock and went to the stable to do the chores. In half an hour they saw smoke issuing from the house, and fast back. They found the front door of the house locked, and battered it down. The father then rushed in to save his invalid wife.

PICTORIAL Ggolf INSTRUCTION
(BY H. B. MARTIN)

The Iron Club Sweep is a Valuable Stroke to Master

Iron club play is little understood by the average golfer. This is true of most women players who have the temptation to hit down on the ball instead of sweeping it. The ball should be carried away on the club as far as possible. If one will observe the play of the leading stars he will see that it is a simple easy stroke without any apparent effort.

Everything depends on timing. The body should not be used in the swing until the ball is hit and if one will remember to keep the head down he or she will come closer to making a successful shot each time. One thing is necessary and that is to sweep the club toward the ball instead of attempting to hit directly down at it. If one gets into this habit he will soon learn the art of hitting a golf ball.

LATEST PLUNGE COMPLETED RUIN

Brown's Dramatic Attempt to Recoup Lost Fortune

Toronto, May 12—In one last fling for fortune—one wild, despairing effort to "cover up" before the people of Stratford discovered he was not the man he was cracked up to be — Tom Brown was reported here last night to have plunged $70,000 in cold cash on the New York race tracks just three days before the inevitable knuckle-rap of the law sounded on his office door demanding the why and wherefore of his absence and his shortages.

It was rumor last night—a case of make or break with the ex-Stratford Mayor. A "killing" on his big plunge would, it is rumored, have meant his immediate return home, and his doctoring of his books so that none ever would have been the wiser as to his wholesale trust betrayal. But the market which had dealt him a crippling punch in November last completely floored him this time. There was but one thing left—Mexico.

At the time of Peter the Great, leather was used as money in Russia.

There are over three hundred varieties of mahogany.

QUEEN ALEX. SCHOOL WINS

Trounce Prince of Wales School in Soft Ball Fixture

Queen Alexandra School defeated Prince of Wales in a rather one-sided soft-ball game last night. The score was 14-3 and while that does not represent the actual margin that the Queen Alecs enjoyed, nevertheless they were superior in every department. The feature of the game was a home-run by Jack Kidd sending in two runners ahead of him. Stapely, on the mound for Prince of Wales was unsteady at times although he was afforded miserable support. Sager on the other hand buried masterful ball and his team-mates gave him heavy support.

The line-ups were as follows:

Queen Alexandra—Knott, lf; Stewart, cf; Diminie, rf; Matthews, ss; Rowie, 3b; Lloyd, 1b; Kidd, c; Faulkner, 2b; Sager p.

Prince of Wales—Elvins, Duvall, Townsend, Jenkinson, MacDonald, Collins, Stapely, Kinsey-Adams.

Umpires—W. G. Anderson, plate; Wells, bases.

YANKEES BLANK DETROIT TIGERS

Long Sacrifice Fly Gave St. Louis Browns a Victory

New York, May 13— George Pipgras held Detroit to three hits yesterday and the New York Yankees blanked the Tigers 7 to 0, before 8,000 fans. It was the Yankees' third straight victory and hoisted them into the first division for the first time this season.

After getting on base successfully 13 consecutive times, Babe Ruth was stopped when Phil Page, Tigers' southpaw, fanned him with two men on base in the eighth inning. Ruth had reached first base three times on Earl Whitehill, twice on walks and once on a force-out.

Washington, May 13— Bob Burke held the Chicago White Sox to five hits while his mates laced Thrower Welland and Blankenship for ten to 2. Sam Rice ran his consecutive hitting streak to 23 games, stopping in his last appearance in the eighth.

Both the Sox's runs came in the first, one a single, a double and an error. Burke then held the Sox at his mercy not allowing them a hit after ter fourth inning.

Boston, May 13—A long sacrifice fly by Red Kress gave the St. Louis Browns a ten inning 3 to 2 victory over the Boston Red Sox The win broke the Brown losing streak of three games and dropped the Sox into the second division.

After Sweeney's home run scored Re gan ahead in the Sox second and Gardner's wildness in the fourth enabled the Sox to tie the score. The game was deadlocked until the tenth Bloe singled in the tenth, went to third on Manush's double and scored on Kress' sacrifice.

Philadelphia, May 13—The Indians drove another of the Philadelphia Athletics' star moundsmen from the box but their only pitching was so bad that the champions easily took the final game of the series 13 to 7. It was Macks' third victory in four games.

Oil Tanks

A request from the British American Oil Company to allow the firm to install more storage tanks on property recently acquired by them near the property now occupied, was granted providing they conformed to the by-law strictions regarding this type of construction.

The committee of Ald. George Tice, Ald. F. R. Wolfen and Ald. Fisher appointed to bring in a report on the construction of signs reported, that a bylaw should be prepared restricting the building of signs in the city of Belleville on private or city property without the consent of the council. A by-law authorizing the construction of a cement sidewalk on John Street was passed under the Local Improvement Act and also a by-law ratifying the agreement between the city of Belleville and Robert Orr for the collection of garbage for the coming year.

William J. Looker, secretary of the Trades and Labor Council addressed the council re the agreement with the Holdcroft Construction Company and the city for the laying of the pavement on the new Bridge. The agreement states, that Belleville labor shall be used wherever possible and that common laborers shall be paid not less than 40 cents an hour and that skilled labor be paid the prevailing wages of this city. Mr. Looker argues, that unskilled labor was doing skilled labor and receiving on 7 40 cents an hour The matter was referred to Ald. G. H. Griffin, as chairman of labor, for an investigation.

CLEANING PLANT

A Report on the Cleaning Plant Was Read

May 12, 1930.

His Worship Mayor Reid and Aldermen of the City Council.
Gentlemen,—

Re Dry Cleaning Plant at 130 Bleecker Avenue,

Your Committee appointed to investigate th's matter beg to report as follows:

After inspecting the premises on Bleecker Avenue we find that the sewerage is at present connected to a storm sewer pipe which is contrary to the Department of Public Health. This appears to be the main complaint from the petitioners due to the fact that the city from the sewerage finds its way back up through the catch basins which are attached to this storm sewer. In order to run the sewerage from this building into Bleecker Avenue sewer the fixtures on the bath room would have to be elevated two feet higher than the present floor of the building. Any other drainage in connection with the plant could pass through the storm sewer without causing any inconvenience to anyone.

Mr. Taylor, the owner of the building agrees to put in a new sewer lateral and connect the sewer pipe into the Bleecker Avenue sewer. We would therefore recommend that the present sewerage system of the building be ordered changed by the local Board of Health.

We find that Mr. Johnson who is leaving the building for the purpose of establishing a Dry Cleaning Plant proposes to make the building fireproof in the following manner:

1. Laying a concrete floor throughout the entire building.

2. Repairing all plastered walls and covering all ceilings with gyproc.

3. Building a concrete foundation under the boiler.

4. Building a fireproof partition between the cleaning and drying rooms.

5. Placing a gasoline storage tank outside the building with three feet of cover for same.

We understand that there will be no odour of any kind outside of the building which would be injurious to any of the nearby residents, and would therefore recommend that permission be given to the applicant to operate a Dry Cleaning establishment at this location, providing he complies with the regulations as set out in this report.

Yours truly,

(Signed)
Ald. J. D. MacMillan,
Chairman of Public Works.
Chas. Mott,
City Engineer,
Ald. Armstrong.

ROAD WORK HAS BEGUN AT PICTON

(Special to The Ontario Intelligencer)
Picton

Picton, May 10—A tennis court is being made on the lot behind the Bank of Nova Scotia and this will be used by, employees of the bank of which Mr. James MacDonald is manager.

The opening dance at the Outlet resort was held Friday evening with a large crowd in attendance. Dainard's orchestra furnished the music. Dances are to be held there every Friday evening.

The Sandbank's resort is being prepared for the tourist season and many holiday seekers are expected there.

Miss Mary Hobson, Perth, is spending some time with her grandmother, Mrs. T. Purtelle, Paul Street.

Mrs. Lucy Shaw and daughter Beatrice moved from Scobarie to Picton this week.

A fine play "Dearies" was presented in Wellington Masonics Hall on Friday evening under the auspices of the United Church, W. A.

Mr. Stanley Thompson, a farmer of Athol Township, had four sheep killed by dogs this week and two other flocks in the neighborhood have been attack ed.

The Raynor Construction Company begins road work here on Monday next. Wellington street has been prepared for the hot mix and this will be paved first. The Raynor Co., will also pave the road to the Olde Chapel and sections in the town. About forty men will be employed and about two thirds of them are local men. The men coming in from outside points will board in private homes and this will be a welcome departure for many who take in boarders. Last year the Company boarded their men together in the old Tremaine Hotel but this is unsafe for use this year.

The plant here is under new management this season. Mr. Ben Weese and Mr. L. Degeer, who were in charge of operations in Napanee vicinity last year, are here. Mr. Weese has had twenty years experience in the business and last year only two breakdowns occurred in his plant at Napanee and these were not serious. The local plant last year experienced many bad breakdowns which delayed work considerably. It is hoped to eliminate most of them this year.

Mr. Max B. Dodds is recovering satisfactorily after an operation for appendicitis.

HOW THIS ARTISTS' MODEL KEEPS FIT AND PRETTY

Says "Thank you, Kruschen, for my clear, bright eyes."

She is a busy mother—with all the work and worry and responsibility of four youngsters—but her clear, bright eyes and fresh, girlish complexion make her a constant demand as a model. How is it possible? Her letter explains. She simply treats her health in Kruschen's fashion. Kruschen keeps her young and fit. That's the secret of the whole matter.

"I am a mother of four children, and although I am kept busy I always feel fit. People ask me why I keep so young and why my complexion is so fresh. I tell them all to try Kruschen Salts. I am a model also for many advertising firms, and thank Kruschen for my clear, bright eyes."

Don't be content to envy her. Follow her example. Kruschen will keep you young just as it keeps her. The little daily dose keeps you young inside: it you wake up every morning as fresh and fit as a schoolgirl, and before the bloom of youth is out the wonderful difference is written in your complexion and your eyes. Thousands are proving this daily. Why shouldn't you?

It is sometimes suggested that single salts, like Epsom and Glauber are the same as Kruschen Salts. This is not so. No single salt can do what the six salts in Kruschen do. No single salt is as pure as Kruschen is. The standard of purity in Kruschen Salts is much higher than the high official standard laid down by the British Pharmacopoeia. We maintain this extraordinarily high standard, every single batch of the six mineral salts used in Kruschen is tested with exacting care by a staff of four expert chemists who spend their whole time on this work. They are guided by a further chemist of international reputation who is retained in an advisory capacity. In this way, Kruschen sets the world's standard for purity for medicinal salines.

Kruschen Salts is obtainable at all Drug Stores at 65c. and 75c. per bottle, and is manufactured by The Kruschen Salts, Ltd., Manchester, Eng. Sole Canadian Importers: Mcdonnell, Ross, Ltd., Toronto.

ABOLITION OF DEPARTMENTAL EXAMINATIONS IS PROPOSED

Twenty-Five Students Will Write on Tests From Belleville

Departmental examinations, the student's bugbear, may be abolished in the near future if experiments which are at present under way in the province of Ontario prove successful. Mr. MacLaurin, principal of the local collegiate explained the matter to students this morning. It stated that a committee selected by the Department of Education at Toronto had prepared and sent to the largest collegiate, including Belleville, test examinations in the following seven subjects. Algebra, Geometry, Physics, Chemistry, Canadian History, Latin and French. These examinations are all on middle school subjects and are an entirely new form of test. The papers contain a large number of questions which require very simple answers, in the majority of cases, "yes" or "no," or a date, sufficing. The answer in most cases is written on the test paper itself in a space provided for the purpose. The idea is to make the answers brief and to the point, and in this way cover much more ground than in the conventional examinations which contain questions that require long written answers.

According to Mr. MacLaurin, twenty five pupils will be selected to write each paper. The papers will be sent to Toronto for marking and later compared with the marks received by the same pupils in the departmental examinations. If it is found that the new method is more satisfactory than the old, we may find Departmentals abolished in the near future. The experiment will begin at the local collegiate tomorrow morning at nine o'clock.

Average pupils will be selected for the interesting innovation. The papers are to consume but a half hour tests. It is to be understood that these examinations do not count in any way on the present time, and that they are merely in the form of an experiment. The same pupils who are selected for this purpose will try their Departmentals later on.

BRIDGE COLLAPSES HIGHWAY BLOCKED

Midland, May 12.—The steel bridge over Wye River, just east of the Martyn Shrine, collapsed, partially under a heavy shovel, weighing about eighteen tons, coming from Port McNicoll on its way to another road-construction job.

The shovel, of the tractor type, had barely got on the steel span, which is about 75 feet long, when it suddenly broke from 1 ½ feet, and the machine plunged into the water. Fortunately, the easterly end of the span did not break away completely, and the bridge is resting at an angle of about 80 degrees from its easterly pier down into the water, and the shovel almost wholly submerged. The driver escaped unhurt, but traffic between Midland, Port McNicoll and points beyond is cut off from direct communication on this highway, and all traffic is to be routed by way of Wye Bridge.

Samples of barley have been dug up in the ruins of Kish in Mesopotamia. They date back to about 3,200 B.C. and are now practically pure charcoal.

CAUGHT TEN-INCH SPECKLED TROUT

Lindsay, May 12—Countless small boys fish for suckers in the Scugog river which runs through the centre of Lindsay and the ship locks are a favorite spot. One of these, Ted McCabe got a surprise for his catch consisted of a ten-inch speckled trout. Not being too sure of the fish regulations he was going to throw it in, but learned in time that it was legal to catch it. Occasionally large are caught in this river inside the town, but trout are few and far between.

AUTOPSY SHOWS BOY HAD BEEN INJURED

Toronto, May 13 (CP)—The autopsy on the body of Walter Elson, sixteen, who was fatally injured in a gang fight in Riverdale Park, Friday night, in which connection four men are held on charges of manslaughter, showed the boy had been seriously injured. The theory he had died from heart seizure was dismissed. His mouth and throat containing dirt and gravel indicating his face must have been shoved into the soft earth. The chest was badly injured and his face was torn from being dragged in the gravel.

E.J. BUTLER WAS C.W.L. SPEAKER

Discussed Women's Rights Before Local Branch

At a meeting last evening of the Catholic Women's League held in the K. of C. club rooms, E. J. Butler, K.C., gave an interesting address on "Women and Women's Work." The speaker was introduced by the president of the League, Mrs. J. M. Trudeau.

"We know, for a fact," said Mr. Butler, "that the first organization in the Catholic Church was composed of women. Long before missionaries had been organized, before priests had begun missionary work, women banded together into Sisterhoods and worked in scattered sections, venturing into far away places for mission work."

The speaker referred to St. Brigid, the statement of Ireland, who during her lifetime fostered and encouraged in Ireland the arts and sciences; to St. Joan of Arc, the 15th century martyr of whose canonization was celebrated this year and to other illustrious women of history.

In the field of inventior, women have not been idle. To a woman belong the credit of the invention of the loom, the printing roller, the sewing machine, etc.

The Victorian Era

On the question of women's rights, Mr. Butler spoke of the Victorian era, and previous to that when women who showed any superiority of learning in public matters or displayed unusual knowledge were branded as witches and burned at the stake. The first concerted movement for women's privileges was started by Mrs. Pankhurst, in England, with the aim of securing for women the right of voting for those who should rule their country.

"History shows" Mr. Butler pointed out, "that what women had hitherto attained has always been through the action of one individual rising by his own merit, followed by others in time to make way for them. With women organized the result was success. After a bitter struggle women finally won the right to vote, not only in Parliament, to be members of the Senate and The Cabinet, to the betterment of legislature.

Conclusion Voted

"If the time ever comes when we have World Peace, it will be through the concerted action of the influence of women. Men have an inbred feeling that they are natural warriors and it is hard to get them educated to the fact that war after all is a relic of barbarism, and that all questions can be settled without recourse to arbitration. At the time when we have World Legislature it will be through the influence and efforts of the women of the countries concerned."

"While history records great deeds of great women there had been no lasting effects on organization. Every woman forced her way to the front, alone. In the present age, under organization the time is ripe. In this country, in England, in United States when women will govern the country. It will give more legislation to children, to back and give women a chance to show what they can do."

The appreciation of the League, for the splendid address was expressed by Miss Margaret Hayes.

J. P. HAGERMAN ROTARY SPEAKER

Members Belleville Club Will Go to Niagara Falls

"To increase my efficiency, to improve myself," the object of Rotary was outlined in eloquent and inspiring fashion before Belleville Rotary Club Monday at the hotel Quinte by J. P. Hagerman, formerly of Toronto, and recently of Fresno, California, where he was a member of the Rotary Club of that place. The speaker was at one time a prominent Y.M.C.A. worker and noted athlete, and his address was inspiring in his time and talents to boys work, particularly boys camps which specialize in athletics, moral and mental and physical efficiency generally. In his address to the Rotary Club he stressed the importance of efficiency, hopefully fit so as to be able to do the best work possible in the Rotary manner, to be capable of greater service to the community.

The speaker was introduced by Joe Shortt while Rotary appreciation was expressed by Charles Bishop and President Al Sullivan.

Twelve Belleville Rotarians will attend District Rotary Conference at Niagara Falls next Monday, headed by Jack Lill, chairman of the convention committee.

CANADA AND HER WRITERS

C. E. Anderson Speaks on Canadian Writers Before Club

C. E. Henderson, president of the Canadian Literature Club, and representative of Longman, Green and Company, publishers, addressed the members of the library reading group on Monday evening at the Collegiate library on the subject of Canadian literature.

"In the highest sense of the phrase there is no national literature, he said, except insofar as a peculiar national complex can make a distinct contribution to world literature, the common heritage. If there is one thing that is going to unify the world, it is literature. The remarks which he makes man's sense of truth, beauty and life. It transcends all national boundaries" "But because we have national boundaries we can put into the mass of literature a local interest, something which cannot be done by others. Just so far as we are able to contribute something which no one else can give, we have a Canadian literature."

"It is said," went on Mr. Henderson. "that most of our Canadian writers are abroad to become famous and that there is a large importation of foreign magazine literature which is expected to influence us, but in reality, we have a large mass of national writings, distinct in form, in language and in thought."

U. E. Loyalist Writers

Mr. Henderson paid tribute to the work of the descendants of the Loyalists. They have contributed enormously to the land their forefathers made their own. The speaker named a number of names, most of them of U. E. L. descent, James Sangster, the pioneer writer; Archibald Lampman, the early song singers, a nature poet who loved nature in all her moods, and who was never understood. Miss Duncan, Sir Gilbert Parker, Miss Weldrald, Virna Sheard, Anna Campbell Jameson, Miss Cecilia McKinnon, Miss Maude Elizabeth Patterson, Miss Sutherland, and the Shackleton sisters.

This age needs culture, it is not for high brows alone but for all, Mr. Henderson said. The true test of poetry which ought to endure is this—does it contain rhythm, truth and beauty? Literature must be for the common people but these are required in good poetry.

Carman's Grave

Mr. Henderson gave a very close picture of the last resting place of Bliss Carman. "I think perhaps of all the resting places in Canada, Carman's is one of the most beautiful, quiet apart from the town of Fredericton. It is to it will come so we all want to be away from the crowded cities. I like at the top of the river. Grey trees are on the banks in this old part of the cemetery. He is not buried in the Carman plot for a time coming, it is not known. When I was there last Autumn there was no headstone yet. There is now a mark, I understand. There will be action by the Authors' Association to erect a fitting memorial."

Carman had a very real love of his country, and knew its past intimately. He knew the Indian mark on every province and saw that Indian legend underlay all our national life. He was always trying to bring back some thing of the early history.

Mr. Henderson read one of the poems written late in life in which he stressed the wickedness of indiscriminate slaughter of life and the oneness of all created things.

It is difficult to appraise Parker for he wrote in many forms and his art is not only that of poet but of novelist as well as pageant director. He has a real sense of tradition's value. "I believe the great Canadian novel has not yet been written, which shall tell the story of the land as in the Forsyte saga style dealing with the pioneers," remarked the speaker.

Mr. Henderson read, "In Solitude" by Virna Sheard, a very fine sonnet.

The work of Miss Cecilia McKinnon was stressed, "Sea Garden" being read in closing. "Sea Garden" was liked: "We have things that are here, though we have not the past of Europe, but we hope to solve problems in the sheer energy of our own younger life.

FLIER NARROWLY ESCAPES

Saint John, N.B., May 13.—R. C. Corham, one of the aviators here of the Saint John Flying Club, had a narrow escape from death in the waters of the Kennebecasis River and the plane was badly damaged when the wind upset it after Corham came down on the water. A boat from shore rescued him.

INSPECT PRINCE WALES CADETS

Creditable Inspection Passed Before Captain Isbester

The Prince of Wales School Cadet Corps was inspected Monday by Captain Isbester of Kingston.

The corps presented a very neat and attractive appearance, Company Commander Nelson Kisser conducted the march past and drilled the cadets in various company movements. Platoon drill was carried out under Platoon Leaders Russell Collins and Oscar Stapley followed by physical training exercises. At the conclusion of the parade Captain Isbester complimented the boys on their fine turn out and the precision with which the drill movements were carried out. Platoon Leader Russell Collins was presented with a bronze medal, being the most efficient cadet on parade

SHOLAPUR UNDER MILITARY RULE

80 Year Old Successor of Gandhi Goes to Prison

BOMBAY, May 13 —CP—Abbas Tyabji, who succeeded Mahatma Gandhi when the latter started civil disobedience campaign after Gandhi's arrest was sentenced today to six months' simple imprisonment on conviction growing out of his activities against the government.

Tyabji, who is eighty years old, was arrested only yesterday as he was heading a march from Navsari to Dharsana to raid the government salt depots. About thirty followers were taken with him.

Jugatram Dave, another of the leaders of the projected raid on the salt depots was sentenced to six months' rigorous imprisonment. Four boy pickets were let off with a warning. All others of the thirty followers were sentenced to three months' rigorous imprisonment. At Calcut, the president and secretary of the congress committee, and four others were likewise sentenced each on t'e beach, were sentenced to nine months' rigorous imprisonment.

Sedition Convictions

Dr. Kitchlew, one of Gandhi's followers, was sentenced at Amritsar to three years' rigorous imprisonment for his participation in the civil disobedience campaign. The All Indian Nation Congress workers, Sheikh Hasandin, Dr. Saumram Seth, Sardar Tara Singh and Chuharkana all were sentenced to eighteen months' rigorous imprisonment on convictions of sedition.

To continue the work of the campaign, Manilal Gandhi, son of Mahatma, left here during the night for Dharsana to lead a raid against the government operated salt depots there. He expected to meet three hundred nationalist volunteers effecting with them the raid which twice government authorities have postponed with the arrest, first of Gandhi, and then of his successor Tyabji.

Rioting continued in certain parts. Eighty persons were arrested in a raid on the headquarters of the Bengal-gold-ribbon alumi.

presidency of the all-National Congress Committee and on the leaders' camp of the organization. British military forces took charge of the city of Sholapur today. Martial law was declared following a renewal of the disturbances after serious rioting last week when a large number of natives and some police were killed and injured. Four persons were killed and twenty-seven injured in a free fight with hatchets and axes between Mohammedan peasants of Kakiri village.

Sholapur, India, May 13—CP—Martial law proclaimed by the Indian government over this city was met by the native populace with an air of resignation for self government. The circle of disobedience movement seized control of the city in the face of declared efforts by troops and police to shatter their activities. The committee chairman, the mayor, the municipal aides and issued other counter measures to government orders. Casualties of yesterday's rioting, in which score killed, resulted from skirmishes between troops and natives.

Bombay Congress committee was summoned to a special meeting to deal with the critical condition at Sholapur.

At noon today martial law charge of all important sections, posting machine guns at strategic points, erection of barbed wire entanglements and holding up traffic, the natives remained and the city took on a deserted appearance. All business places were closed.

ARMY COUDUCT DENIAL CAMPAIGN

Self Denial Surely mention of this supreme word recalls to mind the poor widow who "of her want did cast in all that she had"—Just such a widow there ever been in history a more touching example of real monetary sacrifice?

So many people of today are like the scribes of old—too apt to judge others by the size of their gifts. But God does not ask, "How much does it cost?" but, "How much did he or she SACRIFICE in it?"

And this applies to all service; not to money gifts alone. Our own beloved Prince of Wales, who is certainly one of the most hard working men in the land, sacrificed many hours of his holiday season, as do all George's other members of the Royal Family.

Those of you who are anxious to assist the Army this week will have an opportunity of doing so during Self-Denial Week, which this year, commenced Monday, when funds were inaugurated in 1886 by the Founder of the Salvation Army, General William Booth. Since that time he succeeded to confine the effort to members of the Army alone, their offering to be made each year in the month of May, for years however all such stipulations, so far as the on side public are concerned have been abandoned, but Salvation Army soldiers themselves still "deny" in the strictest meaning of the term. It is to be doubted whether even that fine old General realized what a world-wide success this fund would become. Each year it has shown a decided only upward tendency. Since yesterday few homes today who do not deny themselves something in order to contribute towards the good of others were off than they.

Hard indeed it would be to realize the appeal on the collecting boxes held by the Salvation Army lassies who can be seen on The Day, Saturday, May 31st, and the silent pleading of the envelopes which will be left at every home by you who call give but little towards the Army's funds. I would quote that old proverb, "many a mickle makes a muckle"—and according as we are blessed with this world's goods, and can spare, so let us give.

The local Salvation Army Corps is conducting a Self-Denial Campaign this week and solicit the support of the general public.

TAKE OUT WEST PIER OF BRIDGE

Work on This Will be Completed by End of Week

Removal of the present western abutment on the old lower bridge will probably be completed by the end of next week, The Ontario Intelligencer was informed by one of the officials in charge today. Work has been progressing more than favourably on the new lower bridge, the press representative was informed this morning. Men have succeeded in getting practically all the water out of the cofer dams and cement work is progressing satisfactorily.

Practically perfect weather has been granted workmen and considerable work has been done. Already the frame work of the new bridge, extending far beyond the confines of the old structure, can plainly be seen by a casual observer. It is thought that the bridge will be finished well within the specified time.

LIVES LOST IN CAR ACCIDENTS

Three Week-End Tragedies Reported in Essex County

Windsor, May 13.—Three persons are dead and four others seriously injured as a result of traffic accidents over the week-end. The dead are Mrs. Libbie Ewing, 47 years old, of Oak field North Township; Ralph A. Dwyer, 25 years old, of Detroit; and Arthur V. Hodgins, 27 years old, of Detroit.

Mrs. Ewing was killed almost instant by late Saturday night on the Division Road a mile north of Kingsville. A horse and buggy driven by her husband, Thomas Ewing, was struck and overturned by auto driven by Marvin Oxley, 31 year old, R.R. No. 1, Essex. Oxley, who allegedly failed to report the accident until Sunday morning, is held in Sandwich on a charge of crim inal negligence. He was arrested by Provincial Traffic Officer Allie Jackson, of Essex.

STRICKEN FAMILY RECIPIENTS OF NUMEROUS GIFTS

(Special by Staff Reporter)

Trenton, May 13.—Last night at the former residence of Mr. Joseph Gibson, at Stoney Point, which was destroyed by fire last week, a surprise party was held at which neighbors, relatives and friends gathered to help out the popular family, none of whom were able to rescue anything of value from the house after it was struck by lightning. Since then they have been living in their new garage, and an addition will be built on it so that it will do for the whole family until the home is rebuilt. Many valuable and useful gifts were presented to the family last night.

WATERFRONT IS FAVORITE SPOT

(Special by Staff Reporter)

Trenton, May 13.—Although yesterday was not as warm as some of the days previous, Trenton's waterfront was a favorite spot for swimmers and the female sex were by no means in the minority. More than one passerby on the bridge stopped to watch them swimming and diving off the dock, and if the truth be known, there would be little doubt that many wished they were in the cool water, too.

Miss Ethel Hodge has been taking her daily dip since the first of the month in the Murray Canal, where the water is considerably cooler than that of the river Trent. She is in training for the 1930 Marathon Swim at Toronto this summer.

BRIDGE SUPPLIES ARRIVING DAILY

Propose to Work Twenty-four Hour Shifts On Smithfield Job

(Special by Staff Reporter)

Trenton, May 13.—Within the past few days considerable machinery has been brought into the Construction Camp at the Overhead Bridge, and cranes, steam shovels and other heavy duty machinery are now on location. Supplies are coming in all the time, and it is thought that by the middle of the month the work on the foundation for the new bridge will be well under way. A large gang of men are already working on the job, and according to the superintendent, Mr. E. G. Empey, before the summer is over the men are likely to be working the whole twenty-four hours, in different shifts, of course.

2 GIRLS BURNED

RAILWAY SQUAD BEAT ORANGEMEN

Stacey, Eongated Pitcher for L.O.L. Got Home Run with Bases Full

(Special by Staff Reporter)

Trenton, May 13.—Superior fielding along with a little more weight on the batting end was the deciding factor in last night's opening ball game here, when the C. P. R. Recreation Club downed the Loyal Orange Lodge by a 12-7 score. This was the first game of the Trenton Softball League and a record crowd estimated at over two hundred watched the teams battle it out. L. O. L. bobbled several good chances to get in the running, hitting the C.P.R. team get away in the first inning for a five run burst, and before they got settled down in the second inning three more came across the plate. After that both teams were more evenly balanced, but C.P.R. were never in danger.

It remained for Stacey, elongated shimmers for the L. O. L. boys to give the crowd its biggest and best thrill of the night. In the second frame, with bases full, he cut loose with a two C. P. R's and the bases loaded, he slammed out a long hit which would have been a home run in any park, and he sailed home before the ball was sent back to the infield. It was a lovely clout, and was the feature of the game.

Tonight the Trent Cottons and the Consumers will meet, and on Thursday night the Senators will hook up with Benedict Proctor.

FRACTURED HIS LEG PLAYING SOFTBALL

(Special by Staff Reporter)

Trenton, May 13.—An unfortunate accident occurred at Wooler on Saturday afternoon while the I.O.L. baseball team was playing Wooler an exhibition game of softball, when Reg Baker, of Trenton, had the misfortune to break his leg. Baker, the third base man for the L.O.L.'s was sliding to the home plate when he collided with the Wooler catcher, with the above deplorable results. The bone was snapped just above the ankle, an X-ray showed, and the unfortunate lad will be out of the game for the rest of the summer at least.

FILTERED WATER MEANS NO RISE IN WATER RATES

Hydrant Rental of $7,000 Per Year is Thought Inadequate

CHARGE ALL WATER

Metering System Gradually to Cover All Customers Except Domestic

There will be no increase in water rates to the ordinary householder and metre rate consumers by reason of the cost of constructing the filter plant. This recommendation in a report of a special committee was approved and adopted by the city council last night.

There is also the recommendation that the waterworks department be provided with a small motor truck for the use of the department employees when Belleville gets filtered water all public buildings and all utilities, parks and so forth will be metered and charged at a cost basis.

A policy is to be established whereby the metering system will be gradually increased to cover all consumers with the exception of ordinary domestic services.

When Belleville gets filtered water all consumption is to be charged to the department using it.

The report deems the hydrant rental of $7,000 per year inadequate but the matter will rest for the time being without action.

The report reads:

Belleville, Ont., May 12, 1930

To His Worship Mayor Reid and Aldermen of the City Council.

Gentlemen—Your committee appointed to consider the report of Gore, Nasmith and Storrie as it affects the business end of the Waterworks Department begs leave to report as follows and hereby make the following recommendations:

1.—That no increase in water rates to the ordinary householder or meter rate consumers be made when the Filtration Plant is in operation.

2.—That a survey be made of all the water services in the entire city by a competent man, said man to be chosen by this committee.

3.—That all apartment buildings, flats, etc., occupied by more than one family be metered and the landlord be held responsible for water charges, and that the owners of property be held responsible for payment of water rates on all property and in future that all water accounts be rendered to the landlord.

4.—That all public buildings and public utilities, parks, etc., be metered and charged for water on a cost basis as agreed upon.

5.—That a policy be established whereby the metering system be gradually increased so as to cover all consumers with the exception of ordinary domestic services.

6.—That a small truck be purchased for the use of the Waterworks Manager and his assistants in order that work may be facilitated and better service rendered, said truck to be selected by this committee.

7.—That quarters be obtained for all equipment and supplies of the Waterworks Department and the proposed truck.

8.—That all uses made of city water be under supervision of Waterworks Department (exclusive of Fire Department) and that arrangements be made to meter all water used for construction and sewer flushing and that same be charged to the various City Departments on a cost basis to be agreed upon.

9.—This Committee agrees with the suggestion of our engineers that the amount of money namely $7,000.00 paid by the city for Hydrant rental and fire service is totally inadequate and not on a business basis as far is the Waterworks Department is concerned, but we find that this matter can rest for the time being at least until such time as the Filtration plant is completed.

Your committee urges that these recommendations be adopted in their entirety.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

secretary of the Retail Merchants' Association was at the City Hall to address the council on the question but after a conversation over the 'phone it left the council and did not speak on the question.

Catcher By-Law Laid Over

The council also took the dog by-law in committee and apparently it was sent back for reconsideration for no report was handed in from the chair to the floor of the council. A query was asked by a member of the council in a jocular way "Has the dog catcher been appointed?" and the reply softly came back, the matter was sent back for consideration. Another member remarked that the power of the press was working and all the members laughed.

Another query was asked by Ald. Dr. Kinmear respecting the Memorial, that was proposed on the new bridge. He understood, that a proposal was made by the last public meeting that the council be asked to start proceedings to erect a memorial, Mayor Reid informed the Aldermen, that he intended in a short time to call together 30 or 40 people of the city, who have this work at heart and who are without prejudices in the matter and devise some scheme, that will be acceptable to all. "It is impossible to please everyone", said Mayor Reid, "but the matter will be thoroughly discussed and a proposal made."

Sidewalk Street Crossing

Alderman McMillan and Ald. Woodley locked horns over a recommendation given by the City Engineer and Chairman of Public Works power to act in a matter concerning the city and the C.N.R. At the Sidney Street crossing, the railway have obtained options on triangular pieces of land in order to grade the roadway to the bridge. The council were willing to allow the city engineer and the chairman of public works to inspect work and if satisfactory to the city, have the power to close the agreement. Ald. Woodley did use some strong words that two officials such unlimited powers and in his contention was backed by Ald. French and Tice. The recommendation was put and it was carried.

Ald. Tice Speaks

The letter sent by the City Clerk to the Belleville Cheese Board of Trade respecting the use of the council chamber for their board meetings was read to the council. In the communication it was requested that those attending the board would kindly refrain from smoking and also spitting on the floor. Alderman Tice expressed the opinion that he did not think a class of men, such as cheese buyers and salesmen should be told not to spit on the floor. It is poor business in respect to a business, that has brought such strong commendation from all parts of the Empire. The clerk, explained, that spitting had been done on the floor in the old chamber, and that the letter was written with the council's consent. "I was not well nor present at the time the letter was written," said Ald. Tice, "or I would have been one to object sending the letter."

Salaries

Another ruffle on the calm sea came, when the report of the revision of salaries of the women employees was read in council and adopted. Ald. French wished, that the report be given to the press and was supported by Ald. Tice, Kinmear and Hyde. The majority prevailed and the report is not for publication in respect to the names of those changed by the report. There has been a slight revision in the salaries and the officials have been graded into classes according to the length of service.

V.O.N. Grant

A request was read from the secretary of the V.O.N., Miss Agnes Gallagher, requesting the grant to the organization be $1,000.00 instead of $600. as in former years owing to the larger amount of work, that is being done. The matter was referred to the estimates committee. Ald. Wotten asked if some of the money could be given before the estimates were passed if it was necessary, and the Clerk advised it was possible to vote some money to the Order.

Jack Miner and the Birds

and Some Things I Know About Nature

by

CHAPTER XVI

Do Birds Return to Their Same Homes?

Do birds return to their same homes, year after year?" This is a question that has been put to me more than any one along the bird line, and it is usually followed by: "How do you know?" Then I have had to take father's advice, "drop it," and talk about the weather or some other side line. For while I was sure of this in my own mind, yet I had no proof.

On August 5th, 1900, a wild duck lit with my ducks in the north pond. I started coaxing around her, not by me going closer to her, but by letting her come closer to me. Finally she was eating out of the long-handled spoon that I had previously used for throwing little feed over to her. The spoon, of course, was on the ground gradually being drawn towards me until it came over my left hand that was lying flat on the ground, and on September 10th of the same year this duck actually ate out of my hand. We named her Katie. In a few months Katie got so tame she would follow us in the barn where we went after the feed. So I scraped around in my hunting-case drawer and found a piece of sheet aluminum about three-quarters of an inch wide and one and a half inches long; I then took my sweetheart's best pair of scissors, and with the pointed blade I managed to scratch my post office address on it. Then I caught Katie and wrapped it around one of her hind legs. She disappeared on December 10th, and in January I received the following:

Anderson,
South Carolina,
January 11th, 1910.

Box 48,
Kingsville, Ontario.

Dear Sir,—

On Friday evening, January the 14th I was hunting on Rocky River, near this city. I killed a wild duck with a band on his leg, marked Box 48 Kingsville, Ontario. I supose whoever sent him out wanted to hear from him, so I am writing to let you know where he came to his end. He was a very fine specimen. I must commend him for his judgment, for he came to the best County in the best State in America. If you let me hear from you I will return the band I took from his leg, &c hoping you will send me his pedigree I will close until I hear from you. Send me your address in full.

Very respectfully,
W. E. Bray.

I at once wrote Mr. Bray and he kindly returned the tag which is in my collection of tags. Mr. Bray made two distinct mistakes; one when he called Katie "him" and another, equally as big, was when he stated that the duck came to the best spot in America, for the fact is that Essex County, Ontario, this duck's summer home, is the best spot on this beautiful earth; this, of course, will include all of North America.

In 1910 and 1911 I was so busy I didn't take the pleasure of tagging any more, but in the spring of 1912 I hatched four young mallard. No, I didn't hatch them; I stole the eggs from a black duck that paired off with a gray, green-headed mallard drake and set them under a domestic fowl; a few days after they hatched they accepted me as their step-father, and this old hen and I succeeded in raising four. I always fed them in one spot on the brick wall that surrounded the pond. The fish got so they came regularly for the bits that the ducks pushed overboard; as I would tap the tin to call the ducks, I also called the fishes. I was compelled to believe this, for before I would drop a bit of food, the fishes would be right there. They were what we call bull-heads, a little, miniature cat-fish, about six inches long. To see them with their whiskers tipping up as she did, how many ducks have you got in six years? Surely this is worth thinking over, and when we see that it runs up into the thousands we cannot help but be encouraged, and our confidence in His' lovable, truthful promise to us, His children: "Be ye fruitful, and multiply." He says "Let the mother go that it may be well with thee, and that thou mayest prolong thy days." Who could ask for a plainer fulfilment of His promises?

Now in case the reader might think that possibly I am mistaken in the ducks, and this was not the same bird, I will say that outside of other proofs of her being the same duck (such as coming when we would call her, and now and then eating from our hands, her peculiar marking, and so forth), we caught her each year and examined the tag. In the spring of 1917, after she had returned the fifth time, Mrs. Miner and I caught her and gave her a new tag, as the old one was so badly worn.

Now before I go farther I want you to stop and think. Remember, these are just wild ducks that we are apt to think know so little. Yet the fact is, these birds have shied out around thousands of hunters who are hidden in the ambush with all kinds of decoys to assist them. Yet these ducks have outwitted them all, year after year. Then when they return they will almost eat from my hand the first day they arrive, when if they had allowed themselves to have ventured within two hundred feet of the hunters' decoys it would have been almost sure death to them. Can you blame me for enjoying nature study, for you wonder that I have hung up the gun and am trying in my A. B. C. fashion to tell you these unpolished facts? Yet I doubt if the best writers on earth could give you a taste of this grateful feeling in having your pets return to you year after year for food and protection; really it almost makes you feel you were personally present when He said, "How often would I have gathered thee as a hen doth gather her brood under her wings."

Another thing that interests me: These ducks always leave here in flocks, and return singly, except those that have doubled by bring mates. I have never seen two with tags on return together. In 1914 I tagged twelve. One was shot at Corydon, Louisiana and one at Cookville, Tennessee. In the spring of 1915, day after day added to the number until on March 28th there were six sitting on the brick wall surrounding the pond with bright aluminum tags on their legs. In the fall of 1915 I tagged fifty-three and in the spring of 1916 nearly half of them returned. In the fall of 1916 I caught and tagged fifty-four, and in catching these fifty-four I caught twenty-three that had been tagged previously.

2465 CARS PER HOUR FILED BY

Blossom Sunday Attracted Over 100,000 to Niagara Penninsula

Grimsby, May 12.—When traffic was at its height Sunday, a count kept at Grimsby showed that 2,465 cars pass ed a given point, in one hour. This record was kept on No. 8 Highway. In addition to the above count, it is estimated that close to 1,000 cars passed over the Ridge Road on the escarpment top during the same period and all previous records for that road were broken. In the early part of the day, eastbound traffic was running 50 cars to one, as compared to westbound, while in the late afternoon and evening the reverse was seen. Not a single serious accident was reported to police during the day. Traffic jams were worst at Grimsby. During the morning a gang of workmen was employed at the point where the highway is being resurfaced, and only one side of the road could be used. This occasioned very long blockades, which at times stretched for nearly three miles with cars so close together that bumpers were almost touching. Shortly before noon the Highways Department ordered the barrier removed and traffic was able to get the full use of the road.

OBITUARY

MRS. JOSEPH GRILLS

Stirling, May 13 (By Mail)—Mrs. Grills, wife of Mr. Joe Grills of Carmel passed to the Great Beyond, May 10th, Saturday morning, after a comparatively brief illness.

According to press reports from the Motherland there will shortly be a re-shuffling of the Labor Cabinet which involves the five familiar persons pictured above: Top, left, Bn. Turner, Minister of Mines, is expected to vacate his post owing to conditions of health, and Sir Oswald Mosley, top, right, is slated to succeed him. Vernon Hartshorn, lower left, a member of the Simon Indian Reforms Commission, is reported to be in line for the Secretaryship of Dominion Affairs, when the present Minister, Lord Passfield, centre, more popularly known as Sidney Webb, retired from politics. Rt. Hon. Noel Buxton, lower right, is slated for the House of Lords, and when he goes to the Upper Chamber there will be the post of Minister of Agriculture to fill.

ULTIMATUM SENT TO AFGHAN HEAD

Haji of Turangzai Has Been Threatening Invasion of India

London, May 13.—Despatches from India to the Daily Mail state the Government of India has sent an ultimatum to the Haji of Turangzai, war-like Afghan leader who has been threatening an invasion of the Northwest Frontier Province.

The ultimatum warned him, that unless he removes his forces from the hills near Peshawar by a given time, the authorities will take whatever action they think necessary to preserve the integrity of India's Afghanistan frontier.

The Haji, a strong sympathizer with Mahatma Gandhi's civil disobedience movement and a turbulent chieftain as well, was said by the Government to have been invited by Nationalist leaders to seize Peshawar during the riots there recently.

OTHER LAUREATES

The United States is naturally peculiarly interested in the appointment of John Masefield as poet laureate of England, for the official bard of Empire lived in New York as a barboy. He is the Lancashire lad, the sailorman who claimed for his muse the theme of "the dirt and the dross, the dust and the scum of the earth." The Times says:

"John Masefield's selection as Poet Laureate makes of his life a story of the kind supposed to be peculiar to American soil. While other Englishmen of letters called to this eminent piece have known poverty and obscurity, there is none who endured them in so many phases and in so many parts of the earth. The Labor Government has chosen the most gifted and sympathetic poet of daily toil. He upon whom the old establishment of the laureateship imposes the office of composing tributes to the State and Crown long ago proclaimed his own interest:

"Not the rulers for me, but the rankers, the tramp of the road,
The slave with the sack on his shoulders
pricked on with the goad,
The man with too weighty a burden, too weary a load . . . .
Of the maimed, of the halt and the blind in the rain and the cold,
Of these shall my songs be fashioned, my tales be told.

"Yet it is probable that throughout Great Britain and the Empire the choice of Mr. Masefield will be greeted as worthy and in tune with the mood of the times. There are few others who hold with him in talent. Mr. Kipling, it may be assumed, would not have accepted the place, and to him Ramsay MacDonald could hardly have tendered it. Mr. Sassoon is young and not well-established. This Laureate deals with the subjects which are at the root of the British heart—the globe, the rustic, the for-hunt and the sea. He saw the World War, and in 'Gallipoli' he made powerful note of it. Among critics this literary legatee of Geoffrey Chaucer ranks above many of his predecessors. Even college students of English literature would have difficulty in remembering Rowe, Euston, Whitehead, Warton, Pye and Tate. They too were Laureates. There were official 'court poets' before Dryden, and the first use of the present title was made by Henry VII when he, in his niggardly way, ordered an annuity of ten marks for Bernard Andreas—and then didn't pay it. The annuity is better now, and the obligations are not what they were when Gibbon scornfully wrote:

"I much doubt whether any age or court can produce a similar establishment of stipendiary, is bound to furnish twice a year all events, is bound to furnish twice a year a measure of praise and verse such as may be sung in the chapel and, I believe, in the presence of the sovereign."

"Mr. Masefield need not do that, and probably would not. But when he writes as Laureate the world will listen gratefully."

FOLLOWING SAGE ADVICE

Sir Henry Thornton, head of the Canadian National Railways speaking at Trenton the other night said he held high hopes for Canada in the immediate future. President E. W. Beatty of the Canadian Pacific Railway has spoken in a similar strain.

Railways reflect changing conditions in business as well as any barometer of trade and president of railway companies should know conditions as they arise. Words of such men then ought to carry a weight of conviction with the people.

Just how much good such words create can never be measured in a financial way for there is no means of knowing other than the general rules of optimism. When railway heads state that conditions are improving in the business world, they say so because they know that what they state is true.

ALBERT COLLEGE PLAYERS

Albert College Players under direction of Miss Jessie B. Tuite gave a highly satisfying performance of "Just Suppose," a three act comedy drama a few evenings ago.

Many institutions have their dramatic organizations and Albert College is not to be behind in the attention paid to dramatic art.

In this way institutions make a worthwhile contribution in art to the community and to the general public, exhibiting in dramatic form the thought and trend of the times in characters in action. Dramatic societies are not so much fad, but they are interpreters of the best thought in the most pleasant form—the drama. While preaching in drama is not ideal, yet the drama does teach the finest thoughts of this age and all ages. Nothing a school could attempt would serve its community better than such an organization.

Albert College Players are serving art in another way, they are keeping the fires of drama burning until the spoken drama returns to its own. It is characteristic of drama that it will not stay "down." When movies tend to sweep drama out by closing the houses to actual actors on the boards, along comes the development of the Little Theatre movement throughout the country and on top of that is found the sound picture. These all indicate a trend to the acted drama before the foot-lights.

SIDELIGHTS

CROWS ON THE RIVER

Black crows out on the grey and white,
Flapping and cawing;
Loud geese up in the starry night;
Old snow thawed and old ice thawing;
The walking river, under his shell
Feels his muscles tingle and swell,
Squares his shoulders, heavy and sore . . . .
Alders quiver along the shore!

Black wings over the white and grey
Flap up and down.
The ponds are flooded the brooks are away;
The sappy alders are wet and brown.
The eager river, under the ice,
Humps his shoulder just once more . . . .
Open water along the shore!

Glad crows out in the windy sun
Cawing and flapping
And riding the logs as they plunge and run,
And crank where the grinding jam is snapping;
Riding the wind and sailing the drift
Where spent ice crumbles and torn trees lift;
Cheering the river with impish glee . . . .
Winter is tumbling out to sea!

FROM PARAWAY CALIFORNIA comes a picture post card showing the beautiful bungalow of Will Rogers, cowboy comedian and philosopher. The card was sent by a California reader of Sidelights as the result of a paragraph in this column about the sage of Beverly Hills. After seeing the picture of Will's bungalow in his beautiful setting of flowers and foliage I no longer wonder where he gets his inspiration for wise and witty sayings. Will says Beverly Hills has it all over those many burgs which brag that they are "the fastest growing town in the U.S." From 674 prolific souls in 1920 Beverly Hills has grown to 17,428, a gain of 2,500 per cent and not a graveyard in the town and the jail empty, says Will.

HAMILTON SPECTATOR in its fifty years ago column recorded the death of Hon. George Brown, editor of the Toronto Globe, who died from wounds inflicted by a printer who had been in his employ. The Spectator of that day employed strong language in referring to the murderer who was called "a miserable caitiff." Caitiff is a word which seems to have dropped out with the passing of the years which is a pity considering its effectiveness. Incidentally the Spec of fifty years ago recorded market prices including white fish 12c to 15c each, spring chickens 50c pair, butter 10c to 12c pound, fresh eggs 10c to 12c dozen.

EMPEROR JONES IS DEAD. Those who witnessed the production of Eugene O'Neill's play "Emperor Jones" will remember the splendid acting of Charles S. Gilpin in the title role of the Pullman porter who became a black emperor and waxed rich and powerful until voodoo conquered him. Gilpin died in Trenton, New Jersey, Monday evening. He never recovered from a general breakdown that occurred after his retirement from the stage last fall. He was only fifty-one years of age, was born in Richmond, Virginia, youngest of fourteen children. His mother was a trained nurse in the Richmond City Hospital, his father a workman in the steel rolling mill. Gilpin attended a convent school and credits Sister Jerome of the staff for the inspiration which led to his success on the stage. He worked as an elevator operator, compositor, barber shop porter, Pullman porter and in many small vaudeville engagements before his big chance came. After playing in stock companies for some years he came to New York City and in 1916 was made producer for the Lafayette Theatre, the first negro stock company in New York. Season 1919-1920 he acted the Negro, William Curtis, in Drinkwater's "Lincoln," and on November 1, 1920, appeared as John Brutus Jones in "Emperor Jones." He played the part for the last time in a revival on June 29 last year at Woodstock, New York. Gilpin was nominated by the Drama league of New York as one of the ten men and women of the theatre who had contributed most to the stage during that season.

MODERN ETIQUETTE

By Roberta Lee

Q.—Is it necessary for a girl to write a note of thanks to each of the guests for a shower given in her honor, when she has already thanked them verbally?

A.—Yes; especially when the affair was an elaborate one, and the gifts were very expensive.

Q.—Should one ever use a nail file in public?

A.—No; it is very ill-bred.

Q.—What should one always serve with salad?

A.—Small crackers and cheese.

SEES DOOM OF ST. LAWRENCE IN U.S. CANAL PROPOSITIONS

Erie and Oswego Canals are White Elephants, Says North Dakota Governor.

Washington, May 13. — Whatever Canadian advocates of the St. Lawrence waterway may think of the proposal that the United States shall improve the Erie and Oswego canals from the State of New York and proceed to deepen them, the friends of the St Lawrence project here are greatly encouraged. They see in it a barrier to the river development, and consider that back of the whole scheme is antagonism to the St. Lawrence route from the great lakes to the sea.

Illustrative of this generally feeling is the expression of the views of Hon. George F. Shafer, governor of North Dakota.

Governor Shafer is a member of the executive committee of the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence tidewater association and is in Washington on a brief visit. He said:

"The proposal of the rivers and harbors committee of the House to include in the pending appropriation bill a provision to have the federal government take over the Erie and Oswego barge canals is an astounding thing and should not be taken up by either Congress or the country.

"Pork Barrel" Legislation

"The purpose back of the movement, New York, chairman of the rivers sponsored by Congressman Dempsey of the harbors committee, is two-fold:

"First, it is an adroit move on the part of certain New York interests to block the progress of the St. Lawrence seaway and to substitute therefor the so-called all-American route and second, to foist upon the federal government two cross-country barge canals which have long been an intolerable financial burden and white elephant to the State of New York, to be maintained and improved by the United States at a cost of untold millions.

"The first purpose should arouse the unconquerable opposition of all the states vitally interested in the completion of the St. Lawrence seaway, and the second should invite the condemnation of all citizens who abhor 'pork barrel' legislation, which has long been a national scandal in this country.

Dangerous Bargaining

"The success of this effort would not only drain the federal treasury of many millions of dollars badly needed for the improvement of numerous more meritorious waterway projects throughout the country, but it would unquestionably defer and retard the speedy improvement of the great river and lake program of this administration.

"It is apparent that the inclusion of this New York barge canal provision in the rivers and harbors bill can only be accomplished through the well known practice of trading and bargaining, whereby the support of congressman interested in meritorious items in the bill is sought to be obtained or their opposition silenced. The vicious character of this proposal should be promptly exposed and defeated on its merits."

Relief from Gas Stomach Pains Dizziness

The doctors tell us that 90 per cent of all sickness is due to stomach and bowel troubles. You can't be well if your digestio nis bad; you are likely to get sick unless you relish food and digest it properly.

Tanlac has a wonderful record as a relief from digestive troubles, even those of years' standing.

Local people, many of whom you know, are highly endorsing Tanlac. For example, Mrs. Ellen White says: "For years I suffered from indigestion. I got no relief from anything until I took Tanlac. After my fourth bottle, I feel like a new person and have a fine appetite."

If you suffer from gas, pains in the stomach, nerves, dizziness, nausea, constipation, or torpid liver; if you have no appetite, can't sleep and are nervous and all run down, you need Tanlac. It is good, pure medicine, made of roots, herbs and barks. Get a bottle from your druggist today. Money back if it doesn't help you. Accept no substitute.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

ONE BAR SMYTHE

by

Ellsworth Davis

Copyright, 1930, International Features Service, Inc

Percival Smythe was one of those nuisances that are commonly wished upon a National Guard outfit. He was a dapper little man, wearing an expensively tailored uniform and the shiny gold bars of a second lieutenant. A certain snobbishness and aloofness of views of the enlisted men with a contempt that was too thinly veiled to make him popular in Battery B.

The little officer took his rank seriously and woe be unto the unfortunate private who failed to salute the single bar perched cockily upon each of lieutenant's narrow shoulders He was the terror of the new recruits who couldn't tell a second lieutenant from a private—those poor boobs who broke their right arms in snappily saluting a Y.M.C.A. man, only to develop blindness in seeing anything less than the stars of a general.

And Hans Mueller was this type of recruit. He was an honest lad, built like an army supply wagon. His broad, bovine face wore a blank expression and a pair of china-blue eyes stared dumbly at the complexities of military life. He was as new to the army as was Smythe to a Shavetail's commission.

Battery B was undergoing its final training and was quartered in Camp Ostenglen, a bundle of unsightly barracks, at the time Mueller was sent to the outfit. He was as out of place in the army as a bustle on a flapper until it was discovered that he understood horses; an aptitude that earned him the job of wheel team driver on the third section gun. Constabold Dutch lad was in his element when around the stables, the ammonia odor was a whiff of home to him; an aroma that recalled the fertile acres of his father's farm and the big team of iron-grays that he harnessed for their daily work in the fields.

But the same scent recalled no such charming memories to Second Lieutenant Smythe. He had just finished grooming his pair when he noticed that the policing hadn't been properly done. The lad grabbed a fork and with a lusty heave sent the refuse flying in the direction of a pile at the corner of the stables.

His zest for cleanliness was unfortunate—for at that moment the little officer, minced around the corner in time to receive the forkful of flying debris.

Stable Sergeant Nelson smothered a laugh when he saw what happened and ran hastily toward Mueller who, unconscious of impending disaster, had put away the fork and was adding a final polish to one of his teams.

"What in the blankety blank, double asterisked—do you mean—you—" sputtered the little officer, dancing around like an enraged bantam rooster and shaking a riding crop under the astonished Mueller's nose.

Mueller stared at the Lieutenant stupidly, then noticing some of the damp straw hanging from one of the officer's shoulder bars, his mouth widened into an apologetic grin.

"I'll show you!" gritted Smythe and before Sergt. Nelson could interfere he slashed savagely at Mueller with his riding crop, striking the big fellow across the shoulders.

It did not astound Mueller's cheeks his lips became a writhing, white scar, and his right hand clinched into a ham-like fist.

"Here—none of that—" and the sergeant's hasty thrust his big frame between the raging Mueller and the little officer. "Go to your quarters, Mueller," he ordered sharply.

Sullenly, the big fellow turned and tramped toward the barracks. The sergeant faced his superior officer. "Sir, it is against army regulations for an officer to strike an enlisted man," he cautioned evenly.

"I'll court-martial that man!" spluttered Smythe.

"It'll let the matter rest, sir. Mueller didn't do it purposely."

"Don't you dictate to me. I'll report you for insubordination," raved Smythe.

"Very well, sir," the stable sergeant saluted and returned to his duties.

Smythe reported the matter to Orpington-McDonald, but found his superior unsympathetic—although Mueller was given a week of kitchen police as a necessary emphasis of discipline. Mueller meekly scrubbed greasy pans and peeled potatoes for the mess sergeant but whenever Smythe passed there was a look in his big fellow's eye that made the officer uncomfortable.

One evening Smythe was returning from the small village near camp when he found a blocky figure barring his path. Smythe had been drinking—which only inflamed his sense of self importance.

"Out of my way, you," he ordered.

The two men had met in front of a saloon. Mueller ate the barracks and the next moment the little officer was picked up by his antagonist and plunged into the trough, dipped up and down several times, then released.

By the time Smythe had climbed out of the trough there was no one in sight, but the officer immediately went to the barracks where Mueller was billeted.

The lieutenant out a sorry figure as he burst into the long, low building where Mueller was quartered. There were some repressed snickers from the men when they saw Smythe's condition and someone called "attention."

Smythe jolsted a shaking finger at Mueller. "Arrest that man."

No one moved. "What's wrong, son?" inquired a sergeant.

"He threw me into the watering trough. Arrest him!"

But Mueller hasn't been out of the barracks all of this evening. He's been playing blackjack with us, sir," explained one of the men.

If what one says is true, Lieutenant, Mueller's uniform would be wet around the sleeves," decided the sergeant, "and Mueller, let the lieutenant look you over."

The big fellow stepped toward the officer and turned his hands. The blouse sleeves were perfectly dry. Smythe blinked in amazement. "Arrest him anyway," he ordered.

"You've been drinking, sir," bluntly stated the sergeant. "If you insist upon Mueller's arrest, I'll report your drunkenness to the captain. I have enough witnesses here to prove Mueller's innocence."

"I might have been mistaken," reluctantly acknowledged Smythe and with a final glare at the resolute sergeant, he left the barracks.

"Why should he think that you gave him a ducking, Dutchy?" puzzled the sergeant and left the room to report matters to the captain.

A few minutes later the door opened and another man entered—an exact duplicate of Mueller. And the newcomer's sleeves were wet at the wrists.

"I'll be—" gasped one of the men in amazement. "Dutchy has a twin brother. I'll tell the world he's got an alibi. Neiter hide that wet blouse. And fi was your twin in here with us all of the time."

Mueller grinned as he pulled off his damp blouse. "Don't squeal, fellers. And Fritz, here has been away from his outfit on a furlough—and will leave right away to go back to his company."

"Girl Unafraid" By Gladys Johnson

Down in the city the affair created a large ripple of excited gossip. The Spy acted upon it eagerly and carried an insinuating article bristling with innuendos.

Cecile was furious with anger. She did not love Ken but she had no intention that another woman should have him. She put on the role of the outraged wife and quite sharpened her tongue.

"That is the woman who ruined my married life!" she raved dramatically, her green-blue eyes flashing hatred. "Ken has been carrying on this affair all these years—that is really why I left him."

From lip to lip it went, repeated avidly, hurting those who knew Cecile,—Hurting loyal Tom and Mary; making little Ah Ling's black eyes flash with rage.

Ah Ling—that curious link in the chain of circumstances. The link Cecile had never considered. Cecile had forgotten,too, that when a link is worn too thin it will snap.

Upon Tom had fallen the task of closing the shop and selling the stock which still remained.

The small store was haunted with memories for him. Memories of quiet evenings when he had called on Ardeth, remembering the sunlight on her hair that first day when she had bought the shop from Jeanette. The memory of that first day when he had come in here with Kegs-ang had seen for an officer to strike an enlisted man," he cautioned evenly. for an officer to strike an enlisted Ken's that night. Mr. Ordell?"

"Right as rain!"

"And——" the girl went on breathlessly, "Mrs. Gleason is bad at heart and Miss Carroll is always kind. It is not good that the good should suffer for the bad. And I am telling this to you because you will know what to do. Yes, I am sure you will, Mr. Corbett. And if you make him, my Cousin Lee, he will have to tell the truth—though he will be very very angry at me. But I'm doing it for Miss Carroll. I don't care, if it will help her——"

Ah Ling had begun to cry. She pulled her beret hard down on her head and groped her way out of the front door.

Tom was overwemined by the knowledge so astonishingly handed to him. Mrs. Gleason had been hating both Cecile and Cyril Underhill. In his fancy he was crashing his fist full into the smirking face of Cyril Underhill. But his usual cool judgment quickly followed on the heels of this. Wouldn't waiting for the right moment be the thing into the daily papers .....That wouldn't be so clever. Ah Ling had placed a powerful weapon in his hands. He must use it to the best advantage when he struck for Ardeth.

A few moments of deep thought, then Tom put on his hat and left, locking the front door of the little shop.

APRIL ESCAPADE

BY KATHLEEN NORRIS

She turned to face the others in the kitchen: her shoulder almost touching Chris as she leaned back against him, his hand, that had been holding hers, still gripping her fingers and his arm half about her. And I" was as if, standing there, she measured two worlds—the one against the other.

On one side was only this protecting arm and this gripping hand, She knew little more of him.

And on the other were all the associations that she knew, were all her happy, adored, protected years. The kitchen, with its worn linoleum and familiar frying pans and chairs and oil-cloth-covered table. Mark, handsome and resolute and fiercely protecting; Tom, who was developing so rapidly now, who had come, just of late, so much more close to his older sister, who had seemed, just of late to need her. Cass, clever and successful and married, planning a happy normal life with her——a forty-dollar flat, curtains, dishes a white wedding in the new Dominion Church in few weeks' time, years of love and labor shared, children, some day, a country house.

And last, and first, and all the time Mother. Mother, with whom she hurried, sleepy and chilly, to early church and with whom she walked home, at peace for hot coffee and special Sunday rolls. Mother, who had taught her talked to her; scolded her, praised her, all her life long, even while she fumbled in her flat purse for movie money for "Mart and Mary Kate" or patiently thumped the heavy iron that meant exquisitely fresh frills and blouses for the beloved eldest daughter.

To choose Chris meant no more kitchen, no more Cass, no more Tom, —and in the dear home scene, at least, no more eager ambitious, handstrong Mary.

To choose, that she chose exile, alien exile, distance. It meant no more Mother.

CHAPTER XI.

That's a strange thing to hear you say, Mr. Stetyen," Mrs. O'Hara said, in the hush.

"I know it," Chris agreed, with a brief laugh.

Mary Kate continued to stand perfectly still, her real bright eyes on the group in the kitchen, or watching Cass, and wondering Tom, and Mart in the big chair, with his two arms encircling and her mother, pensive and anxious and gentle, in the rocker. One of her hands had been locked in Chris' fingers, as she wheeled about and their grip held, so that her arm was twisted behind her, and her bright head, with its rings of disordered coppery hair, was close to Chris' big shoulder.

"She's only a little girl—" Mrs. O'Hara said, troubled. "I don't know did you mean to say that to her—" she added doubtfully.

"I didn't!" Chris admitted, unsmilingly. Mary Katie's eyes moved to his and read what they saw there, and went back to the circle again.

"I never thought of that!" the mother murmured. "Maybe he only said it because your brother—" She paused.

Martin was looking at Chris with keenly suspicious eyes, now he said, uncomfortably.

"You didn't have to say to Mary Kate for all me".

"You didn't make me say it," Christopher answered, promptly.

"I—I—you felt that way," Martin pursued in the puzzled silence that held them all, "you could have told her, herself. Not like that!"

"It never occured to me to tell her, herself," Chris answered again, with a faint, frowning scowl.

"Then—then you wouldn't feel he meant it, would you, Mary Kate?" Martin appealed, uneasily, to his sister.

Again her eyes moved swiftly to Christopher's, and again she did not speak continuing to measure the room with a rapid, curious, blinking girl look, rather tightening her hold upon Chris' hand, behind her, that she was drawn even more closely toward his shoulder.

The light from the single lamp, the green-shaded lamp underneath which the children did their evening homework, wavered softly in the clean, home ly kitchen. The clock above the sink tickled audibly, and the hot water faucet dripped a few intermittent drops upon the scoured sink. Above the drainboard a window was opened to the soft warm night; the curtain moved to and fro across the sill, the intruding air was sweet with spring.

People who prize the finer things of life usually demand Red Rose Orange Pekoe Tea. A money-back guarantee with every package.

"She's promised to Cass here," Mrs. O'Hara observed, with the little indicative gesture of a thumb.

"Many in," Chris said dispassionately.

Cass had thrown away his cigarette, and was sitting bae in his chair, with his arms crossed, and his shrewd kind, half-smiling young eyes fixed upon the girl. Now he said undisturbedly:

"But I'd never hold her. She knows that! She's as free now as if she had never known me."

At the sound of his voice Mary Kate disengaged herself from Christopher's hold, and crossed the kitchen to sit with Cass, occupied in the beginning of this incredible and dreamlike evening; the chair at the table, where she could cup her chin in her hands, and look at them all without moving a muscle.

"In normalness, the generosity of Cass" words, his untroubled manner and confident glance appeared to waken her from a trance.

"I don't think you're going to throw me over, are you, Mary Kate?" he asked. A sudden smile lighted her eyes and she answered, speaking for the first time since the strange tense scene began.

"Ah, no; you know I'd never do that." "We're hunting hares, and we're talking about a wedding, aren't we?" Cass asked, affectionately, smilingly.

"Sure—sure we are," she admitted, hurriedly, nervously.

Chris was standing near the door, his hands in the square big side pockets of his big coat. His head had fallen a little forward, his eyes moved from one speaker's face to another.

"You know I wouldn't hold you, whatever promise you might have made me, don't you, Mary Kate?" Cass asked.

"Oh, no," she answered, in her clear quick troubled voice. "I know you'd want me to do what I wanted to do—what I had to do."

"She'd be happier with one that knew her own air," Mrs. O'Hara said to Chris rather timidly, rather appealingly.

"I know she would!" Christopher admitted, not ceasing to frown faintly not moving his eyes from Mary Kate.

"And isn't it happiness that counts with all of us?" the mother pursued.

Christopher glanced at her, nodded briefly.

"Happiness counts with all of us," he echoed, in a decisive voice.

But still there was something unsaid, something unfinished.

"If you know her longer, you might want to marry Mary Kate," Martin began, with a reasoning air. "But—but you'd never seen each other this time a week ago."

"As for that," Chris answered, grimly "it never crossed my mind —even an hour ago, that—things are as they are!"

"Well, now you see?" Mrs. O'Hara concluded it, in satisfaction.

"She'd hardly have the right to tell you that she cared for someone else," Cass interposed, quietly.

"Certainly she would," Chris conceded.

"Whatever you'd have to offer her," Martin added, emboldened by Cass's courage, "it would be for her to decide. We—we have something to offer her, Cass!"

The girl made no attempt to speak She was like a person who hears a stranger discussed interestedly, not even resented. Her bright, serious eyes moved swiftly, her clean-cut chin was cupped in her two palms, her fingers resting lightly against her temples.

"We love her," Mrs. O'Hara said, looking at her, her tender Irish voice lo!.

It was half past nine o'clock Mary Kate thought that in a few minutes Chris would be gone and Mother would have changed her dress and returned to the vigil at Uncle Robert's and Tom would have jumbered to bed. Then she and Cass and Mart would sit on here in the kitchen, talking the whole thing over. After that they would escore the invalid carefully up stairs to bed, and establish him comfortably with his pillows and a book, and then she and Cass would come downstairs for a long talk, a sweetheart's talk in the big chair—

And to her Christopher Steynes would acon be a dream, and to Chris topher only a dream would be the memory of this hot small orderly kitchen, and these earnest simple amusing folk and this "red-headed girl, and Aunt before alcohol" April Uncle Robert would be dead, and Aunt Julia in a widow's veil like Ma's and Mart study ing in Germany, and Tom the male stay at home, and Mary Kate Kreiling expecting a baby—

She returned to the present. Chris, his hands in his side pockets, his head slightly hanging forward, was speaking to her brother.

"Believe me, I am as much surprised as you are, Mrs. O'Hara. I've liked girls, before. But I've never felt—this way."

"What way?" Cass demanded, levelly not sympathetically.

"That I couldn't help myself," Chris said, simply. "I've been driven—" he began. "I've been driven like someone possessed all these days. I've not slept or not eaten.

"Do you thing," he asked them all, "that I like it?"

"You couldn't blame Mary Kate for that," her mother defended her, in a slightly perplexed, a faintly hostile tone.

"Blame her!" he echoed. "Nobody blames her. But you can blame me!"

"You're a rich man, Mr. Steynes!" Mrs. O'Hara asked, considering him.

"I'm rich, yes."

"And your good father, your good mother—are they living?"

"My father lives in New York, he has an apartment there. My mother lives in Paris. They're divorced—they are both remarried. And now I think my mother is going to be divorced again."

"Oh, that's bad," Mrs. O'Hara commented, shaking her head, making a little clucking sound in her throat.

"I've got an apartment in the same building with my father. I've got a little place down in Maryland," the man said.

"She'd never fit into that life, you must see that," the older woman replied sorrowfully. "She'd not be happy in any such places."

"I don't think she fouldn't" Chris agreed, almost fiercely.

"And have you no faith at all?"

"Yes," he said. And he looked at her. "I have here," he added in a gentler tone. "I was brought up in it. It doesn't mean much to my people, but, I think it might to me."

"You don't think money, and furs, and travelling places, be still, Mart!" Mrs. O'Hara began again. "You don't think all that would make up to her for what she has here? She was a happy girl, two weeks ago, with a good husband before her and her future all safe. What could you give her, that'd pay her for what she'd throw away?"

"Nothing!" Chris said.

"There's not a day here," the mother continued. "Dont interrupt me, Mart!" she rebuked the boy again, as he would have spoken. "There's not a day in her life that she doesn't see twenty of her friends," Mrs. O'Hara went on "There's not a day that she isn't in a gale of laughin', so that you'd laugh to hear her, though you was lyin' dead There isn't a day that she doesn't do a thousand favors for me, or Tom, or Mart here, or one of the little ones.

"Perhaps," the wise, troubled voice continued, "she'd bring me home a handful of flowers, or a little red wreath, come winter. And it'd be, 'Oh, Mother will you make Miss White a little custard for her father, will you give me some of your soup for old Mr.. Bryan?"

"And then." said Mrs. O'Hara, in a dead silence, "perhaps she'll lean over one of them that's workin' on weekly theme, or doing a Thanksgivin' posier. "I've got a magazine in my room," she'll say, "that'll give you all the advertisements you'd use in a year!" "I'll hear you your lessons!" she'll say.

"It's she takes them to the movies, if my feet go back on me. She and I have breakfast, on that same table there every mornin' now that it's warm reads the news, and pourin' the coffee—"

She stopped . There was no sound in the kitchen.

"It would pierce me that she'd be far away from me," the mother resumed, very simply, after a pause. "It would break my heart that she'd not be married here, where they own people are, bring' her children—if the Saint let them—back home to her mother—"

Still silence. Cass and Mart and Tom watched Chris; they knew the power of this quiet voice. Mary Kate gave a little dry sob, bit her lip, the delicate flanges of her nostrils moving with a quick indrawn breath.

CHAPTER XI.I

"Mrs. O'Hara," Chris said, looking straight into her and friendless, in his big coat, "I wouldn't want her to be as —as unhappy as all that would make her. I see what you say—I see what you mean.

"It was only," he recommenced, clearing his throat, that I couldn't quite—let her know that——well, that it's this way with me. It was not anything I planned to do, or planned to do. until I was standing here, not until ten minutes ago, did it come to me what all this meant! It's not any thing I can argue about. I didn't want it to happen!"

"There was a strange sound in the kitchen. It was as if Mary Kate had heard a brief, exulting laugh. But it was so evanescent that when all their eyes turned toward her she betrayed no sign of mirth; her head was dropped, she had covered her face with her spread fingers.

"It might go as quick as it come," Mrs. O'Hara suggested tentatively.

"It might," Chris agreed.

And then where were she be," the mother argued. "With a rich husband that was tired of her?"

"That—" Chris said simply, looking at the girl, who had taken down her hands, and whose wide, serious gaze was turned upon him, "that would be Mary's risk."

"Good risk!" Cass contributed, drily.

"No. Not much!" Christopher answered in the same tone.

Mary Kate crossed her arms on the table" before her" and stared into space.

"She's the one to say, after all," her mother summarized it.

The girl roused herself from her dream, with a brief laugh.

"Why, Mother, she's aching to decide!" she said surprisingly. "It justis, isn't it? Like a broken leg, like an earthquake. If you—well, if you had a baby, you could not decided to go back suddenly could you, and not have one? If you were wrecked on a desert island, you couldn't just make up your mind to choose to be home again, safe and sound!"

"Exactly," Chris said.

She went over to him again to take her old position, her shoulder against his, his arm around her. "Suppose—" she began, "suppose!" she told them. "I know that all you say is true, I know that it isn't sensible. All the women of the world are beauty-parlor, bridge-playing sort. Who get divorces and drink cocktails and know all the restaurants in Paris. They'll despise me—his mother won't like me! But what of it?"

"Mary!" Martin pleaded 'think what you're saying! You're crazy. Don't let his money——"

"Oh, Mart, hush up! the girl commanded him, good-naturedly. 'You don't think it's his money? You know it's not! That'd be like saying that I'd sell you the girls and Pat and Tom for money!"

"Mary", Chris said, hoarsely and gently, seeing nothing but the blue eyes that she raised to his, as he clasped her hands together, and lifted them to his heart, "do you mean it? Will you take a chance?"

"I have to!" she whispered.

"And you're not afraid, dear?"

"Yes," she said, with the first flash of natural laughter, she had shown tonight. "Im horribly afraid! I know I'll make mistakes, I'll be snubbed—

"And after a few years, you may not love me any more than lots and lots of men love their wives after a few years—" he added, suddenly grave.

"I think this thing," she said, her fingers in a clutching pressure, over her heart, "this thing has got—to be quiet ed. It is like a pain!"

He dropped her hands, and turned toward her mother; he was on one knee, beside the older woman's chair.

"Mrs .O'Hara," he said, "may I have her?"

There was a long pause, and in it Cass Keating slipped quietly from the kitchen, without anyone noting his going.

"How we ! you know your own heart?" Mr. O'Hara said then, slowly ,dubiously. But she had laid one hand upon the big square shoulder of the coat, just the same. "How would she know here, and you and she strangers this fortnight a-gone?" she asked.

"I'll be very good to her, she'll be the most spoiled—the most loved woman in the world," Chris promised humbly.

"You'd say that now—" the mother said, not unkindly.

"But I mean it!" he peralsted.

"You're rich," Mrs. O'Hara mused, studying his face, with her keen eyes, "you have very much. You're rich, but there's other things but riches. How do I know that you're fit for a little girl like my Molly?"

"I know what you think of me," Chris answered, looking straight into her eyes, "and some of it's true. But not—the worst things. I've never wanted —girls, much. I'm idle. I play cards, and polo, and tennis and sail the tables at Monte Carlo—but the only woman who ever had a hold on me is——well, Mary not her! And she isn't afraid of the Countess Marka."

Suddenly Mrs. O'Hara's face quivered, and her eyes brimmed with tears.

"It'd be what Mary Kate wanted, in the long last!' she said, unsteadily. She got up and went into the bedroom that adjoind the kitchen.

Tom kissed his sister, laughed a raw, bewildered laugh, lumbered on his own way to bed.

"Don't you cire, Molly!" he said.

"It's the darndest break I ever saw!" Martin commented, from his chair. He gripped the chair-arm with his right hand, got to his feet, balancing himself carefully, because of the wounded arm. "I'm going in to talk to Mother," he explained.

Mary Kate, her sapphire eyes starry, was standing by the sink, watching the emptying water in a child watches a Christmas Tree.

"Mother'll be all right," Martin predicted.

"Oh, yes, she'll be all right!" Mary Kate whispered back.'

"She worried about Uncle Robert. Wouldnt you know he'd choose Holy Week to die in!" Martin commented.

"Wouldn't you know it!"

But in her aching heart she thought 'It doesn't matter what Uncle Robert does now, or whether Regina wites her composition, or Leuuhan has a grocery sale .It doesn' matter whether the Geary Street car is crowded or not, on a week-day morning. The rents of the new aggitments don't matter to me any more. And my best slippers with the loose heel I was going to have fixed and mother's new mesh chopper, and being in the play of the Church Dramatic Club —all gone! All gone!"

She and Chris were alone in the kitchen.

"Do you think it's the darndest break you ever saw, too, Mary?" Chris asked.

"I'm a little —scared," she admitted with a laugh.

Fashionably Speaking

By Lucille

DEAR READERS:

Are you one of the many who simply long for a slim figure and sometimes wonder how some of the girls attain slimness without any apparent trouble? And not just as much a "not more than you do meanwhile. How nice to be such a lucky mortal you sigh as you watch them. Well take it from me, dear reader, and feel encouraged when I say that a good many people who appear to be favorites of fortune in this respect really stay slim because of their exercise and control of diet.

Of course most of them do not exercise much, and these you will find inevitably cut down on their food, while others who love to eat, perform "daily dozens" hidden away in the privacy of their own rooms, and the world is none the wiser and marvels at their nice figures. All of them, must, if they want the bathroom scales to register correctly, either curb their appetite or exercise. Most of the people who carry around excess weight eat altogether too much. Their love of rich food overcomes their good sense and they habitually eat more than is good for them. You cannot eat cake, pie, rich desserts, chocolates, and puddings without suffering for it. You do not have to do without the above delicacies entirely. Not at all, what you must learn to do is to control your appetite and take them in very small quantities and not at every meal.

To develop this habit and stick to it day in and day out requires a little blackbone and a certain philosophy as well as a certain knowledge. You must learn to enjoy the taste of delicious foods without feeling impelled to consume them in large quantities. You must also cultivate a manner which shows enjoyment of good food, and express regret but not too much agony when the small amounts you eat are not the limit of your desire. Keep the calorie foods in mind and make sure that each is taken some time during the day, the rest of the diet can be cut as low as weight control requires.

One pint of milk, to drink or in cooking, either whole or skimmed.

Two servings of fruit, at least one being raw and one green.

Two servings of vegetables at least one being raw and one green.

One egg.

One serving of meat, fish, egg or cheese.

One small potato.

One teaspoon of codliver oil, for Vitamins A and D when butter is cut down.

Iodized salt or other source of iodin if simple goiter is common in the vicinity.

To live on these foods and nothing else is possible and permissible, unless it causes a loss in weight of more than two pounds a week. If you lose more than that, or when you have reached your normal weight, it will be your pleasant duty to add some (but not too much) of whatever food you long for most.

Fashionably yours

"LUCILLE."

Today's Poem

THE UNKNOWN GOD

Far up the dim twilight fluttered
Moth-wings of vapour and flame:
The lights danced over the mountains,
Star after star they came.

The lights grew thicker unheeded,
Fir silent and still were we;
Our hearts were drunk with a beauty
Our eyes could never see.

THE BEAUTY BOX

Women's feet are getting bigger and better. Time was when the girl who wore a triple A felt that she had attained some kind of social distinction. Her shoes was shaped liked a miniature ski, and she took pride in regarding its silverine proportions. Wemen are showing judgement in the selections of shoes, getting them of ample width as well as ample length. Unless the toes can wiggle freely, a shoe is too small. Tight shoes produce wrinkles, ugly faces, ugly tempers ,backache and headache. Maybe divorces, sudden death and murder.

Who knows?

Orris root, powdered, is the common medium for the dry shampoo, although the new notion is to combine it, equal parts, with kaolin, a form of Fuller's earth. Both these substances absorb grease and dirt. They are applied with a salt shaker, and are removed by brushing. There should be a final brushing with absorbent cotton placed over the bristles of the brush. No dry shampoo works well on very dark hair; it leaves a dull grey surface no matter how thorough the brushing may be.

The sun's rays are invigorating to the physical system, but they raise the dickens with the texture and delicacy of the complexion. Let us hope that the sun-tanners will take their sunrings slowly, oiling the skin carefully after exposure to the burning beams. Repeated tanning thickens the skin.

Women who have normal, well-developed legs, arms and torso, and shoulders that are narrow usually are inferior breathers. The chest is pretty much of our own making. Correct posture, holding the head regally, letting the full range through all the channels of the lungs, will produce chest development. These habits add to the perfect lines of the silhouette.

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beekman

A FAREWELL PARTY

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1. Seven women and myself meet every two weeks at our own homes and play bridge, after which simple luncheon is served. Will it be proper (when I am hostess) to announce that I am going on a trip, to be away about four months?

2. Would you suggest that I have a separate farewell party, at the same time inviting several other friends, or are these farewell parties given by relatives or friends?

3. I expect to go East and will probably be entertained at many bridge luncheons. Would it be correct to "return" these affairs by giving one big luncheon and bridge at a fashionable hotel or club, and inviting all my friends who entertained me during my visit in that city?

4. Is it necessary for me to take gifts from here to my friends in the East? I have been very friendly with some of these women I expect to see, but have never exchanged gifts and don't want to start now.

Yes, this will be a correct thing to do.

2. You could, with perfect form and taste, give a farewell party. It is not at all necessary for these parties to be given by friends or relatives. You may have at your party, only the club of which you speak, or you may, for this occasion, invite a larger group.

3. Yes, this is a perfect form of hospitality and is very often done. And it is a charming gesture of friendliness to make.

4. There is no reason why you should take gifts to these friends. If you give the "return-for-hospitality" party you will suggest your well-placed friendliness. Then, if you wish to make even more of a social gesture, it is an excellent plan to leave orders with the local florists for him to send a box of flowers, or a corsage, to the friends in the city in which you are visiting. This will be a beautiful way of sending messengers of your appreciation of their friendliness and hospitality.

Fashion Fancies

THE CAPE RECEIVES NEW TREATMENT.

Nobody knew or realized until this season how many varieties of the cape coat could be designed. Couturiers this Spring have used in presenting new treatments of the coat.

The all-around hip-length cape is always smart and is with us once again. A newer version is the sleeve cape, which is placed on each side and comes not quite to the elbow. Short detachable capes are introduced and have found great popularity, for they may be disp-ned with entirely if one feels so disposed.

The model sketched above shows still another treatment of the cape. This seems to have started out with the idea of being an all-around cape, leaving changed its mind, it is divided in the middle and has its edges effectively edged in black galyak. A soft cushioned collar of the galyak is set in to resemble a yoke. The coat is developed on straight lines of black kidskin cloth and is belted at the normal waistline.

Cure Your Nerves First

Then Tackle Children's

By Constance Cameron

A mother asked me a few days ago how to "cure" her nervous child. I replied: "First, cure yourself." She doesn't like me so well now.

But I meant it in all sincerity. It has been my observation that where you find a nervous child you will invariably find a nervous, fussy mother.

They are usually conscientious mothers—too conscientious for their own good and the good of the child. They worry over the child's bad intake of food. They coax and threaten and scold to get food down. They discuss the so-called "nervousness" in the presence of the child—and a child is human. If "nervousness" is going to keep him as the chief topic of conversation, he will play it up, of course. We all have little individual tricks with which we call attention to ourselves, and this is one of the most overlooked ones I know of.

What most children need more than anything on earth is peace, a sense of harmony and quiet in the home, a sense of security. They need opportunities to begin and finish play projects without interruption, without nagging about "messing" up the house, without hints of possible breakage. A play place of their very own will solve this difficulty as a rule.

Children are, in a sense, extremely psychic. You will find that on a day when you are rushed, impetuous, when you drop things, when life seems about three leaps ahead of you, that that will be the day when Sonny will "blow up," too.

Fussiness, precipitate activity is most communicable, even to the adults about you. Therefore it behooves the mother of the so-called "nervous" child to take stock of herself, to see if her sense of values is straight, if too much importance hasn't been placed on unimportant things.

Another cause of "nervousness" in children often lies with the parent who does all the child's thinking for him. This parent hates to permit the child to lead his own life, either trying to mold him into a small adult with adult concerns, or trying to too rigidly guide his childish activities.

A child doesn't have to become a "toddler" before he can show signs of nervousness. You can teach it to him in his cradle if you are not extremely careful.

Cure yourself! When you are serene and calm you will find that your child will take things calmly, too.

MAGIC BAKING POWDER

The kind that 3 out of every 4* Canadian housewives, who bake at home, say they use because it gives consistently better baking results.

*This fact was revealed in a recent Dominion-wide investigation.

Recipe for Oatmeal Macaroons

1 tablespoon butter
1 cup white sugar
1 egg
½ teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons Magic Baking Powder
1 teaspoon vanilla
2½ cups rolled oats

Rub together butter, sugar, rolled oats, salt and baking powder, then drop in the egg unbeaten, add vanilla, mix well with wooden spoon. Drop mixture about the size of a hazelnut in buttered pans and bake 10 to 15 minutes.

Look for this trade mark on every tin. It guarantees that Magic Baking Powder is pure and of the highest quality.

AIR RAID MADE ON HAJI SUNDAY

Indian Army is Reported By Commander as Entirely Loyal

London, May 13 (CP)—A British aeroplane raid was made yesterday against forces of the Haji of Turangzai on the northwestern frontier of India, Rt. Hon. Wedgwood Benn, Secretary of State for India, announced in the House of Commons today.

Benn said there was no evidence communist agents had been responsible for the recent disturbances, though red emigins and other regalia were used. He added that Sir William Birdwood, British Commander-in-Chief in India was satisfied the Indian army was entirely loyal.

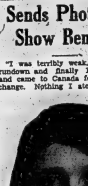
The result of the air raid, he said, was yet unknown. This action, he said became necessary when the Haji in Gujerat district, had the nerve to leave the area by blocking the high-roads with fallen trees.

RADIO FANS CORNER

Reception wasn't so good last night. Oh it was clear enough all right, nothing wrong with that end of it, but somehow we aren't just getting the range of stations we used to and with the warmer weather coming on it is highly improbable that we'll have any good reception to speak of now.

Did you ever hear anything funnier than our darkiown friends Agon-'n' Andy last night? Getting better now aren't they? For awhile back things sort of dragged. Last night's episode faded out before Andy received a letter marked Jackson, Jackson, Jackson and Jackson' and Amos started "Awn, awn!" It's too bad that so many fans are deprived of this former program because coming as it does now at six many people of the business world fail to hear it. Too bad, what can be done about it though?

Lew White in an organ recital over CKGW and WJZ chain at 6.35 today. Next on the list are trying to tune in do you? Everybody knows it. Lew White is some organist.



Over WEAF tonight the first program we'll look for will be at 7.30 E.S.T. of course when the Flatbush Frolic will come on the air. That means Coon-Sanders orchestra you know fans. Great music.

Late at 8.30 E.S.T. the Happy Wonder Bakers with Jack Parker, tenor, vocal trio and an orchestra under the direction of Frank Black.

At 9.30 E.S.T. and still on the WEAF chain the Radio KEO hour make its appearance with such headliners as Ewan and Mayor, Cronin and Hart, Peter Higgins, Margaret Schilling and Corinne Tilton. Graham McNamee announcing.

Mardi Gras proceedings over WABC tonight at 8 E.S.T. and they are featuring Conway Rogers stage and screen star also Freddie Rich's orchestra, male chorus and Chick Endor and double mixed quartet.

MRS. J. BEAN

"I was terribly weak, nervous and rundown and finally I left England and came to Canada for a complete change. Nothing I ate agreed with me, I seldom slept more than a few hours at night and felt perfectly miserable day and night too. Then I started Sargon. I've gained ten pounds in weight, I am eating breakfasts for the first time in 10 years, and never have a trace of indigestion. I am full of new strength and energy and am going to send my photograph back so my family can see what a marvelous change this medicine made in me.

Handkerchief Shower

A unique handkerchief shower was tendered Miss Dorothy Alger on Thursday, May 1st on the eve of her marriage to Mr. John Villeneu, by Mrs. P. C. McGuire, first three tables of bridge was played, Miss Alger winning the prize, a lovely handkerchief fold and she also won as a special gift prize a lingerie fold which matched the handkerchief fold.

Then Mrs. (Dr.) Potts dressed as a bride and Mrs. A. E. Dobbie as a groom entered the living room to the wedding march sung by the entire company. On the way a satchel carried by the "groom" fell open displaying clothing worn by the bride of sixty years ago. They presented the bride-elect an old-fashioned bouquet composed of handkerchiefs of various hues. A very enjoyable time was spent.

Mr. Geo. E. Kennedy, B. A. of Colborne, formerly of the Stirling high school staff is dangerously ill from a complication of troubles. His daughters Mrs. Thos. Eggleton of Stirling, Misses Mae and Kate of Regina were called to his bedside last week and his son Leslie of Regina has also been sent for and is on his way home.

Mrs. R. A. Parent of the Ridge Road is seriously ill and under the doctor's care.

Mrs. John Wallace who lives north of the village is very ill with erysipelas though on the way to recovery.

Mr. William Wallace is still in King ston General Hospital where he underwent an operation for a tumor, but he too has taken a turn for the better.

Reeve Montgomery is still in bed and apparently making slow progress toward recovery

Councillor L. Meikle John who was confined to bed for a few days is able to be in the shop again.

Mr. Ernest Jeffs is doing very well and expects to return home Saturday evening, May 15th.

Mesdames A. Wadsworth, Fred Harrison and Frank Johnston of Prarie ford paid Mrs. Hugh Morton an afternoon call on Friday. Many can describe.

Miss Edna Delaney and brother Joe have returned from Detroit where they spent the winter with their sisters

Friends sympathize Dorothy Morton on being successful in passing very creditably all her second year examinations at Trent School. She passed her first year exams, Allan Meikle-John who was "capped" last Wednesday and won his degree for the degree of B.A., Mr. J. B. Hough also getting his B. A. All these were students of Queen's University.

Dust Causes Asthma. Even a little speck too small to see will lead to agonies which no words can describe. The walls of the breathing tubes contract and it seems as if the very life must pass. From this condition Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Asthma Remedy brings her to perfect rest. It relieves the passages and normal breathing is firmly established again. Hundreds of testimonials received annually prove its effectiveness.

Your Breakfast Shot from Guns

so you don't have to cook it

Read how this amazing invention gives Puffed Grains the virtual nourishment of hot cooked cereals.

WHEN Professor Anderson found the way to shoot wheat and rice grains from guns he solved an important problem. He gave these crisp, delicious, ready-to-eat cereals the virtual nourishment of hot cooked cereals.

Every grain of wheat and rice contains 125 million food cells. Every food cell must be broken before the grain can be completely digestible. It takes long hours of cooking to do this. But Professor Anderson found a better way. He seals grains of wheat and rice in bronze guns. Revolves them in fiery ovens. Then fires the guns. This causes 125 million explosions in every grain. It blasts open every tiny food cell. Puffed Wheat and Puffed Rice are thus made completely digestible. Hence practically as nourishing as hot cooked cereals.

The grains become 8 times normal size. They have all the buttery crunchiness of fresh toast. They are made to taste like sweet new nut-meats. Never before was rich grain nourishment made so delectably good to eat.

You owe it to your family to give them this extra delicious grain food that tastes like nut goodies. Order Puffed Wheat and Puffed Rice from your grocer today. The Quaker Oats Company.

A small brown bird flew from a vine,
And acted lightly on the ground;
I ran so fast to pick it up—
A leaf was all I found!

Today I saw a leaf drift down
Upon the snow—it never stirred—
But when I got right close to it,
It flew away a bird!

She Was Troubled With Pains Across The Back

Now Brunswick Lady Relieved By Taking Dodd's Kidney Pills

Mrs. Edward Kneede Speaks Highly of Canada's Leading Kidney Remedy

St. John, N B., May 13 (Special)—"I was advised to use Dodd's Kidney Pills for my kidnty trouble," writes Mrs. Edward Kneede, 92 Durham St., St. John, N.B. "I was troubled with pains across the back and after taking Dodd's Kidney Pills I found great relief. I had heard my friends speak about them. They are a good pill."

Dodd's Kidney Pills hold their popularity not because of the promises they make, but because of the good they do.

Dodd's Kidney Pills are purely and simply a kidney remedy. They strengthen the kidneys so they can do their full work of straining the impurities out of the blood.

Pure blood nourving through, the body carries to the different organs the nourishment they need to keep them sound and healthy.

Dodd's Kidney Pills can be obtained from all druggists, or The Dodds Medicine Co., Ltd., Toronto 5, Ont.

Strong Hand of Martial Law at Sholapur

FAST MOVE BY BRITISH AUTHORITY

City of Sholapur Takes Deserted Appearance Under Military Law.

Bombay, May 14 (CP)—The Government moved fast today in suppressing the activities of the Hindu Nationalists. The strong hand of martial law was clamped tight over Sholapur, where insurgents had gained control for a brief time. Hundreds of arrests were carried out at various points. Raid on the Shiroda Salt depot was stopped and prevention were taken against a threatened raid on Dharasana salt depot.

Troops of the Royal Dheer rifles were combing the city of sholapur today. More than two hundred natives where arrested under the curfew law and other ordinances. Suspected ring leaders were detained and among these authorities thought they had two men implicated in the murder of policemen last week, Naiyo "self government" raised in the face of reinforced authority and with full martial law the city took a deserted appearance many inhabitants were leaving. Mrs. Sarojini Naidu, new leader of the resistance movement, planned her raid on the Dharasan depot for tomorrow. The government put into force an order prohibiting the carrying of weapons and the assembly of more than four persons.

Rain Benefit is Felt Throughout District

Last night's slight rainfall will greatly benefit the farming district around the city although the land on the whole has sufficient moisture to last for some time. A strong wind which developed into a miniature cyclone preceded the rain, but no damage has been reported in this vicinity. The weather which for the past two weeks has been bright and warm changed yesterday. The temperature taken at the pumphouse today shows a decided change from that of last week which registered 81 points above zero. Today the temperature was 65-54 as compared with 76-56 of yesterday. Apple blossom time has arrived, well ahead of the schedule. It is usually about May 20th before the apple trees are in full bloom around this district. The first lilacs were noticed in the city yesterday on the west hill. In a very few days these lovely blooms will be out in profusion.

Rain resumed late this morning and the fall though not heavy was steady.

LIBERALS OF PRINCE EDWARD CHOOSE BENSON

Only Nominee Made at Convention Held at Picton Today

WELLINGTON NAMED

W. H. Benson Accepts Nomination as Federal Candidate

William H. Benson, president of the Liberal Association for Prince Edward County, was the unanimous choice of the Liberal convention held this after noon in Picton, there being no other names proposed. Mr. Benson will contest the riding of Prince Edward-Lennox in the Liberal interest against a straight conservative yet to be nominated. Delegates from all parts of the riding were present at the convention, the meeting being presided over by the liberal standard bearer as president of the Association.

Senator Hoey yesterday appointed Speaker of the Senate and Senator Horsey were to have spoken at the meeting but were unable to attend through official duties but J. T. Thorson, K.C., Liberal member for Winnipeg South Centre addressed the gathering in a forceful manner. Other speakers were local stalwarts of the party all supporting the nomination and shaking themselves behind the King Government.

Native Speaks

Mr. Benson was born in Wellington 58 years ago and has resided in the county of Prince Edward all his life. He was educated in the public and high schools of Wellington and after serving his apprenticeship in a drug store graduated from the School of Pharmacy in Toronto and then conducted a drug store in Picton for some years. Severing his connection with the profession he entered the canning industry and today is the owner and manager of the Benson Canning Company with factories in Picton, Bloomfield, and Wellington. Mr. Benson is well known and highly respected, in the community.

Entrance Classes Visit Vocational School, See Students at Work

Victoria School Pupils Are First to Make Inspection

The entrance classes of the four public schools and the separate school of this city will take turns beginning this morning in going to the Belleville Collegiate Institute and Vocational School and inspecting the vocational forms while at work. These visits will be supervised by teachers from the various schools and have been introduced for the purpose of giving entrance pupils the opportunity to decide whether or not they wish to take these courses when they enter the Collegiate next September.

Queen Victoria School pupils were the first to visit the Collegiate and spent all morning beginning at nine o'clock in viewing the various departments, including woodworking, carpentry, mechanical, household science, dressmaking and millinery. Tomorrow morning at 9 a.m., St. Michael's school will visit the Collegiate; on Friday, Queen Alexandra at 1.30; on Monday at 9 a.m., St. Michael's, and on Tuesday at 1.30, King George.

MRS. WM. BEARE FELL ON STAIRWAY

Mrs. William Beare, residing on Lingham Street, was today the victim of a painful accident as she was descending the stairway of the Belleville Conservatory of Music, Front Street. While still near the top of the long flight of stairs Mrs. Beare lost her footing and fell heavily, landing at the foot of the stairs near the Front Street entrance. She was quickly picked up and given assistance by passing citizens. Mrs. Beare was badly shaken up, but miraculously escaped any serious injury, which is remarkable judging from the length of the fall. After resting for a few minutes she was able to walk home.

IS ARCHITECT ON $7,000,000 SKYSCRAPER

Mr. Alfred J. S. Hollon of New York City, has been a visitor at the Hotel Quinte during the past 24 hours. A member of the firm of Clinton and Russell, architects of New York City. The N.Y. Times of New York City shows a design of the new Doherty skyscraper which is now under construction on Pearl Street, between Pine and Cedar streets, New York, for which this firm drew the plans. The estimated cost of this 63-storey building is $7,000,000.00.

Mr. Holton has been the architect for many office buildings in New York City during the past 25 years. A novel feature of this new building will be double-deck elevators, which will take on and discharge passengers of two floors at the same time. This will be the first use of this type of elevators. Escalators will also be used for serving the first seven floors. This new building will be topped by a tower 30 floors in height.

TWO YEARS LESS DAY TERM GIVEN BELLEVILLE MAN

Albert Reid, Bread Salesman Was Sentenced by Judge Deroche

COURT'S VIEW

Salesman If Honest Could Keep Accurate Record

Albert Reid, former salesman for the Shoulda Bread Company of Trenton appeared today before Judge Deroche in County Court for argument and sentence. A charge of theft of $611.00 from the company has been before the court for some weeks and a mass of evidence was taken. Judge Deroche after listening to argument by E. J. Butler, K.C., his counsel and B. C. Donnan as crown prosecutor found Reid guilty of the offence and sentenced him to the Ontario Reformatory for two years less one day determinate. As the sentence was passed Reid slumped in the prisoner's dock and wept profusely. Many of his immediate relatives were in court after court adjourned and hastened across the court room to grasp his hand. Warden Ketcheson allowed all to hit him good bye before he was led to the cells below to be taken to Guelph to start his sentence.

Judge Deroche in summing up the cast stated he was quite convinced that Reid had appropriated money collected by him for the company to his own use. His Honor explained the method of book-keeping employed by the salesmen of the company as told in court and said he was sure that all the handwriting in the cash book was Reid's or that permission had been given by Reid to have the figures put in. The accused claim for shortage cannot be allowed for he has been given ample credit for all that he claims. Receipts given to several customers by Reid and not entered in the cash book are against his honesty. "You are a young man," said Judge Deroche, "and the way of the transgressor is hard but you will have a chance to make amends. I do not think the method of handling the bread was the best that could be obtained by the company but the act of books answered the needs and a salesman, if honest, could keep an accurate record of his transactions. I will not send you to the penitentiary to harden you and you may yet become a useful citizen."

NEEDLE CAUSED SERIOUS WOUND

Mrs. W. H. Williams Injured By Needle Pinned In Washing

Mrs. W. H. Williams, Pinnacle street, suffered a painful accident at her home yesterday while doing the family washing. A large needle which was pinned to some of the clothing she was washing ran through her hand to such a depth that it was almost concealed. Dr. J. J. Robertson was called and rendered first aid. It was found necessary to give the victim an anaesthetic before the needle could be removed. She is now resting comfortably.

Finger Injured

A slight accident occurred to Mr. Fred Hyal, assistant chef at the Hotel Quinte, yesterday afternoon, while about his duties. He suffered a bodily cut finger and several stitches had to be taken to close the wound. The man received first aid at Dr. Robertson's office.

THE BULLETIN BOARD
Mainly About People You Know

NEW CADDY HOUSE

A new caddy house has been built at the New Toronto Country Club. It is situated just to the south and east of the first tee. This will be a great advantage to the players who will be able to secure their tees and balls from the professional, Sam French, at any convenient period. The course has come along rapidly with this fine weather and the temporary greens have been abolished for the permanent ones. Many trees have been planted and they help greatly in making the course more interesting to the golfer. Trees that have no leaves such as spruce and fir are particularly good for this purpose. They are attractive and in the fall there is no trouble with leaves blowing across the fairways.

LAWN BOWLER SORGANIZE

Tonight the organization and annual meeting of the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club will be held in the clubrooms on William street and an extensive programme for the coming year will be outlined at the gathering. Charles N. Sulman is the present president of the club and he is of the opinion that next will a more successful year be held by the bowlers than this season. The greens will soon be in shape and if the present weather continues bowling should soon get under way.

B.O.I. CAMPUS

Work which has been going on for the past ten days at the Collegiate Campus is today nearing completion. The large campus now presents a perfect, smooth surface, and in a short time the grass which has been planted will give it an attractive green finish. The pupils have co-operated in a splendid manner and no trouble has been experienced in keeping them off the campus while the work has been going on. Their further help will be needed while the grass is growing. The first green down made it's appearance this morning after last night's rain on the ground directly in front of the Collegiate. This was seeded first, the rest of the campus will follow suit in the next few days.

CADET CORPS BUSY

Officers commanding the cadet corps of the public schools and the collegiate institute in the city are busily engaged preparing the corps for the forthcoming inspection on May 28th, Commander Howard told the press today. In the morning, the high school cadets will be inspected and in the afternoon the public school boys. Although it is not certain yet, it is expected that General Anderson, commanding officer of this district will conduct the inspection. In past years the ceremony has been held on the collegiate campus, but this year, due to seeding, the city playgrounds at the corner of Bleecker and Bridge streets will be the scene of the inspection.

ENTERTAINS AT CROWE LAKE

This afternoon the managers of the five banks represented by branches in this city left for Crowe Lake, where they were guests of W. A. Parker, manager of the Royal Bank of Canada, who has a cottage there. The regular monthly meeting of the managers was held. Supper will be served this evening, although the bankers will not remain at the lake overnight. This is the first time that such a gathering has been held in such a manner.

SUPREME CHIEF RANGER HERE

Court Moira, Independent Order of Foresters, will hold an important meeting this evening when George A. Mitchell, Assistant Supreme Chief Ranger, will be the main speaker of the evening. As well, other important speakers will address the gathering. It is expected that a large attendance will be on hand.

HORSESHOE PITCHING

Horseshoe pitching promises to be one of the major sports in Belleville this summer. Already the pitchers are in nearly perfect condition and it is hoped that a large number of memberships in "The Belleville Horseshoe Pitching Club" will be sold. The old game of Barnyard Golf has steadily increased in popularity and tournaments will be arranged this season.

ALBERT BACCALAURETATE

On June 8th the annual Baccalaureate service will be held at Albert College, when those young men who are going to step out into business life or going on to University will be given some sound advice by the Rev. Charles T. Scott, B.A. Queensdown Church, Hamilton, a former pastor of Bridge Street United Church. On Friday, June 13th, Convocation classes will be held in the chapel, in preparation for breaking up for the summer holidays. Rev. F. W. Wallace, the new Chancellor of Victoria University, Toronto, will be the special speaker on this occasion.

convention laid particular stress on the tariff and the record of the King administration and also the leadership of that administration in regard to national unity and international goodwill. He described the budget recently brought down in the House by Hon. A. C. Dunning as one for goodwill towards those countries willing to trade with us". He discussed fully the British preference as referred to in the budget and made it applicable to the riding in which he was speaking.

The member for Winnipeg South Centre was in the city today on his way to the convention in Picton and discussed with the Ontario Intelligencer, the possibilities of the coming election from a government standpoint. Mr. Thomason expressed the opinion that the government would be returned with probably the same standing as the present house. There are problems in Saskatchewan that will have to be adjusted but the Liberal party will have at least seven seats and probably ten. There will be gains in British Columbia and a possible gain in Prince Edward Island. Nova Scotia and New Brunswick will not effect the standing and there seats lost in some parts of Ontario will be picked up in others. Manitoba will reform an almost solid flank for Liberalism with two seats doubtful.

The Conservatives in Belleville Edward Lennox will hold their convention in the near future but the selection of a candidate will not be made until the ballots are counted. It is understood there are three prominent men in the running, they are Hon. Senator Hubbs, Brig.-Gen. Bernard Hepburn, a former M.P., and Fred Newman, former mayor of Picton. All these men have a large following.

The reduction was over a net revenue railway operation in 1929 as $38,817,700.

TRUCK CRASHES ON MURNEY HILL GRADE

A truck of the Forwarding Company of Toronto, hauling a trailer loaded with lawn mowers came to grief on the Murney Hill late last night and it was some hours before it was able to move away under its own power. The driver of the truck attempted to change his gears on the hill and the pavement being slippery and the brakes not holding the truck and trailer slipped down the hill and struck a tree between the homes of R. A. Backus and Dr. W. C. Morgan on Bridge St. West. The trailer went crosswise of the boulevard and became locked. It was necessary to unload the trailer and truck and with the help of a service truck from the Valleman garage, the trailer and truck was straightened on the road, the mowers loaded and without damage the van moved on its way to western points.

LEAVE FOR EUROPE

Mr. John Elliott, of Belleville, and Mr. Fred Newman, of Picton, leave tomorrow for London, England, where they will attend as delegates the annual convention of the Chambers of Commerce of the Empire. They will represent Canada as the conference and Mr. Elliott will also represent the Belleville Chamber of Commerce which has several resolutions upon the agenda.

Canadian Minstrel Hikers Make Way to Hollywood With Plea

Ask Canadian Folk Songs and Compositions For "Talkies"

Playing, singing and hiking their way through Canada, enroute to Hollywood from Montreal, Paul Le Vay and Harry Puckett arrived in Belleville early yesterday afternoon, after hiking from Napanee, leaving that town early in the morning. These two young men have a worthy purpose in life They are not just walking across Canada for the publicity they can get from the venture. They are endeavouring to induce the larger "talkie" producers in the "Enchanted City" to give Canadian compositions and Canadian folk songs a place to the talking picture of the future. Both men are enthusiastic over the tour and are convinced that they will be able to make a favourable impression on the "big shots" in the film industry and prove that Canada has a place with her music in the movies of the world. It is their intention to enlist the support of all the American picture producers to give Canadian musicians and composers an opportunity in the talking films.

Natilly clad in a blue uniform, the pair attracted considerable attention as they swung on to Front street from the Dundas highway yesterday afternoon. They did not appear to be wearied from their twenty-five mile jaunt, despite the fact that they carried packs weighing forty pounds strapped over their shoulders. One of the features of this milature "knapsack derby" is the fact that the men may not accept a ride, unless it is raining, and then they may only ride twenty-five miles. Walking, they manage to cover about twenty-five or thirty miles a day and they expect to be in Hollywood by December. They have a long itinerary ahead of them, going right from here to the Pacific Coast and then journeying southward a large town and city on the way. They will remain in Belleville for two or three days.

Are Musicians

Mr. Bray is a pianist and composer. In fact, he is a graduate of the Toronto Conservatory of Canada. His partner, Mr. Puckett, is a singer of no mean ability and both have rendered concerts on their tour around the country.

Leaving Montreal on March 31st, accompanied by "Bisco", a mongrel dog (which was lost at Prescott and has not since been recovered) the men have visited Ottawa, Kingston, Gananoque, Kingston, Napanee and many intermediate points. When they leave here they will proceed to Peterboro and from there to Toronto, which city they hope to reach by the end of the month.

Carrying with them a large number of pictures they have taken on their travels and signatures and seals of the different cities they have visited, as well as a number of pieces of music some of them being Bray's own compositions, the pair are interesting, to say the least.

They expressed themselves this afternoon as thinking Belleville a mighty fine place and only wished that they could visit here longer.

Word was received here today by Mrs. J. Murphy, Kyle House Apts., of the death of her brother, J. Truman Stoliker, of Detroit, Mich. Is passed away suddenly in California where he spent the winter months, returning to Detroit for the summer. No particulars of his death have yet been received. He leaves a number of relatives in Belleville.

DAYLIGHT SAVING IS PROPOSED IN NORTH COUNTRY

New Liskeard, May 13.—The agitation for daylight saving is gaining headway in three sister Temiskaming towns and petitions will shortly be presented to the Councils for by-laws putting the scheme into effect during the summer months. There are many arguments for and against the idea as it affects the business life of a town situated as are the towns of Cobalt, Haileybury and New Liskeard, and probably it is more objectionable to New Liskeard from a business point of view than to the other towns, owing of course, to the rural business which assists so materially in the success of the farmers' town." On the other hand, it is well-known that in the north at least several hours of the daylight of the early summer are the big major's of our citizens owing to the habit of not getting up until breakfast time. Cut out one hour, two hours or at least one of them might just as well be made use of in carrying on some other work and thus have the other hour of the day open for other enterprises.

As we have said, there are excellent arguments on each side. The speaker is prepared to adopt the new idea if the majority of our citizens approve of it, and it is up to the sponsors of daylight saving to convince the skeptics, so that whatever is done may be unanimous.

STIRLING SUNDAY SCHOOL SPONSOR SPECIAL SERVICE

Stirling, May 13 (By Mail)—St. Andrew's Sunday School met in the auditorium to observe Mother's Day. The printed program was followed, the theme being "The Mother Heart of the World."

She lives not for herself

In other's good she finds her own

Life's worth in fellowship is known.

After singing "Birds Are Singing, Woods Are Ringing", responsive reading of Scripture followed, Mr. Robt. Eggleton, the Superintendent, leading. Gerald Ward gave a recitation entitled "No Mother's Heart Is Full." "Thou That Once On Mother's Knee" was rung, followed by prayer by Rev. Reid. Helen Ward recited "To Mother," then reading of Scripture regarding the blessing of little children. Roy Joby then recited a poem entitled "Mother's Day; When Mother's of Sixteen Their Children Brought To Jesus." Mr. Eggleton read a few verses of Scripture. Miss Gena Joby then recited beautifully "The Search For The Beautiful." The Choir rendered a beautiful anthem, "My Wish For You." The offering followed. Rev. A. W. Reid gave an address on "The Unknown Mother, The Mother Heart of The World." Catherine Simpson sang very sweetly, "Mother and Home." She prelided at the organ throughout the service in the absence of the organist, Mrs. Williams. After another hymn, the Benediction was pronounced by all in unison.

The church was beautifully decorated with cherry blossoms, red and white tulips.

St. Paul's United Church held its Mother's Day services in the Sunday School room. Mr. L. S. Maddaford, Superintendent, in the chair. After the invocation all sang Holy, Holy, Holy, Lord God Almighty, and prayer in unison. Hymn, "I Think When I Read the Sweet Story of Old" preceded by a few remarks regarding the picture of Jesus surrounded by the children brought to him by their mothers, were spoken by Rev. E. W. Rowland. Then led by Mr. Melkle-john, Scripture passages were read first by the Juniors, then the Intermediates, followed by the Seniors. After the offering and dedicatory prayer, Penny Lansing read in full enunciation "The Search For The Beautiful," a hymn "For the Beauty of the Earth" followed, then a pageant, "What Makes the Difference" was put on by the following: Mrs. A. E. Dobbie, Margaret Ward, John Monroe, Helen Sidney, T. Hulin, Rev. Rowland, Madeline Lowry and W. Tucker. The theme being "Why Are Children's Lives So Sad and Miserable In Some of The Oriental Countries Where Christ Is Not Known," and the Canadian children were compared and the children were convinced it was because we live in a so-called Christian land where Christ reigns in the hearts of men. "The Happy Home" was sung and the Benediction followed. The pulpit was adorned with a lovely Hydrangea plant.

In the regular church service Mr. James Bamforth and Miss Betty Conley sang solos, "Mother and Home" and "O My Mother" respectively. The Communion table was adorned with a lovely bouquet of snap dragons sent by Mrs. J. L. Ashley in memory of her mother, Mrs. Charles Kingston, a devoted member of the church.

SHOOT ANYONE WHO ATTEMPTS RIOTING

Sherman, Texas, May 14 (CP)—Efforts to discover the author of threats to burn negro buildings temporarily halted other activities of the military court seeking information relative to last Friday's anti-negro riots, when the courthouse was burned and a negro burned to death, his body being later dragged through the streets and hanged to a tree. Authorities issued orders to shoot to kill anyone attempting to start a riot.

Child death by motors have decreased fifty per cent in six years.

PICTORIAL GOLF INSTRUCTIONS

(BY H. B. MARTIN)

Timing The Shift of Weight

To make a long drive it is very necessary to get the hips into the shot which means timing the shot just right. The thought of making the hips do their share will often throw a golfer off his drive because he keeps this in mind and tries to perform this part too soon.

Let the clubhead come through before the body moves at all in the direction of the hole. It is necessary first to unwind the body and then permit the hips to help the arms speed the club through. The hips are needed very much in the follow through.

Corn Borer Inspector Makes Annual Trip Through County

Picton, May 11 (By Mail)—Mrs. W. Fox and Mrs. C. Walker were Monday afternoon callers on Mrs. C. Pearsall.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hubbs, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Hubbs, Bloomfield Rd., were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Life Orser.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Leavitt and Cora, of Scholfield, were the guests of Mrs. M. Leavitt on Sunday.

Misses Helena and Mary Reidel, also Master Lambert, of Picton, were week-end guests of their uncle, Mr. C. A. Vincent.

Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Pearsall, of Wellington, were callers on a recent Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. Earle Pearsall.

Mrs. Clare Pearsall and Aileen were Friday evening guests of Mrs. John Vancleaf, King street, Picton.

Mr. Ed. Leavitt and Homer, of Picton, called on Mr. Jas. Hubbs on Saturday.

Farmers are now turning their cattle out to pasture for the summer months. The grass is none too long and a good rain is needed badly for the meadows, also the crops.

Mr. Arthur Tripp has built a fine new brooder house for his hatch of fine Leghorn chicks.

Sorry to report Mrs. Clare Pearsall on the sick list, and her many friends wish her a speedy recovery.

The corn borer inspector was thru this neighborhood on Saturday seeing that the corn stubble is well cleared up.

Mr. R. P. Martin, of Woodcock, took dinner with his daughter, Mrs. James Martin one day this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Joyce and family of Bloomfield took tea with Mr. and Mrs. Herb Leavitt on Sunday.

Quite a number from here attended the Talkie, "Love, Live and Laugh" at the theatre Saturday night. It was much enjoyed by all.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Tripp entertained a number of friends on Sunday.

Mrs. J. Hubbs and Marie called on Mrs. C. Pearsall on Monday afternoon.

Miss Mary and Lambert Reidel were the guests of Miss Rita and Leland Pearsall on Saturday.

Miss Theda Martin is busy with special classes preparing for her entrance exams.

Quite a number from here attended the obsequies of the late Mr. George Wood, on Friday. Much sympathy is extended to his bereaved son, Mr. Everett Wood, in the loss of a loving father.

Mr. and Mrs. Willet Tripp and family of Bloomfield spent the dinner hour on Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Herb. Leavitt.

The many friends of Miss Vera Leavitt wish to extend hearty congratulations on her success of receiving her graduating honors from the School for Nurses at Prospect Heights Hospital, Brooklyn, N.Y.

What might have proved to be a very disastrous fire on Monday morning was extinguished in very quick order when discovered a minute or two after it broke out. Mrs. Isaac Brayack beside Mr. Gray Leavitt's barn caught fire from some unknown cause and if it had not been the men's quick action and Mr. Arthur Tripp's fire extinguisher, it would have got ten out of control as it has already reached the barn wall and with the wind it would have proved serious. It is thought the origin of the fire was caused by some overheated manure next the straw stack.

LITTLE BENNY'S NOTE BOOK

After supper ma got out her 2 new Spannish shawls to see which one pop liked the best, ona being white with red flowers all over and the other one being black mixed with white circles. I was putting on the white one and wawking up and down as if she shawl she was on the stage in a theater. Now this is the hundred and 30 dollar one, this is sippose to be something exter special, a member of the Spanish nobility wouldent spern this one for a shawl. A Spannish looking salesmen told me that one of the Spannish princesses wears one just like it.

You ast to send her your picter in yours and she mite send you her picture in here, and you would be charter members of the Princess fan club pop sed, and ma sed, But then on the other hand it seems to me the 80 dollar shawl is even better in appearance what do you think, Willyum?

And she took the white one off and put the black one on and kept on wawking, saying, It would be just too thrilling if they had made some mistake and given me one of their best shawls for 80 dollars. They sometimes do make mistakes with these imported things, I really bleeve I like this one better, what do you think, Willyum?

I shouldent be serprised, pop sed, and ma sed, But of corse the white and red one is a reel work of art with a capital A. Anybody who knows anything about shawls would know this one at a glanze, what do you think, Willyum? she sed.

I think I dont know anything about shawls, pop sed.

But Willyum, you must have an opinion, ma sed, and pop sed, Well from an unprejudiced examination of that shawl, my opinion is that the first Spannish shawl was invented when a nervius but clever Spannish lady dropped a Spannish omlette on a white table cloth.

And he got in back of the sporting page and ma keep on changing the shawls and looking at herself in the long mirror with a injoyable expression.

Softball Loop of Five Teams Now Organized

Trenton Team Plays With Four Belleville Teams

SINGLE SCHEDULE

An enthusiastic meeting of the softball league was held last night at the Y.M.C.A., Monty P. Duff, secretary of the softball interest directed by the Belleville Amateur Athletic Association, was in attendance stating that the organization was willing to lend any possible assistance for the furtherance of the sport. Harold Hanley, the president, was in the chair, and Miss K. Dadswell of Trenton took the minutes of the meeting as secretary. The executive of the loop is composed of the above mentioned officers and one representative from each of the five teams that will compose the loop, all of whom are yet to be appointed.

There will be five teams in the league this year, four in Belleville and one in Trenton. The Belleville entrants are Nationals, Whoopees, Frontenacs and Clacs. The teams will play a single schedule with the first game on the Armouries lawn on Tuesday, May 27. The loop has not decided which association they will link up with but the fans are assured of good softball during the coming season. Every team in the league is strong with the good players being evenly distributed among the different teams. The schedule will be completed the latter part of the week.

CLERICS RETURN HOME

Carthage, Tunisia, May 14—Nearly twenty thousand clerics and laymen who have been in attendance at the thirtieth eucharistic conference assembled to the four winds of Christendom today. Many were going to the African where the Pope has promised an audience and to the Passion Play and ma sed, But of corse the white and red one is a reel work of art with a capital A. Anybody who knows anything about shawls would know this one at a glanze, what do you think, Willyum? she sed.

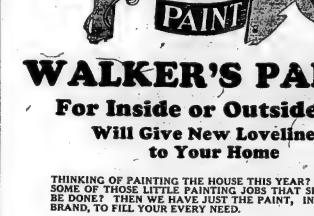
ENGINEER TALKS OF COLOR WALKS

City Engineer C. A. Mott Discusses Southern Innovations

Walks verdant as the foliage of the trees, rosy as the rays of the newly risen sun, orange as any orange fruit and red as a flaming maple in autumn will they come in Canada? and in Belleville in the course of time?

"How would colored sidewalks suit Belleville?" a reporter of The Ontario Intelligencer asked City Engineer Charles A. Mott today, as he showed him a clipping from a newspaper telling of the development of the colored walk idea in New Orleans and other cities of the south.



"They have already been used in many private estates to great advantages," said Mr. Mott who spoke of colored curbs particularly in "no parking" areas. Red would be the ideal color for this purpose, Mr. Mott also stated that it would only be necessary to paint the curbs and not go to the additional expense of having this colored material set in. "Cities with colored walks would be attractive and smart in appearance," the engineer said.

Sidewalks have progressed from a mere dirt pathway to board walks, from board walks to cement walks and now, people may have walks of rainbow colours.

URGES CLUBMEN TO L VE CREED

Kiwanians Are Told to Realize More Fully That They Live

Passioned appeal for the members of the Kiwanis Club to live up to their 12th creed "to realize more fully that I live," was given by J. P. Hagerman at Toronto at the weekly luncheon of that club Tuesday at the Queens Hotel. This was one of the most entertaining addresses that has been given to the club in months and every member left the luncheon more fully resolved more closely to follow the excellent creed of the club. There were a large number out to the luncheon with a new member being enrolled in the person of Rev A. E. McCutcheon. The new member was introduced by Fred Deacon.

President Joe Imlah presided with John O'Flynn collecting the several fines. Ross Hunter presided at the piano and James Bankier led the community singing. Joe Shortt, secretary of the Y.M.C.A. a guest of the club thanked the members for the interest shown in the Xi-Y hockey league and wished for a continuance in the summer sports. Both softball and hardball will be played this summer and the President appointed a committee of Harold W. Cross, Eddie Shapiro, George Lee and Claude D. Tice to act in conjunction with officers of the "Y". Dave Martin was appointed as a member of the camp committee from the Club and will look after the club's interest.

It was decided at the luncheon to accept the invitation of the Hamilton Club for an inter-city visit and this will take place in the near future. A number of members will journey to Peterboro on Thursday night for a ladies' night to be held by that club and also to Kingston on Monday night for an inter-club meeting.

The speaker of the day was introduced by P. C. MacLaurin and appreciation was expressed by B. C. Donnan. Mr. Hagerman spoke on the ethics of Kiwanis, stating that the creed was the best he had ever read. He stated that a boy was the greatest joy and if given an uplifting hand would reflect back on the helper. The Kiwanis club can do a great deal not as a club but as individual members and the joy will come by fully appreciating the joy to live. These boys are the greatest asset we have in the world today and by teaching them through Kiwanis the spirit of sportsmanship on and off the field a great blessing will be derived for the boy. Mr. Hagerman is a forceful speaker and his remarks carry an earnestness acquired through constant companionship with the younger boys through many years.

EMPIRE DAY CONCERTS OF BELLEVILLE PUBLIC SCHOOLS

Fifth Annual Concerts Will Be Held on May 22nd and May 23rd

The fifth annual concert and Empire Day celebration will be held on Thursday and Friday May 22nd and 23rd, in the Collegiate auditorium when the competitions for senior and junior choirs, and for girls and boys solo voices, which are being keenly contested, eight choirs and about fifty solo contestants will strive for the shields and medals. The chorus will number over six hundred children's voices, all picked and trained under the direction of Mr. V. F. Hunt, supervisor and teacher of musical education in the public schools, and arranged for by the music committee of the Board of Education. The standard of excellence established by Mr. Hunt in former years will be fully maintained and this year's concerts will no doubt will be surpassed, as the pupils are gaining in interest and experience and the work is going forward by leaps and bounds, so that the citizens will be able to realize the fine training that the children are receiving in musical appreciation. Sight singing, and choral singing. If we are to have a musical Canada we must begin with the children in the schools and all over Canada these Empire Day concerts and competitions are being held, and it is a wonderful privilege to have our children trained to enjoy and appreciate the refining and educating qualities of good music. On account of the large number taking part Queen Alexandra and Queen Mary School will sing Thursday evening the 22nd, while Victoria and King George schools on Friday evening the 23rd, and it is to be hoped that everyone will try to hear these interesting programmes.

The adjudicators for the shields and medals for choirs and solo contestants are as usual Mr. Leo. Riggs and Mr. Sam Anglin.

She Was Troubled With Pains Across The Back

New Brunswick Lady Relieved By Taking Dodd's Kidney Pills

Mrs. Edward Kincade Speaks Highly of Canada's Leading Kidney Remedy

St. John, N B., May 12 (Special)—"I was advised to use Dodd's Kidney Pills for my kidney trouble," writes Mrs. E. Kincade, 92 Durham St., St. John, N.B. "I was troubled with pains across the back, and after taking Dodd's Kidney Pills I found great relief. I had heard my friends speak about them. They are a good pill."

Dodd's Kidney Pills are purely and simply a Kidney remedy. They strengthen the kidneys so they can do their full work of straining the impurities out of the blood.

Pure blood coursing through the body carries to the different organs the nourishment they need to keep them sound and healthy.

Dodd's Kidney Pills can be obtained from all druggists, or The Dodds Medicine Co., Ltd., Toronto 2, Ont.

Hundreds of testimonials received annually prove its effectiveness.

Find Slayer's Body in Field

HAMILTON, May 14.— The Binbrook district, southeast of here, was swept by the blight of tragedy early yesterday when William Topp, hither to a peaceful tiller of the fields, is believed to have suddenly gone mad and murdered the elderly Miss Mary Ann Tweedie of Woodburn; dangerously wounded her cousin, Emery Tweedie, and later ended his own life with a shotgun. Topp's body was found at 5 o'clock Tuesday afternoon behind the barns on his father's farm, near Woodburn.

Emery Tweedie is said to have been wounded in three vital places,—one lung, his liver and his side. He was removed to the General Hospital, and was said to be slightly improved.

From what county and Provincial Police were able to gather of the tragedy, it developed from no quarrel, and came as a terrible surprise to Topp's victims. Money matters and a mortgage were involved, but everything was on a friendly footing. It is said. All that seemed to be known was that Topp had brooded of late. His wife died a few months ago and left him with two young children, and this was a severe blow to him. His crops also, it is said, had not been good. He had told friends he was discouraged.

Years' Ravages With Ministers

In the year 1904, there were in the Bay of Quinte Methodist Conference 230 ministers and of this number no less than eighteen were residents of this city, three of whom were in charge of congregations and three were connected with Albert College. At least twelve of the number have passed to the Great Beyond. The events were as follows—

Reverends R. N. Adams, C. Bodie, C. Brown, A. Campbell, A. Carmen, W. J. Crothers A. Dumee R. R. Dorac W. P. Dyer, W. Galbraith, J. Gardiner, O. R. Lambly, A. Martin, A. C. Mayhew, T. Meyers, J. R. Real, P. B. Stratton and E. Woodcock.

Ready-made Medicine—You need no physician for ordinary ills when you have at hand a bottle of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. For coughs, colds, sore throat, bronchial troubles, it is invaluable; for scalds, burns, bruises, sprains it is unsurpassed; while for cuts, sores and the like it is an unquestionable healer. It needs no testimonial other than the use, and that will satisfy anyone as to its effectiveness.

SQUADS BATTLE FOREST FIRES IN N. HASTINGS

Vast Timber Limits Near Coe Hill Are Menaced

ALLEGE CARELESSNESS

Forest fires are again threatening rich timber limits in Hastings County, according to reports reaching the city. Fire-fighting crews are swinging into action in Grimsthorpe, Wollaston and Cashel townships, and it has been found necessary to recruit squads of men throughout the district to combat the fires.

In every case the cause of the fires is said to be carelessness on the part of men employed in that district. The fire in Grimsthorpe is alleged to have started through the carelessness of a trapper named Legalm, and it is likely that forest rangers will endeavor to force him to leave the country. There are few settlers in Grimsthorpe and the fire had a great start, but was extinguished on Thursday after a bitter fight extending over a week.

In Wollaston the fire is about four miles north of Coe Hill and a squad of thirty men are fighting it. The woods are stated to be very dry and the fire is sweeping rapidly along. It is not under control.

Wooden Trestle Burned

Among other fires in Cashel township was one that occurred last week on the limits of the Timber Products Company, one of the largest and most up-to-date companies operating in this wide district. This company has a twelve-mile railroad extending into its limits. The train running over a trestle spied fire on Friday and the wooden trestle on fire and more than twenty-five feet of its length was consumed. Repairing the trestle is holding up the hurried work of running the logs out.

Some forest fires have been reported in the Lake province this spring than for the same period in many years past, lumbermen state. Huge smoke clouds hang over the northern woods in many places while beneath the hungry flames lay waste the standing timber.

Huge numbers of mouth organs are made in the South German town of Trossingen. A monument stands there in honor of Messmer, the inventor of the mouth organ.

HOLLOWAY STREET
W.M.S. MEETING

The regular monthly meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of Holloway Street Church was held in the Sunday School Room with 22 members and visitors present. The meeting opened the President Mrs. Wight, in the chair with hymn 35 in the Methodist Hymn Book, followed by Prayer by the President. The minutes were approved as read. Reports were heard. The Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. Mark, gave the yearly message from Mrs. Kember, also read a letter from Mrs. Mason. All the reports were encouraging. The prayer was put on by Group Five on Mrs. Hall, their leader took the chair for that part of the meeting. Hymn 364 was followed by Devotional. Study taken by Mrs. Hall, after which Mrs. Hall, "Breathe on Me Breath of God" was sung softly as a prayer by Mrs. Kerr gave a reading on Mother's Day, showing that it is our duty to help the boys and girls our mothers handed down to us in our missionary work. Mrs. Livesay and Mrs. Johnson favored with a duet, "Master, let's Bible". Mrs. Wight gave a reading on the 'Life of The Chinese Village Girl' which was very interesting. Mrs. Jack Livesay delighted all with a solo "My Mother's Prayers Have Followed Me". Mrs. Wight closed the meeting with prayer after which Group Five served lunch and a social half hour was spent.

Picton Doctor New President

carried on in regard to a change in the place of meetings. The seven meetings of the year are now held as follows. Belleville Tweed, Madoc, Stirling, Marmora, Picton and Trenton and after the subject of a change had been commented upon, with much good natured merriment, it was decided to hold the next meeting in Picton on the second of June when the President would be discussed even more fully.

"Infections of the Hand" was the subject of Mr. McKim's address which contained many points of particular interest to the medical profession. Hand Infections

"In the handling of difficult cases of hand infection" said Dr. Mckim, "much attention has been in the past to regard them under the handling of minor surgery when they did not belong to that realm at all. In the first place, I want to make a statement of what I consider the most important point in the treatment of hand infections and that is correct diagnosis."

Dr. McKim divided hand infections into two classes acute lymphangitis cases, and the second the correct treatment in each class, warning against an incision in the former. In the second class boils, carbuncles, etc., as definition should be made as soon as the diagnosis is made. Dr. McKim advised a general anaesthesia in such cases but if there should be local anaesthesia he condemned absolutely the use of ethyl chloride. Dr. McKim spoke of the rules for making incisions in the hand and the treatment after incision. Through the use of lantern slides he demonstrated the points in his lecture, and when he had concluded his remarks he answered questions addressed by various members of the association.

Dr. Carleton, of Stirling, expressed the appreciation of those present for Dr. McKim's lecture on the interesting paper, and in response, Dr. McKim thanked the doctors for the keen discussion of his paper. He said he was very welcome and encouraging to a speaker.

FIRES UNDER CONTROL

Chicoutimi, Que., May 11 (CP)—Forest fire menace has been averted, ing this district for the past few days are now thought to be under control. Neighboring mills have sent men and some three hundred others were mobilized in the National Park to combat the flames.

OBITUARY

STIRLING, May 14.—(By Mail)—The passing to the Great Beyond of Mr. George E. Kennedy B.A., Principal of Colborne High School, removes an outstanding member of the teaching profession, having taught two years over the age required to receive the pension for teachers in Ontario, but he delighted in teaching and was a very successful teacher. Brought up on a farm near Cobourg he was allotted of age where he left the crops to become an Educationist and went back to the Public School to pass the Entrance Examination and great progress did he make, that he graduated with honors from Victoria University in due time and taught in Cobourg for a few years, then accepted the position of Principal of Stirling High School, where he remained for twenty-nine years and many clever pupils through his efficient teaching have gone out to mark his or her mark in the world; Mr. Kennedy has been President of Colborne High School for about nine years and he understood he was reengaged to teach in 1930-31.

He attended the O.E.A. Convention in Toronto Easter week but later he was stricken with heart trouble which together with hardening of the arteries and high blood pressure made a complication impossible to overcome by his age of seventy years, though specialists were called on the case.

He was a devoted member of the Presbyterian church in Canada, a staunch Liberal and a member of the Masonic Order and a professor of every good cause wherever he lived.

His wife passed away the first wife was Miss Sherwin born near Cobourg, the result of this union being four daughters and one son; Mrs. Prest McKee of Stirling and Mrs. Gilson Sim about four years ago; Mrs. Thos. Eggleton of Stirling; Misses Mae and Edie and Mr. Jack Kennedy all of Regina. His first wife died about twenty-two years ago and about seven years ago he married Miss Lillian Wetherell, B.A., daughter of Rev. Weatherell of Brighton, who survives him and a little son Donald, five years old.

With the exception of Leslie, all his family were at his bedside when he died.

The sympathy of the whole surrounding country, is extended to the bereaved family.

WILLIAM C. CURTISS

William Charles Curtiss for many years a popular engineer on the Canadian Pacific Railway, died at his home, 38 Bradford Street, Barrie, last Tuesday following an illness of over three months. He was in his seventy second year.

The late Mr. Curtiss was born in London, England, and was at Westminster Abbey on August 8th, 1858, and came to Canada when quite young. At the age of fourteen he became a clerk in the Grand Trunk Railway offices in Montreal. In 1879 he was married to Miss Edith Mayo in Belleville. They lived in Montreal until 1890 when they returned to Belleville.

Ten years later they moved to Barrie where for the past twenty years they have resided. Mr. and Mrs. Curtiss celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary only one year ago.

In politics he was a Conservative. He was a member of Corinthian Lodge A. F. and A. M., the Sons of England and the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen. He was secretary of the brotherhood for twenty years during his residence in Belleville.

Besides his wife, two sons and seven daughters survive. They are William, Toronto; Herbert, Barrie; Albert Riddell, Toronto; Mrs. H. J. Robert, Hamilton; Mrs. R. Kelman, Niagara Falls, N. Y.; Mrs. C. A. Mullen, Toronto; Mrs. Henry Millie, Barrie; Mrs. Georg Wiseman, Barrie, and Clara at home. There is also one sister living in Leamington, England.

The funeral took place under the auspices of Corinthian Lodge to Barrie Union Cemetery, Rev. A. E. Baker of Central United Church of which deceased was a member, officiating.

COAST GUARDS ON HUNT FOR CARGO

Chicago, May 14 (CP)—The Tribune says contraband crews along the two hundred mile coast line have begun a search for a treasure reported stowed in the gunwhales with choice Canadian liquors and beer. Information which was later verified, was given the coastguard officials to the effect that the freighter Aramingo, repainted and renamed Ali, was hooked with liquor at Goderich, Ont., last week, that it cleared the Canadian Customs at Sault Ste. Marie and then started for lower Lake Michigan.

Lake Vessels Paying Port of Trenton Calls

Shipping Active In Trenton During Past Few Days

(Special By Staff Reporter)

TRENTON, Ont., May 14.—Shipping in Trenton has been somewhat active during the past few days, several lake going ships having called and others making ready to leave soon. The Glen Allen made her regular call here Monday morning on her way from Trenton to Montreal, and shipped canned goods, while the Marie Lydia feeder for the Canada Steamship Lines, is expected back again either tonight or tomorrow. The Marie Lydia, a Quebec ship, has been chartered for the summer by the Canada Steamship Lines to ply between Quinte ports, loading canned and other goods for the large freighters which call at Picton and Kingston.

Yesterday a small craft called at the docks here and loaded up, but its cargo could not be ascertained. No name was to be seen on this ship, and speculation was rife as to her identity. From her looks, it seems possible that Trenton may become a base for export operations.

Every woman will appreciate the subtly distinctive charm achieved by the use of this magical lotion.

Truck Skids to Highway Ditch

Occupants Escape In Crash Near Cemetery Crossing

(Special By Staff Reporter)

TRENTON, Ont., May 14—A narrow escape from serious injury when the truck in which they were riding overturned in the ditch on the Trenton Highway yesterday afternoon was the fate of Lance Murphy and L. W. Root both of Brockville. Mr. Root was driving east and approaching the cemetery crossing three miles west of Belleville about four-thirty o'clock when he put on his brakes too hard, in an attempt to slow up for the railway crossing. So slippery was the pavement, however, that the large truck skidded off the road and into the ditch, striking a heavy tree which swung the truck around facing west again, and came to rest in a ditch. Neither man was injured, beyond a few bruises, but the truck was quite badly damaged. It is jointly owned by the two men. They were returning from Toronto after taking a load of valuable purebred cattle to that city, and at the time of the accident, the machine was luckily empty.

FARMERS ALL BUSY ON LAND SEEDING

(Special By Staff Reporter)

TRENTON, Ont., May 14.—Farmers in this district are practically all on the land at present, and seeding is going on apace with the fine weather of the past week. Many farmers have almost finished and are hoping for rain again but most of them are only about half way through. According to several the hay crop this year is not going to be very good, but otherwise conditions seem to be good. Present prospects for good crops, of course may not turn out to mean much, but as one tiller of the soil stated, "Given any good luck with the weather at all this summer, conditions with the farmers in this district at east will improve."

Quinte League Opened Today

Trenton Hosts to Tweed Team in First of Series

TRENTON, Ont., May 14.—The Bay of Quinte Baseball League opened here this afternoon at the new C.P.R. Recreation Field when Trenton were hosts to Tweed in the first fixture of the season. Although the players of neither team have had much practice so far, a snappy league has been arranged, and Trenton fans will see some good games before the summer is over. Point Anne and Picton are the other two entries, and they also are playing today. Mr. J. Massuch is the manager of the Trenton team, and he is confident that he can round out a finished aggregation with the material which is now available. The C.P.R. Recreation field is north of the Highway in East Trenton, and has only recently been completed, a gang of men having been working there for the past three weeks to get it in shape for the ball season.

Mothers Were the Guests at Unique Dinner

J. F. Hagerman, Well-Known Camp Director, Is Chief Speaker

"The Mother is the one supreme asset of the national life; she is more important by far than the statesman, business man, scientist or artist."—Theodore Roosevelt.

Mothers of Belleville were paid the highest tributes at an unique gathering in the Y.M.C.A. last night. It was the occasion of the second annual Mother, Son and Daughter Banquet and "The hand that rocks the cradle" was honoured in novel fashion.

J. F. Hagerman an outstanding student, excelled in public speaking and athletics, was the chief spokesman. Six times a gold medalist in oratory winning national honours, winner of second place in the broad jump, world's championships at Stamford Bridge and a leader in boys' clubs, he is one of the most sought-after public speakers in Canada.

Since graduating from College Mr. Hagerman has been engaged in Y.M. C.A. work and after resigning from that field he has conducted a private summer camp at Otter Lake on Georgian Bay.

Mr. Hagerman delivered a heart to heart talk last night, graphically picturing his own life and the influences of his own mother. Chas. Hanna occupied the chair while Percy Cole assisted as song leader and Alex Clordon presided at the piano. B. F. Jennings said grace and Jack Silver delighted the audience with two well-rendered numbers.

Violet Hobson proposed the toast to "The Mothers," while Mrs. A. F. Hill-man made a most appreciate reply. After the singing of the Mother's Hymn, Edgar Buchanan repeated the pledge which every Son and Daughter took, following which beautiful cut-flowers distributed around were presented to the Mothers. Mrs. Mervis Lavole rendered a solo with Miss Lavole at the piano.

Mr. H. W. Ackeman conveyed the thanks of the guests to Mr. Hagerman for his very inspiring address. Mr. Bert Jennings, chairman of the Y.M. C.A. Board supplemented Mr. Ackerman's remarks. Mr. Joe Shortt, General Secretary of the local branch spoke of the summer activities which are commencing now. The tables were decorated with Spring flowers supplied by Miss E. Corbett.

"What Mother Needs"

Mr. Hagerman told of his own intimate life. "Mother is the great earthly example of self sacrifice, she is eager to give all the credit to husband, son or daughter for the success they achieve. We won't let them give us all the credit, we will shower them with praise," he said. "Our Mother's unselfish life stirs in us a promised respect." The speaker turned to his own close friendship with his Mother when he said was his guide and inspiration. "I can hear the tenderest tones, the dearest, sweetest words that I have ever heard, coming from my Mother's heart, the heart-throb tones."

"What Mother needs most now is:—(1) Your smile each time you see her, (2) One kind word each day, (3) Your helping hand.

Mr. Hagerman spoke of the great bond which can be accomplished by three Mother, Son and Daughter banquets. "Mother is always on the defensive, her anxiety for suitable companionship is always apparent and her influence is always present. She brings out the chivalrous qualities in every one of us. Let us hope for the best possible development of that bond between Mother, Son and Daughter," were Mr. Hagerman's concluding words.

The evening was brought to a close with a few remarks from the Chairman Mr. Charles Hanna who said that the dinner last night was just another epoch in splendid progress in the local branch of the Young Men's Christian Association.

FELL IN A WELL; YOUNGSTER LIVES

Sarnia, May 13.—Georgie Whitefoot aged 4 years, son of Mrs. F. Whitefoot of Bridgen, narrowly escaped drowning today when he fell into a deep well near his home. He was removed from the water and is recovering. The family resided, until last week, in Sarnia. The boy accompanied an older brother across the road to a neighbor's property on which a well was situated. The younger boy got there first, and as his older brother arrived at the well, he saw Georgie falling in, and summoned aid. The lad was brought to the surface and Dr. Irvine applied resuscitation methods.

CHAPTER XVII

Birds as Missionary Messengers

Since 1915 I have more than doubled the interest of my bird-tracing system by stamping a selected series of Scripture on what previously was the blank side of the tag. Now I shower it lucky enough to get a bird with my tag on it also gets a personal verse of Scripture, whether he needs it or not. Safety first! No harm done, said "personal," but of course there are exceptions. In case you are baldheaded and when out shooting you bring down a good fat goose wearing a tag, and on investigation you find that the message reads: "The very hairs of your head are all numbered, Matthew 10:30," if you don't think this goose was intended for you just place the tag back on its leg and hand it to the other fellow.

However, I do not feel that I should pass on without first giving you an explanation of how this great advantage was handed to me.

One Saturday afternoon in the fall of 1914 I was standing in a shoe store in the town of Kingsville, conversing with two gentlemen, when a plainly dressed Salvation Army lassie approached us and holding out a small roll remarked, "Buy a calendar, gentlemen; buy a calendar?" I happened to be the last one to refuse, but as I shook my head I glanced at the situation. We three men all wearing good warm overcoats, and this girl, dressed in what I would call a summer suit. I spoke just as she was turning away. She at once whirled, her face beaming with smiles as she held out the paper roll towards me, while I dropped a quarter in her other extended hand and carelessly pushed what she had sold me down into my outside overcoat pocket. I have never seen her since to my knowledge.

A few days later I noticed a beautiful picture hanging on our dining-room wall; its outer cover appealed to me very much, so I got up and walked to it and began asking a volume of questions. Where did you get that? Who brought it here? Where did it come from? and so forth. Mrs. Miner turned and said, "Why you brought it home. We found it in your overcoat pocke.."

My little tiem I had lifted the outer cover and found it contained a selected verse for me to consider each day in the year. This was the first one I read: "From this day I will bless you."

I then studied one after another of them until I had read and re-read dozens and dozens of these encouraging promises that seemed to fill the whole room with heavenly bread right from God's own oven of love.

The overflow of my heart was: How can I pass it on? I decided to select a few of these verses that had hit me square in my living room, and have them put in booklet form, then pass them on to friends as my Christmas greeting.

That week we were burning our last kiln of drain-tile for the season. It had been our custom that I start work at one o'clock a.m., my eldest son taking the first part of the night. I am on duty firing every half hour, in which takes me from ten to fifteen minutes; then I withdraw from the heat and rear of the fires, and lean back in our old chair with my feet upon a wheel-barrow. The clock is hung where the glare of the light will shine on its face and I take things quite comfortable for fifteen minutes at a time. I pull the blanket up over my shoulders and lie right back.

It is a beautiful warm morning for the time of the year; in fact the past pond is not frozen over, and the ducks and geese are still here. The silence is broken now and then by the crowing of the roosters, which is Nature's introduction to the new day. The sky above my face looks bluish-black, illuminated with thousands of twinkling stars, and each is staring me right in the eyes. There I am—alone. I pick out a space between four bright stars and try to count the dimmer ones in that small crew, until the whole heavens seem to burst open with wireless messages, and my heart is the central receiver.

I have said I am alone. Yes, I am alone in company with Him who has been the foundation of all my success; alone with Him who, time and again while in the northern wilderness, has heard my earnest, awkwardly-worded request and has guided me to my lost companions when my strength and ability had failed; yes, when the night has been as black as ink, and the stormy gale was causing the trees to fall all around us, He has guided me safely back to our tent that is pitched in the secondary growth timber beside some little stream or lake. Yes, I am alone with the same great, loving Power who has made millions of barefoot boys into real men, even after fathers' and mothers' kind teachings had failed.

Just then I heard the swish of a flock of ducks' wings and their low quacking as they dropped into the pond about fifty rods from my feet. At that moment one corner of my mind's eye had apparently drifted over to the three hundred and sixty-five blessings I had bought of the Salvation Army lassie for twenty-five cents, and like a shot from a cannon the heavens God's radio said, "Stamp these verses on what is now the blank side of your duck and goose tags."

I threw the blanket off my shoulders and jumped to my feet, for I now had my tagging system completed!

In less than a week I had the fowls of the air carrying the word of God, and in six months they were delivering the message over the Atlantic to the far-off Indians and Esquimaux of Hudson Bay. And today I do not hesitate in saying that I have the most accurate and most fascinating bird-tagging system of any man, or combination of men, standing on the American continent, as the verse of Scripture has more than doubled the interest.

This brought Rev. J. W. Walton to my home here. Mr. Walton has been an Anglican missionary on the east coast of Hudson Bay for over thirty years. And when he and I grasped hands in my dooryard we were compelled to believe that we were introduced by the fowls of the air, for his letter of introduction was several score-tags which I had sent out in previous years. The geese were killed by the Esquimaux, who took the tags to the reverend gentleman for an interpretation.

This subject was brought to me another letter from the far North, which is of unusual interest. It reads as follows:

"I have to admit that I have delayed the sending of this tag to you, longer than I should. Hope I have caused you no inconvenience.

"The passage of Scripture on this tag is one which had I fully realized God's power, and the full extent of its meaning in the past, how often would I have said 'Get thee behind me, Satan,' and would have come out of it 'more than conquerer,' but, sorry to say, in-most cases the opportunity has been the result. Rest assured your message has done some good."

One duck, killed in Louisiana, brought to my home thirty-nine interesting letters of inquiry. Among them was a letter from the Arakansa State Prison, reading as follows:

"My name is——. My room-mate's name is——. I am in here for overdraft on a bank; my room-mate, who is sitting at my elbow, is in here for murder. We have a paper here giving an account of a duck killed in Louisiana with a tag on its leg, marked 'Have faith in God.' We have looked this up in our Bible; we find that the reference given is correct. We would be pleased to hear from you to know more about your interesting life with the birds. However, if you do not see fit to write us, we trust you will not be offended at getting a letter from here. We remain,

Yours,

Arkansas State Prison

Little did I think that when I stamped this verse on the tag that the duck carried away, that the message would ever find its way into a prison cell, and lodge in the heart of a murderer.

CHAPTER XVIII

How Wild Ducks Conceal Their Nests

Possibly there is none of our birds that can conceal its nest better than the wild duck. This may be due to the fact that she has to be father and mother both.

In the first place she selects a spot where the foliage, dry sticks or weeds, are exactly the same color as herself. I once found a black duck's nest right beside an oak stump that was charred black by being partly burned away, and really if you weren't careful you might look at her all day and not see her, as she was exactly the same color.

Yes, I know there are a lot of people who will say, "Oh, that just happened that way." I tell you right here it did not happen that way. This is a gift to help those creatures out, and there is no man an earth can conceal anything better than a wild duck can her nest. An intelligent man once asked me how I hid when I hunted wild geese. I told him I covered myself with a blanket, and in a few weeks I saw him returning from a hunt carrying a red horse blanket.

After the duck has the spot selected she gathers a few twigs and so forth, but she lays the eggs right on the bare ground, going to her nest late at night and leaving long before the stars disappear in the morning. As soon as the crows start scouring the country, she flies back to the vicinity of her nest. I have seen a duck give a crow an aerial battle three or four times a day. But of course two crows are one too many for her.

BURR LADIES AID CONVENED

Burr, May 13 (By Mail)—The month by meeting of the Burr Ladies Aid was held May 8th at the home of Mrs. Gladwin Havens, Ameliasburg, and despite the busy time of spring seeding and housecleaning three was a goodly number present of thirty-eight.

Meeting was opened by the President Mrs. Frank Burkitt. Business part was conducted and discussed and it was decided to get new carpet for the Burr Church. After close of the meeting a social time was spent with instrumental music by Margaret Huffman and Mrs. Geo. Huffman. Mrs. McHenry and Mrs. Vallieau sang duet "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere." Mrs. Garfield French sang a solo. Reading by Mrs. Vallieau and Mrs. Clark. Little Dorothy Wilkinson sang very sweetly "The Pussy Willow," and at the close singing in unison of the Ladies Aid song sheets.

Lunch was served by four of the ladies. A special treat of fresh buns was supplied by the new baker, Mr. Grant Crosby, Amelisburg. Ladies Aid and friends were invited in June to a garden party on the lawn of the parsonage, Melville.

FIRES IN FOREST BREAK OUT SUNDAY

SUDBURY, Ont., May 13 —CP— Fire rangers report the fire hazard in Sudbury District, the worst since the establishment of that inspectorate seven years ago. Up to yesterday seven fires had been recorded in various parts of the district, all of them considerable property loss. With the assistance of men from other districts blazes were all brought under control. Thirty-two fires were reported in the past forty-eight hours.

BEN LOMOND PEAK OFFERED FOR SALE

London, May 13—Ben Lomond, perhaps the most famous peak, though not the highest, in Scotland, will short by be for sale at auction. The Duke of Montrose has decided to sell many thousands of acres in the Counties of Stirling and Lanark, and included in these will be the greater part of the lofty Ben Lomond, renowned through many a song and legend. A year ago several of the islands in Loch Lomond were offered for sale by the Duke. The coming of these lands into the market is a time when there is much talk of securing a national park for Scotland, arouses much interest in their eventual disposal.

London, Ont., May 13.—Plans totalling $25,000, the heaviest ever imposed in a court in London, fell upon erstwhile members of the Amalgamated Building Council here Monday, and left the A.B.C. plumbers staggered by the blow.

Bennett & Wright Limited, of Toronto and London, first surrendered when the criminal proceedings were launched before T. W. Scandrett, K.C., Police Magistrate, this morning. Through Gideon Grant, K.C., the company admitted guilt on five counts and in less than three minutes had handed over a cheque covering the heaviest fine of $10,000. Another cheque went a moment later to pay the $1,000 fine levied on R. D. Paton, the company's local manager, who, according to Mr. Grant had been carried away by his own enthusiasm and had entered into the combine without the knowledge of the head office.

This afternoon, after a three-hour adjournment, Jured Vining, of London, representing ten local plumbing firms entered a plea of guilty, and asked for leniency on the ground that all the delinquents have been men of good repute who were led into the combine in the belief that it was a lawful course.

Those Fined

The fines imposed were: Benjamin F. Hoyle, $5,000; William Skelly, $2,000, John Egett, $2,000; James H. Bull, $1,000; A. E. Gibbons, $1,000; William T. Allen, $1,000; Thomas Partridge, $1,000; C. R. Wright, $1,000; Charles Teale, $1,000, and Alfred H. Pope, $1,000.

MOTHER

When Mary stood at Jesus Cross
With breaking heart, mournful-eyed,
With anguished breast—a mother's love
Was born then: all the world defied.

This love then born comes down the age,
This love's of heaven, not of earth,
Each Mother's heart is but a font
Overflowing with love of heavenly birth.

God grant us heaven-sent love for her,
Whose life is spent, our griefs to share.
Give us such love as Jesus had.
To love, protect and shield from care.

Waupoose Farmer Saves Machine Without Much Loss

Waupoose May 13 (By Mail)—Mr. and Mrs. Harold Campbell, Picton, took dinner on Thursday with Mr. and Mrs. Amos Hicks.

Mrs. Milton Storms, Picton, and Mr. J. Lowery, Kingston, were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. H. William.

Mrs. Mary Gordon spent Thursday with Mr. and Mrs. John Shepard.

Miss Dorothy Burley, Mr. Wilfred Lane, also Mr. and Mrs. Herb Kerr were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Allan Harrison, Bongard.

Mr. Geo. Van Vlack has returned to Oshawa where he will spend the summer months with his daughter Mrs. Mae Hicks.

Mr. L. Smith, Wellington, was around this week advising the farmers to start spraying their orchards.

A meeting of the directors of Waupoose cheese factory was held at the factory on Monday evening.

Inspector Strothers, Picton, visited the school on Wednesday.

Mr. Arvin Hughes had the misfortune to spill gasoline over the hot engine of his tractor which instantly set it afire. Presence of mind and a liberal supply of earth quickly subdued the flames with a very small loss to Mr. Hughes.

PLAYGROUND FOR DESERONTO TOWN

Deseronto, May 13.—Joy will assuredly reign supreme in the hearts of the children during the next few months as the play ground equipment has arrived and the men of the town are busy placing the equipment in the park. The equipment consists of a four-board (seats) see-saw, swings with three seats, and a 36-foot slide. Sand piles will also be placed in the Park for the convenience and enjoyment of the equipment is to be congratulated.

LOVELY PRINCE EDWARD COUNTY

Prince Edward County looks like the garden county it is called by those who see it for the first time and the second time and on every other visit.

Now it is at its best with peach trees in the Bloomfield section in full bloom. Acres upon acres of blossoms set against the framework of the trees, the trunks and the branches and against the ground and against the ethereal blue sky seem to wrap the forms of the trees in masks of exquisite beauty. There is nothing like a cherry orchard in full bloom for one hundred per cent beauty. That county has also its plum trees in blossom but these do not cover the vast acreages of the peach trees and so contribute less to the gardenlike appeal of the county.

For those who love the light greens and bronzes of the leaves in spring, Prince Edward County holds a pleasure unsurpassed. The hills are riots of coloring as rich as autumn's tints while the skies and the bay waters add their shades of blue and the dead reeds in the swamps their cast of washed out brown.

Prince Edward is a county of beauty. Gardening is given to orchards and gardening and to grain growing, but it has its herds as well, its fields show shorn sheep and lambkins at play, cattle grazing.

In every respect it is a Homeric paradise of agriculture.

WATER CONSUMERS PLEASED

Decision of the special committee that there shall be no increase in the rate of water furnished the public by reason of the fact that it is to be filtered water comes as a great pleasure to the consumers of this city. It is not quite a surprise as it has been hinted that the department was in so satisfactory a position as to take care out of surplus and earnings of the cost of the plant.

Council's adoption of the report of the committee makes certain the same rates as have prevailed.

A BUSY COUNCIL

If there are many more meetings at which so much business has to be transacted as on Monday night, Belleville council will earn its salary this year.

This salary however as far as Belleville goes is only the opportunity to serve.

Once upon a time salaries were talked of for the city council but they went by the board and were never revived.

1930 council is an active body and it has done some good things which no amount of salary could repay them for, among these the construction of a new lower bridge. They set a precedent to the councils to come in the way of attacking permanent undertakings with energy.

COLORS

Sidewalks green, orange and rose in color are to be found in the city of New Orleans.

Color has come to play a big part in the world of the twentieth century. Color has not yet run its course. It appears as if it were going to revive the world to a sense of that gaiety which it has for ages lacked. Somewhere in the past the brilliant dresses of men were lost in the rage of Puritanism which abolished Christmas, cates and ale, music, paintings and figures of sculpture. Its influence has kept the black regime before the people and it is only in the past twenty years that black informal clothes have disappeared. Men may yet come back to a small measure of the days of gaiety and flash, of color when knighthood was in flower.

There is no reason that the world should not rich in color. Nature is rich in every color and mankind is regarding the amazing combinations which nature makes possible. Science has come along with inventions, which have offered the world all the colorings it can desire.

So why should not sidewalks take on the cool green tones or the slightly warm rose color? The south would be pleased with such suggestive colors for they have a mental effect, but because they do like colored walks is no reason why we in the north should not take to ourselves a great deal more of color.

Man has but to look to nature and he will find the greatest of masters in the art of coloring. Perhaps man with thoroughfares real woodlands of delight with all the varied hues and shades of the great outdoors.

INDIAN OR WHITE

Two civilizations were brought face to face in a court at Sault Ste. Marie when a Gouleais Bay reserve Indian demanded the right to shoot and trap and fish. He spoke with a sincerity and an earnestness which the whites in the courtrooms admired. On the other side was the Indian representing the great outdoor race which has been slowly disappearing, the race which loved nature and which lived by hunting and fishing. On the other side were the whites representing a sense of law which binds them from destroying wild life against the law. Two attitudes were there summed up and it is difficult to harmonize them.

The fact remains however that the Indian was bold, true and fearless. Many a bad white in the name of sport which is not sport goes out with gun and slaughters for the pure love of killing. Indians never did that; they killed game for their own use and they were not plentiful enough to deplete whole species.

The killing off of the passenger pigeon is a disgrace which the white can never live down. On the other hand is the Indian who saw the Great Spirit in nature, who saw a unity in all life and who therefore was no indiscriminate slayer in the wild.

The Indian's oratory as he appealed in the name of his people for the right to fish and hunt fell on no deaf ears. Whatever the court's official view be, it is realized by many that the Indian can hardly in all right be deprived of his ancestral privilege of hunting. To deprive him of that is to attempt to make of him a white by law, which is no more possible than to make a white an Indian by compelling him to live on an Indian reserve.

PEACE

By Alice Michaelis

The day, sometimes torn by angry gales
That wage fierce battles high above the earth,
And lift dark banners till the sunlight fails,
While countless demons shriek their cruel mirth.

But just at twilight some enchanter wields
His staff invisible, and by his power
Unveils once more the blue of heaven's fields,
Whereon the pale moon drifts, the white stars flower.

So softly, sometimes, on the restless heart,
There steals a breath of calm, a sense of rest;
This is the gift God only can impart,
With It He blesses every troubled breast.
From every care its touch grants sure release;
It is the gift supreme, the gift of peace.

FROM FOXBORO TO HOLLYWOOD is a far cry but the sound screen bridged the gap and brought to Belleville this week Foxboro's contribution to the screen colony, George Macfarlane, who left Foxboro years ago with scant more than sufficient, however, to supply his every want and place him upon a pinnacle of success in the entertainment world. His songs recorded for the phonograph, have proved best sellers, and now he is making good in audible screen drama. Those who saw him as the interlocutor in "Happy Days" were very favorably impressed with his voice and personality.

They made good in the minstrels and are now making good on the air. Tune in on them tonight.

Well CKGW station played us a ditty trick last night didn't it fans? Yes sir, quit cold just before Amos 'n' Andy. Oh-oh, ain't that somethin'. After that it improved a little, felt it had to I guess after that break.

With Graham McNamee at the Mike the Coca Cola program goes on the air once more tonight over WEAF at 9.30 E.S.T. The highlight of the program tonight is an interview with Irvin S. Cobb by Graniland Rice. A string orchestra also figures on the program under the direction of Leonard Joy.

Vincent Lopez appears with his Hotel St. Regis orchestra tonight over station WJZ and chain at promptly 6.35 E.S.T. so there will be no excuse for not hearing him unless of course old man Reception deems otherwise.

The Veaux Framers rise to the occasion tonight at 7 E.S.T., WJZ and present a program that is as peppy as they can make it and that's saying plenty. Our old friends Retting and Flint piano duo are featured and also a great orchestra under the baton of Harry Kogen.

From WJZ at 11 we'll be able to hear Phil Spitalny's music coming over the other waves in Phil's own style and will we recognize it? Can't beat Fred Culley's Royal York dance orchestra at that though and we'll hear this popular orchestra tonight at 11 E.S.T. from CFRY that means of course over CKGW wave length.

Van Heusen program tonight heard over WABC at 8 E.S.T. with Wm. Wirges' orchestra and Vee Lawnhurst blues singer.

La Palina Smoker over WJZ at 9.30 E.S.T. Great program folks, let's go.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

INSIDE STUFF

by

Dorothy R. Scoville

Copyright, 1930, International Features Service, Inc.

Pete Dorgan, New York Star-Times correspondent, sprawled in the Florida sun meditating on the dumbness of editors in general. The editor of the Star-Times in particular.

Only a week ago Pete had written a complete explanation of the situation: John D. Bigman, 99 year old mill lionaire, came to his winter home each season with the idea of resting. He would grant no interviews whatever to anyone and he carefully guarded against any undue publicity. It was final. Pete had explained it, yet here was a wire from his paper, "Get J. D. Bigman party." To add insult to injury there had come a terse letter advising him to watch out for a correspondent from the Press-Herald, a rival, short that boasted its ability to get "scoop" news.

"It's enough to make a guy mad—complained Pete to Jack Fiz, the cameras man who did society shots.

"Yeah," agreed Fiz, helping himself to one of Pete's cigarettes. "It's tough." He scratched a match. "Yessir—it's certainly tough to be the world's richest man."

"What's he want to give a party for anyhow?" Pete demanded grumpily.

It would be a very simple affair, according to the major of the exclusive little resort town, who had been a guest on previous occasions. There would be refreshments, and some form of entertainment, usually a quar tet or soloist and the party would be over by ten o'clock. It would be early enough to write the usual bunk story but Pete had a stubborn hankering for some inside stuff. Something no one else had.

The day of the party was a credit to the state. Warm and balmy, with everyone headed for the golf links. Pete, arrayed in white linen suit and straw hat nonchalantly sauntered after them, deciding that he would trail Mr. Bigman and his friends while they played in hope of picking up a little feature story. Mr. Bigman was very proud of his golf game and rarely missed a morning on the links. Pete had followed his eight hole play around on several occasions and Mr. Bigman had voiced no objections to his presence as long as he observed a reasonable distance from the green or tee and did not try to enter into any prolonged conversation with him.

That night, with the party still on his mind, Pete meandered over to the Bigman place to see what was going on. The house was fairly close to the road and the long casement windows gave a very good view of the living room.

Several people drove up in cars and one or two came walking down the road. They simply went up the walk to the front entrance, knocked on the big brass knocker and were admitted by Mr. Bigman's butler.

The longer Pete stood there the more he craved to get inside. There were thirty or so persons seated in the comfortably unpretentious living room and by standing on tip toe Pete could catch a glimpse of Mr. Bigman visiting with his guests.

Undecided just what to do about it, Pete was wishing for a cigarette when a young girl carrying a violin, came down the road and turned swiftly up the walk that led to the side entrance.

Quickly Pete caught up with her. "O—hi!—" he urged. "We can't disarmingly.

She nodded, quite breathless with hurrying. "Yes—but it's awful. I don't know whether I dare go in or not—"

"Sh—lets—" he rged. "We can't stand out here."

She laughed,—a very charming little laugh. "Then we won't knock—"

Together they cautiously pushed open the door and stepped into a hall, blue chiffon and a twinkle of silver slippers she was gone.

Pete looked disconsolately down at his wrinkled linen suit. If he'd only had on evening clothes.

But the chances were that he would be thrown out anyway he reminded himself, and moved over to the heavy velvet draperies that curtained the doorway of the living room.

The girl in the blue dress was playing her violin and the guests were list ening in attentive silence. She bowed before an appreciative patter of applause. Pete's eyes gleamed with interest. He wanted to meet that girl She was clever as well as pretty and Pete liked that combination.

His admiration was rudely interrupted by an authoritative tap on the shoulder.

The butler was plainly surprised to find him there.

"What are you doing here?" he eyed Pete suspiciously.

"What does it look as if I were doing?" Pete haughtily inquired.

"You will have to leave immediately If you are not a guest," the butler informed him.

"But if I am a guest?"

"Er—wait here—sir." The "sir" was SHORT STORY—Inside Stuff—Gal 2 added rather doubtfully.

It was too late to make a graceful exit Pete decided with another look at the girl in blue. Better to wait now.

Thought clicked on thought as he stood there. Inspiration rewarded his effort. A moment later the butler reappeared with a distinguished looking man in evening dress.

"I am Mr. Bigman's secretary—" he said. "There seems to be a misunderstanding—"

"I am a news correspondent for the New York Star-Times." Pete stated frankly. "Mr. Bigman invited me this morning to come to his party but because I haven't evening clothes I pre fer to remain here in the hall."

The secretary's expression was of utter amazement. "You are a reporter —and Mr. Bigman invited you here?"

Pete nodded. "Yes".

"Pardon me—" the secretary excused himself and through the curtains Pete saw him approach Mr. Bigman. They were in earnest conference for a mom ent and then the aged millionaire smiled. He was still smiling when he faced Pete.

"I don't seem to remember inviting you here young man—but since you are here—"

"Do you remember when you were golfing this morning you asked, 'Will you all be over tonight?' " Pete's eyes winkled. "Well I thought, of course, you included me in your invitations I was standing right there by the others!" he finished reproachfully.

Mr. Bigman's eyes twinkled in return. "Of course you would think so." he nodded agreement. "A good report er would—but now you must come in and meet my other guests." Gently, he propelled the embarrassed Pete into the living room. Courteously introducing him to several nearby guests then rejoining a companion with whom he had been talking. The girl violinist smiled at Pete and he hastened to join her.

"This being a reporter isn't so sweet sometimes!" Pete pulled at his collar. "I didn't expect to—"

"Are you a reporter?" gasped the girl.

"The best on the Star-Times." Pete modestly admitted. "Why?"

"Well—I'm from the Press-Herald." She eyed him resentfully.

"Rivals!" Pete exclaimed dramatically.

"If I'd known that, you'd never have gotten in here—and to think you came in with me—" wailed the girl.

"Well—I don't look like most report ers." Pete consoled her, "It wasn't your fault you didn't recognize me: I didn't know you either—with your violin."

It was the only way I could think of to get in—" She continued to stare dismally at her silver slippers. "And now you've spoiled it all—"

"Why? You've got the scoop—" Pete reminded her. "Your paper will carry the story first—my sheet's an afternoon edition, you know—"

"But I was warned to look out for you!"

"Oh that's nothing—" Pete breezily assured her. "So was I!"

She laughed then, a good humored little giggle. "We'll have to be more careful the next time—"

"And when will that be?" Pete asked eagerly.

ILLUMINATION

MELLOW candle light . . . so kind to beauty, so unkind to the eyes! Yet candles were long considered to be the ultimate in illumination. The past century, however, brought us kerosene and the modern oil lamp, then illumination by gas. Surely these would remain supreme!

But this swift age of science finally harnessed electricity, and with an endless supply of power flowing continuously in her rivers, Canada can become the best lighted country in the world.

The Northern Electric organization contributes to the better lighting of the Dominion by manufacturing in its plants many of the miles of wire and cable used to convey the current from power plant to electric bulb; and by distributing through its branches, a large quantity of electric lamps and fixtures of reputable make.

The Northern Electric Company manufactures the telephone and its accessories, wires and cables for the transmission of power, fire alarm systems, public address systems, lighting fixtures and appliances, and also distributes well-known brands of electrical household appliances of all kinds.

APRIL ESCAPADE

BY KATHLEEN NORRIS

He held her hands and her bright hair fell back as she looked up at him.

"Are you scared, Chris?"

"I'm happy," he answered, simply.

"Yes. I'm terribly happy, too. I'm—" Mary Kate turned away with a little shrug, despairing of expressing herself "it had to be like this," she said.

From the pegs in the little passage she caught a loose brown coat, Tom's coat, as it happened, and slipped into it.

"Come out in the yard a minute," she said.

They went out into the narrow space between the shabby fences, where there were barrels, clothes-lines, sheds, pails, and the children's scooters and coasters.

Chris put his arm about her, and they looked up at the great black of spattered stars, Cleary street, rising tiers of little square of pale gold marking the lines of windows, high or and higher against the dark blue sky. The great electric light atop flashed and wheeled and dimmed and shrieked, in the night. Motor cars honked in the street, whizzed and were gone, and the feet of pedestrians clipped on the sidewalk, beyond the fence.

But millions of stars throbbed overhead, and the soft scarf of the night-way hung low and glittering, close to the warm spring world. The banksia rose by the kitchen doorway, the great gnarled like by the fence, the "moss-orange" that, covered with creamy blooms, stood close to the porch steps, all helped to scent and make magical the April dark.

Chris and Mary Kate stood silent, breathing it in, their hands locked, her upflung head resting against his shoulder, for a long while.

"What are we going to do next, Chris?"

"Get married, aren't we?"

"I suppose so." Her voice was dreamily confident, like the voice of a protected child.

"Tomorrow, don't you think?"

"Tomorrow?!"

"Well, why not? You see, the longer we delay, the more time there is for newspaper reporters, and fuss, and cablegrams and telegrams and what-not——"

"Oh horrors!" Mary Kate shuddered.

"About—?"

"Keating, Cass Keating."

"Oh—Oh, yes; I ought to write him I'll write him tonight."

"And tomorrow night we'll go to—where? Where do people go, here —in California? Shall we go in the car?"

"Ha! We have a car." It amused her. "You'll have your own car."

"I can drive it," she reflected aloud, simply.

"In summer you can. In winter you'll have to have a driver."

"Chris!"

"Don't you like that idea?"

It had silenced her. She was reflecting.

"Will I have to have a maid?"

"Oh, I think so, Mary."

"Ha!" she exclaimed again, this time with a sigh.

"What time do you think the City Hall opens?" Chris asked.

"Ten."

"Then I'll be here at quarter of ten. And if there's any special person you want to marry us—"

"There is."

"Then telephone him, and arrange it, will you?"

"Will your mother hate me?"

"She'll neither hate you nor like you. We'll visit her, and the Count, in Paris. He'll like you, never fear. He's fifteen years younger than my mother. She'll want to talk clothes with you, any gossip you can pick up about persons she knows, and they'll take us to the races, and to dinner at some Russian place."

"And your father?"

"Dad's absorbed in Madeleine. She's about twenty-six, and rather large, and blond—regular Swede blond, and she lisps. She's the girl who—but you wouldn't remember that. She's the girl who sang Wouldn't You Choose the Blues to Lose Your Heart To? two years ago. But you'll like Dad. He's very businesslike and square and all that."

"And I have a sweet old grandmother, who runs a cattle farm, over in New Jersey? Chris went on, with sudden enthusiasm. "You will love them all—I mean the people who work for her, and the calves and the horses and everything! Your little sisters—we ought to get them on there, some time—"

CHAPTER XLII

"Chris, are we crazy?"

"I am," he admitted. "I intend to remain so. I feel as if I was born again! I start fresh tomorrow. I'm going to do different things, go after different things. There's something to work for—I tell you, I'm different.

You would. You could wear that thing you wore Friday night, and my Aunt Alinda's pearls——"

"Oh, sure enough! Those pearls are yours, aren't they, Chris?"

"They are yours, now I present them to you."

She gave a frightened laugh.

"Chris we may have lots of fun!"

"We will have."

"We didn't think our adventure would turn out like this, did we?"

"Rather not! I didn't know," Chris added, "that there was ever a woman in the world like you."

"I have to go in," Mary Kate said. "My mother's going over to Aunt Alinda's and Mari'll need me to help him getting to bed."

Chris tipped her head back, under the spring stars.

"I love you," he said. "I've never done anything to deserve you, and that country house full of kids, and those nights at the opera, and all the rest of it. But—"

He stopped, at a loss for words.

"I know you will!" she whispered, as if he had finished his thought.

Three minutes later, shaken and breathless and bewildered, she heard the side gate click after him. Mary Kate took one more look at the blue dark sky and the stars and the rising tiers of golden apartment-house windows, and the powdery silver of the Milky Way, and drew one more great breath of the lilac and syringa-scented night. Then she went into the kitchen.

It was just as she and Chris had left it: orderly, dimly lighted, empty. Buttercups in a clean jelly glass on the table, curtains moving languidly to and fro over the sills of the open window. The nickle-plated alarm clock, over the sink, ticked, steadily, rapidly in the silence, and her own heart kept pace. Her mother, once again bonneted, and veiled, stood in the door way between the bedroom and kitchen.

"Mr. Stevens went, did he, dear?" "Yes'm."

"And you're sure of yourself, Mary Kate?"

"Oh, Mother!"

A long pause. The older woman sighed.

"Well, that's all I could ask," she said at last. "But it seems a far cry from the little room you were born in, in Brooklyn!"

"I know," Mary Kate said.

Sleep in my room with Pat, dear. He's apt to wake, and I'll be up with Uncle Robert all night," Mrs. O'Hara said.

"But I'll stop in at church at seven on my way home tomorrow."

"I'll set the alarm and meet you there, Mother. We'll have breakfast together."

She was alone again.

She sat on, at the red oilcloth kitchen table, staring into space, her arms crossed, her eyes narrowed her lip bitten. The clock hands moved, the lamplight wavered in the kitchen.

Then suddenly she stood up, and pushed her chair back into place. She took the alarm-clock, and busied herself with the little keys on its back before locking the yard door, darkening the kitchen, and going to her mother's kitchen bedroom.

Little Pat, freckled and thin and tousled of hair, was sprawled half-covered, crosswise on the wide bed. Mary Kate straightened him and covered him. The gas was turned down to a bead in here, and the one window that looked out upon the blank side wall of the neighboring house was open.

She went into the dining room, and opened Tom's forgotten window. Kneeling beside him, she put her arms about him, mother-fashion, and he half roused, in his first deep sleep and murmured to her.

"Gee, I'm crazy about you, Molly!"

Mary Kate mounted the stairs, and sat for a long time, in the dark back bedroom lighted only by the rise and fall of the cigarette advertisement a block away. Little tawny-headed Regina was sleeping like a baby saint, her hair shaken into a halo in the pillow about her unconscious head; Tess had doubled herself her covers, and her own pillow into a great mass and had to be dragged and pushed and pulled into comfort against her own sleepy resistance.

"A spider-web party"—she whispered clearly, as Mary Kate kissed her. The little girls, their big sister remembered, had been promised a spider-web party. They wouldn't have it—now.

Last of all she went into Martin's room. He was propped in pillows, he slept in a sitting position, three nights. As she came in he closed his book, and put it on her, and she sat down on the edge of this bed, and linked her hand in his free one.

So she had sat, with this friend and confidant and confessor, many and many a time, in the days since her turbulent childhood. She remembered tears and laughter, rebellion, planning, argument,—here in Mari's room at night. She remembered reading over her composition here; discussing office affairs. It was here, one night not long after this same New Year had begun, that, rosy and confused, she had talked to him about stunning Cass Keating who was so clever and so successful, and who—well, certainly it looked that way anyway, was beginning to—well, to like, anyway, Mary Kate O'Hara.

"Hello, Sis."

"Hello, Mart."

"Put the lights out?"

"Yes. I'm sleeping downstairs with Pat."

"Happy Molly?"

"I guess so, Mart."

"I know better than he does what he's getting," Mari said in a silence. The girl did not answer; she was moving her thumb back and forth across his big hand.

"Nobody like you, Molly!"

"Don't —don't make me cry. I'm —cried out."

"It'll be funny here, without you."

"But you will be in Germany, Mart!"

"Yep. Got to keep up with my rich sister, now!"

"Ah, Marty, don't joke about it!"

"I'm not joking about it. It'll be good for Tom to be king-pin for a while, and we'll pull the whole gang of them up, Molly."

"But not together any more, Mart!"

"No. Not together any more, Mart!" There was silence. Then the girl asked:

"Member playing Indians in the old coal hole in Brooklyn, Mart?"

"Do you remember Mother used to take us to church. Saturday afternoons, and we used to play house in the pews?"

"Yes. And the day—but that was here—that I brought her home a plant, with my first money."

"A primrose."

"Yep."

"It's still growing in the front garden, Mart."

"I know it is."

"Remember the day the cop pretended to bit me, Mart and you bit his hand?"

"I was five."

"You would have bitten an elephant I think, if it had been mean to me!"

"I would have wanted to."

They were silent again, fingers linked. After a few moments, Martin felt something hot and wet fall on his hand.

Hillier

Hillier, May 14 (By Mail)— Mr. C. Pritz left for Montreal on Monday to take a position on a boat sailing from that port. Mr. Edgar Matthews took him to Trenton to get the night train as he had to report for duty in Montreal early Tuesday morning.

Mr. David Steen has taken Gerald's place on the Hillier section of the C.N.R.

Mr. Clifford Cassidy accompanied Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Lloyd to Buffalo on Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Matthews and Mrs. Florence Titus motored to Campbellford on Saturday and spent the day.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Tubbs are visiting Mrs. Tubbs's brother Messrs. Will and Jim Turvey before leaving for their home in Florida.

DO YOU SUFFER FROM CONSTIPATION?

Countless remedies are advertised for constipation. Many relieve for the moment but they are habit forming and must be continued. Others contain calomel and dangerous mineral drugs, which remain in the system, settle in the joints and cause aches and pains. Some are harsh purgatives which cramp and gripe and leave a depressed after effect.

Avoid lubricating oils which only grease the intestines and encourage nature's machinery to become lazy.

A purely vegetable laxative such as Carter's Little Liver Pills, gently touches the liver, like starts to flow, the bowels move gently, the intestines are thoroughly cleansed and constipation poisons pass away. The stomach liver and bowels are now active and the system enjoys a real tonic effect. All druggists 25c and 75c red pkgs.

And Blaide, what do we care if they all fuss and talk and get photographs and rant around?" he demanded, courageously. "And what do you care if my motor and aunts like you or not?"

"Oh, but I do not care!" Mary Kate answered promptly. "That's going to be part of —— the fun," she predicted youthfully. "I'm going in for all this—tremendously, Chris, I'm going to dress smartly—but plainly, you know. I'm going to speak German and French like a native——"

"French like a German native, and German like a French native—"

"Ah, well you can be funny, but you wait and see. And I'm going to learn housekeeping, and housework, and to wear linen suits, and girls in fussy hair and smocks, and a fat baby with a colored nurse—"

"Why colored? To save the child's eyes?"

They were both laughing and for an instant his brown lean cheek touched her satin-smooth fair one, and her silky hair brushed his cheek.

"No, but because they're so kind to babies," she explained seriously. "We will have a country place——"

"My grandmother Vreeland's place—"

"Well. And this troop of Irish-American roughnecks will be perfectly famous," Mary Kate continued. "And I'll be the sort of—oh, well, plainly-dressed author woman, you know, who knows all about books, and plays and German and Italian—"

"It was French, a minute ago."

"Oh, well, French too. And I'll study the operas, too, Chris. Do you like the opera?"

"Sometimes. I like some of them."

"At the Metropolitan?"

"At the Metropolitan. The old man has a box."

"A box!"

"Certainly."

"At the Metropolitan Opera House?"

"Why not?"

"Oh, Heavens!" Mary Kate said, on a gasp. "Should I have to wear evening dress?"

Today's Poem

MY WISH

A thickety path that clambers high
From a winding road, where the world goes by;
A bit of a hut on a wooded hill
Where wind and weather may have their will;
A bit of a door that has no key,
That calls to the traveler, "Open me!"
A bit of a heart with a shelf above,
Just enough to hold the books I love;
A pipe to smoke when the crickets cry
Far away from the road where the world goes by.

The White Evening Gown for Summer

Sophistication is the order of the day. The flapper has retired to the background with the knee-length frock. And particularly striking in elegance and femininity is the new evening mode.

Charming evening gowns for wear at the formal Summer festivity reveal a great variety of materials to choose from and a multitude of colors.

White, smart the year round for evening wear, is very much stressed for the Summer season. And we show today an exquisite gown of white crepe lorna. The lines of the model, reminiscent of the Greek influence, are long and flowing. The double skirt falls gracefully in folds from a draped yoke. Jewelled shoulder straps hold the bodice in slight fullness.

Long white gloves complete an exquisite picture.

Five million Norway spruce trees will be planted this spring in New York State.

Fashionably Speaking

By Lucille

DEAR READERS:

Do you feel in the holiday mood? Perhaps you are already dreaming of the vacation that will not be here for many weeks. But, still this kind of weather makes you think of the glorious days of leisure, when for two weeks, or a month, or, if you are singularly fortunate, two months, you forget the daily duties and enjoy to the fullest your freedom from care.

It is very wise dear reader, to plan your holiday well in advance and by all means go away. It never is a real holiday to stay about town. You are rested, but a change of scenery and environment is far more helpful than the most restful of vacations idled away at home.

If you have received an invitation to visit, you are very fortunate, and when you are making your final preparations you must think of your hostess as well as yourself. It is all very well to say that you are the guest and so your wishes will be respected, but you will be a more welcome guest if you remember a few little points in connection with your visit. In the first place be sure to acquaint your hostess with the definite time of your arrival and departure. And when you have planned to return home at a certain day, go home then. Don't let yourself be persuaded to remain on and on because of your hostess' courteous protestations at your leave-taking. There is nothing worse than the guest who doesn't know when to leave whether it's after a five-minute call, a dinner or a week's visit.

The next thing to keep in mind is the simple matter of tidiness. The tidy guest who leaves her room always a bit will endear herself to her hostess.

Then there is the matter of punctuality at meal time. Don't be one of those guests who get up hours after everyone else for breakfast and disorganize the whole household because things have to be kept warm for you. when the range should be used for preparations for the next meal.

And here is another little thing: When you are asked to voice a preference, it may be a choice between an orange or grapefruit for breakfast, make a decision. You know yourself how irritating it is to have your guest murmur, "anything will do" or "it doesn't matter" when you wish to please them, and you are left in doubt about their likes or dislikes.

If you remember these little hints, and use ordinary courtesy all the rest of the time, you will be the most popular guest imaginable. Some other day we will discuss other vacation phases.

Fashionably yours,
LUCILLE.

THE BEAUTY BOX

The wind-blown bob has blown itself away. There was nothing very attractive about it. With the hair combed toward the face, ragged end concealed the hair line which is considered an element of beauty. We have now the flat little tendrils as fillers. A single beau catcher peeps out from under a wave dip or hides the space just in front of the ear. The girl with the permanent wave has no trouble forming these decorative ringlets. She moistens a strand of hair, twists it into a ring, pins with a hairpin. Or slaps it flat with curling fluid and bides the drying.

Green soap is often recommended for shampoos, and we don't know why. It is a thick gummy substance, of the color of vaseline. If it is used as a cleaning agent it should be dissolved in alcohol; in that form it can be more easily rinsed out of the hair strands. The chances are it is no better than pure castile, a mild bland soap that takes hold of the dirt and which can be easily removed by means of a bath spray. There are many commercial products that are satisfactory.

Correct Manners

Mrs. Cornelius Beekman

DO NOT PUT CRACKERS IN THE SOUP

Dear Mrs. Beekman.

1 Should or should not pancake be cut wedge-shape before pouring on the syrup?

2. When oysterettes, or any tiny crackers are served with soup, should these be put into the soup? I know, of course, that ordinary size crackers shouldn't.

3 After eating a cocktail, fruit cup, ice cream or the like, is the fork, or spoon, left in the dish or placed on the small plate in which the dish stood?

There is no reason why they should be cut in this form.

2 The best form says that the crackers should not be put into the soup. Each is eaten as a small piece of bread would be eaten with or without being buttered.

3. It is placed on the small plate that is served under the dish that contains the dessert.

The seed pods of the poppy resemble a pepper shaker in both looks and actions. As the pods sway in the wind, seeds are sifted in all directions.

ACTIVITIES OF ROYAL FAMILY

The King and Queen, with Princess Mary and the Earl of Harewood and several other members of the royal family, spent Sunday afternoon visiting the Royal Academy. These Sunday afternoon visits have become something of an annual institution with their majesties, who are thereby enabled to inspect the pictures with the maximum personal convenience. The only other persons present were Sir William Llewelyn, President of the Royal academy, and a few members of the council.

Their majesties remained for nearly two hours, after arriving practically unnoticed. When they departed, however, a great crowd had assembled in Piccadilly to see them.

The Duke of York today opened the fields given by the King at Hampton Wick to the National Playing Fields association, which has done much good work in recent years in providing large recreation spaces in rural surroundings for poor children. The Fields are part of the royal estate, which came to the crown when Cardinal Wolseley presented Hampton court to Henry VIII.

The Prince of Wales tomorrow will fulfil his first public engagement since his return from the African holiday expedition, when he dines with the Worshipful Company of Weavers, one of the smaller of the 1,000 persons.

"Girl Unafraid"

By Gladys Johnson

Something of the first fine edge of courage with which she had taken this heading plunge deserted Ardeth after the first few days.

Often, in the weeks which followed she would find herself standing, her hand creeping to her throat in the old childish gesture of fright, her eyes large and dark. Once, when she was sweeping the pine needles from the porch, the brown rough, the long files of pines standing motionless in the morning sunshine, overwhelmed her with a sudden sense of unfamiliarity.

Another time, she awoke in the middle of the night to hear the rain pouring on the cabin roof. She had been sleeping so soundly that for a moment she lost track of her surroundings; she fancied herself back in the flat with the Harrisons. The window was in the wrong place..... Surely there was no window there..... But must have moved the bed to a different position when she cleaned the room today.....

Through the open door she could hear Ken turn restlessly and the pressure rushed in with stabbing recollection. It was true..... no wild romantic dream after all. She was up here with Ken.....

The Dawning of Reality

In such moments she could not whip up the proud defiance. Faintness passed like a cold wind through her. She smothered her face in the pillow and cried.

But in the morning—waking to the long shafts of sunshine quivering through the pines..... breathing deep of the tingling air, there was no room in her heart for fear or unhappiness. The dream of the night before.....

On Ken as well, was dawning the sense of reality. It was the rat of worry gnawed his heart in the night, realization of Ardeth's sacrifice rushed in on him at moments, making his heart leap. He wanted to shout in a panic, that she must go away—at once. A glorious, reckless thing to do! A greatful, impossible, splendid thing —but she must go away for her own sake! Oh..... too late. Woe late in the scornful eyes of the world.

He blamed himself bitterly and futilly as he lay awake in the dark. All very well to rant against narrow minded critics, but now he had delivered this girl he loved into their mercies. They would owe to pieces the impulsive generosity of her. They would search her sweet frankness for ignoble motives. Soiling the fineness of her as hot fingers can bruise delicate petals.....

Heartaches

When she appeared in the doorway of his room in the morning, a gay little greeting on her lips, his heart would ache in secret. Dressed in the plain aprons of pink or blue gingham which she had bought in the mountain store, her half-damp and combed into loose waves of dark gold, she looked like a good little girl freshly primped up for school.

He had hurt her..... he had hurt her..... the knowledge beat through his thoughts like a doleful bell.

As Ken grew stronger the note of tenseness in their relationship deepened.

For long hours now he sat on the porch in the morning sunshine or lay in the afternoon shadow of the cabin where the hill sloped away to a brown trout stream. Ardeth was always nearby sewing or reading aloud from one of the books Tom faithfully sent up every week.

Ken was still thin, but there was a coat of tan now on his face and hands and the haggard look had left his eyes. He was very gay and chattering when he talked to her. They had adopted the laughingly belligerent poise of children who hastily strive to conceal their true feelings.

Ken never kissed her now. Once when their fingers met, both drew sharply back as though the contact had burned. Ardeth was startled to a little nervous laugh. Her eyes fluttered up to the man's, fell away when she saw that he was watching her with eyes gone deep and intense.

The next moment they had themselves in hand. They were laughing at the antics of "Grumpy" the lame bluejay who had adopted them for the sake of the dinner crumbs. But there was a strained note to the laughter and in a moment the girl slipped away to the house on a pretext.

How long could they play the role, she was asking herself, frightened. How long—when she was so tinglingly aware of Ken in every drop of her blood. When his mere touch could rouse such shivering gladness in her heart.

She became rebellious and unhappy. She hated the murmur of the pines. They became the scandalous whispers of the women who had haunted the Smokerie in the old days. Pollie—trivial women like Jeanette—like Maida Durant..... women half alive—poured into conventional molds. She saw her face in the sunshine and grimaced at them. Then she broke into startled laughter.

At Ken's questioning glance she exclaimed: "I'm growing foolish up here in the mountains, Ken. Pretty soon I'll be answering my own questions, like the old prospector who went by here the other day talking to himself."

But there was no answering smile in the man's eyes. He had guessed her thoughts.

One day, as she stooped to draw the collar of his robe closer about his throat when they moved to the afternoon shadow, the man's reserve broke. She was suddenly in his arms, her head against his breast, eyes looking almost fiercely into eyes.

"Where's it going to end, darling?" he spoke through set teeth. "What are we to do when I'm well and we leave here?"

The pretexx of camaraderie dropped from them like a cloak.

The Fat's in the Fire

"I don't know, Ken," she whispered. "I've wondered".....

"Now the fat's in the fire—with us up here together," he said, and she could not even laugh at his unpoetical simile.

She was suddenly the reckless, generous giver. "Others have done it—I mean real people—people who care enough to defy the world. We'll go far away. We'll work together—we'll manage somehow."

"Ah, we've earned our happiness, dear!"

He held her face between his thin brown hands and regarded it a little sadly. A sweet, vital thing..... tenderly colored..... easily hurt..... He shook his head. "Can't get away with it, honey. We're not the kind to go making blood the world. What a mess it is....."

She drew away, trembling.

Silence fell like a curtain between them. A curtain neither of them dared to lift.

Ardeth tried to think of trivial things—the sensible little tasks or every day which were small anchors holding her safe. Prunes for breakfast to be set to soak. A list of things to buy from the store down the road. She must go down there—there would be mail waiting for them. It was the day for Tom's letter, for methodical Tom wrote twice a week regularly. Long, careful, rather solemn letters.

"All's Well That——"

A long legal-looking letter for Ken and a fat one from Tom for herself.

She read it as she walked back from the store along the brown dirt road. Singing silence of the mountain afternoon about her, broken only by the scolding of the jays and the whirring of insects. Now and then a jewelled flash as a bluejay swooped from a pine tree with a rush of wings.

Then, sunshine and pines and the ribbon of road were receding to a great distance and the mountain stillness seemed to toss with voices.....

Ardeth was reading, with eyes gone wide and dark and a heart which had set up deep pounding..... Tom's letter, telling of the divorce suit which Cecile had so unexpectedly filed. Tom's letter—bringing release—making their world turn suddenly right.

Ardeth found that she had gathered the precious sheets of paper close to her breast. She had started on a stumbling run to the cabin.

THE END.

ARREST MAN IN CHEQUE CASE, FOUND NOT SANE

Will Be Taken to Rockwood—Said to Have Called Himself Priest.

Michael Maloney, a man it is alleged of many aliases, was arrested yesterday afternoon as he was proceeding along the Picton highway towards Belleville by Provincial Constable Hamilton and Sergt. Detective John Hrushiek of the city force, on information received from Picton and through warrants issued by other cities charging in most instances bearing fraud and obtaining money by false pretences. Maloney it is alleged tried to pass a large cheque in Picton and this matter being referred to Provincial Constable Chisholm of Picton he made an investigation but found the man had left the town and he immediately notified Belleville with the above mentioned result. After being incarcerated in the Belleville police station, two physicians of the city were called into consultation and after a close examination pronounced the man of unsound mind. The Provincial Police are taking Maloney to Rockwood asylumafter as soon as arrangements can be made for his admittance. It is understood that charges have been leaned against this man in Gananoque and Brockville, where he posed as an Irish priest.

Rain Falleth on the Earth Beneath

Rainfall Worth Millions of Dollars to Eastern Ontario

Gentle rain, falling persistently for two days and a night has been of incalculable benefit to farmers in this district. "This rain is worth a million dollars to the farmers of the Bay of Quinte district," one bank manager stated to the press this morning. "They have all practically finished their seeding and this rain is just what they needed to start everything off on the right foot."

The probabilities today point to a continuation of the drizzle.

LOCAL OFFICERS HOLD TWO MEN DROVE CAR HERE

Two Men Face Nominal Charge of Vagrancy In Local Court

AWAIT WORD FROM WEST

Windsor Man Expects to Come Here to Look Over Motorcar

A quiet but effective piece of police work brought two much wanted men into the police net early today. Sergts. Harman and Constable Fred Tizard arrested John Ciosofetti of Windsor and William Sedgman, alias William Keene of Cleveland, Ohio. Today they appeared, in police court on a nominal charge of vagrancy and were remanded at the request of the Chief Constable for one week without bail. In the meantime the police will communicate with the authorities in Windsor and Cleveland as to the disposition of the two men. In the capture of a Checker taxicab owned by J. Mirsky, 103 London Street, W., of Windsor was taken Ciosofetti being in charge.

This checker cab from Windsor has been in the city for a couple of days and the police have kept a close watch on its movements. Early this morning Sergt. Marman and Constable Izzard saw the car parked in front of the Perfect Cafe and waited for the outcoming of the men. When they came out the police questioned them and took them to the station for further investigation. It was learned that Ciosofetti was a driver for the Checker taxi cab in Windsor and had left Windsor on Sunday for a trip to London with a fare and should have returned by Tuesday night. Keene, the other man taken, admitted being a fugitive from justice as he should have surrendered in Cleveland police court yesterday but jumped his bail and he said he went to Windsor where he hooked up with Ciosofetti. In his possession were a number of traveller's cheques some of which had been used. Neither of the men had a large amount of money when arrested. His address is 3134 Superior Ave., Cleveland, Ohio, and he told the police his trouble in police court was with his wife.

Ciosofetti is known to the Belleville police as he formerly lived in Trenton and this city.

Most likely both men will be turned over to the proper authorities after they appear in court in a week's time.

J. Mirsky, Windsor, owner of the Checker Taxi cab, that was confiscated early today, when Ciosofetti and Sedgman alias Keene was arrested was in communication with long distance telephone early today with the police of this city. He notified the police that a warrant of theft had been issued against Ciosofetti and that he, with the police officers, was coming to Belleville tomorrow to claim the property and take back the accused. Sedgman will be held until the Cleveland police are notified.

Legion Asks Ban on Book "Generals Die in Their Beds," to Prohibit Sale

Alleged Book Contains Libels on Generals and Men of C.E.F. Force

BROCKVILLE, Ont., May 15.—(CP)—Meeting last night, the Brockville branch of the Canadian Legion adopted as a resolution condemning the book Generals Die in their Beds" recently published in England by one Charles H. Harrison and alleged to contain "slanderous and libellous" statements concerning the generals and men of the Canadian corps and petitioning the Dominion executive of the Legion to make representations to the federal authorities to ban the publication and the sale of the book in Canada and thus to prevent "these slanderous statements' being read by the younger generation.

Deputation Sees System Lighting

Smith's Falls Streets and Filter Shown Belleville Delegates

The civic deputation composed of Aldermen French, Armstrong, and Griffin returned home this morning from Smiths Falls, where last evening they inspected the street lighting system in vogue in that town. The deputation were cordially received by the Mayor and some members of the town council. On the main street the lights are on the side of the thoroughfare similarly to those in this city. On the outlying streets the lights are in the centre of the streets.

In addition to the inspection of the lighting system, Smiths Falls has a filtering plant and the deputation were shown its operation and were impressed with it. At a future meeting of the city council, the report of the deputation will be presented. The object of the visit was to ascertain if the lighting system in vogue here could be improved upon. The Aldermen were tendered the praise for the hospitality extended to them by the officials of Smiths Falls.

CAR OVERTURNED AVOIDING COWS ON HIGHWAY NO. 2

Application of Brakes on Slippery Road Upsets Car

TWO ARE INJURED

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Winters Brought to City For Treatment

Suddenly applying his brakes to avoid striking a herd of cattle that was crossing the road, Fred Winters of Grimsby with his wife as a passenger turned his car over due to the slippery condition of the pavement at a point five miles west of the city early today. Mrs. Winters was cut about the ankle and brought to the city by a passing motorist to the surgery of Dr. Cronk, where the wound was dressed. Mr. Winters was cut about the hands with glass and also had his wounds dressed by Dr. Stobo. The car was not damaged to any extent and after righting it on the road was able to be driven into Belleville. Mr. Winters and his wife were returning home after a holiday spent in Eastern Ontario. He was driving at a normal rate of speed near Niley's pavilion when a herd of cattle was allowed to pass out of the gate onto the highway. He applied his brakes, probably too sharply and the pavement being wet and slippery the car sked and slid into the ditch. The glass in the windows were broken and in the tossing both Mr. and Mrs. Winters were injured.

MARKED EVENT

At Herchimer Avenue United Church Mother's Sunday was indeed commemorated. The church was beautifully decorated with flowers and a large crowd was in attendance. The choir was assisted by Mr. E. Ridley and Miss Lorna Ridley, who both rendered appropriate and splendid solos, making the service a most memorable one for all present. The pastor Rev. J. E. Farnsworth emphasized a mother's responsibility to her children.

GOLF COMMITTEE MEETING

A meeting of the House Committee and the Entertainment Committee of the Bay of Quinte Country Club was held at the Clubhouse today. Final arrangements for the opening dance of the month were made at this meeting.

INSPECT VOCATIONAL CLASSES

In company with Mr. C. I. Prediction, principal of Queen Mary School fifty-one pupils of his class this morning visited the Collegiate for the purpose of seeing the technical work demonstrated. All the pupils in the class will write at the entrance examinations next month and the principal anticipates the greater number will be successful.

CARS IN COLLISION

Two cars collided at the corner of Station and Albion streets, late yesterday afternoon, with both cars more or less damaged. Tony Eradella was driving a truck owned by Frank Donnelon on Albion street intending to turn south on Station street, when Miss Dora Black of Tweed, was proceeding north on Station St. Either the truck did not stop at the sign or Miss Black did not observe the truck coming out of Albion street and a collision occurred. The police investigated but no charge was laid and the parties settled the amount of damage satisfactorily.

MINOR PLANE MISHAP

A flat tire caused a mishap to an R.C.A.F. plane on Mohawk Field at Deseronto recently, when in landing the plane damaged one of the wing tips. Lieut. Reid was at the controls and due to his masterful landing of the plane, more serious damage was avoided.

TO ENTERTAIN PETERBORO

Peterboro Y's Men's Club will be guests of the local clubs at the Y.M.C.A. tonight in an inter-city meeting which promises to be a delightful event. A special program has been arranged for this affair. The Peterboro club will come to the city by bus. Newton Thompson, President of International of this city, will be heard as well as several District officers.

HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY MEETS

The Belleville Horticultural Society will hold a meeting this evening in the Y.M.C.A. They will be addressed by Mr. A. B. Baird, well-known horticulturist. A large attendance is expected.

responded to, by Sister Carrie West, newly elected D.D.G.M., who thanked the delegates for their kindness in voting her to the new office, and assured them that she would do her utmost for the furtherance of the work of the Order. A statistical report was then read by Mrs. Nugent, which showed the fine work done during the past year. Mrs. Nugent also expressed her thanks at the courtesy extended to her on her visits of inspection and the hospitality shown her on these occasions. A vote of appreciation to Mrs. Nugent, for the capable way in which she had executed her duties as D.D.G.M. during the past year was moved by Brother West, Presiding Patron of Madoc Chapter 143, and unanimously carried.

A fine musical program was enjoyed by the gathering, the artists performing were as follows: Miss Helen Luccombe, Mr. Harry Gray of Trenton Chapter and Mrs. Lillian Singer.

Votes of thanks were extended to the Comrade Club for their splendid supper, and to the artists for their fine entertainment.

IN MEMORIAM

SINE—In loving memory of Mrs. Edward Sine who passed away May 15, 1928.

Her weary hours and days of pain,
Her troubled nights are past.
Her ever-patient, worn-out frame
Has found sweet rest at last.
But we behind can ne'er forget
No matter where we array.
The mother dear who left us
Last year on Mother's Day.

Sadly missed by husband and daughters Ethel and Gladys. m15-11d

TORONTO ARTIST DIES SUDDENLY

Toronto, May 15—Tragedy and poetry were strangely mingled in the sudden death last evening of Robert Holmes, R.C.A., one of the most distinguished and popular of Canadian artists—tragedy, because of his untimeliness, and poetry, because of the setting and final words of the artist.

Death came to him at the Arts and Letters Club as he closed the address at the annual dinner of the third and fourth year students of the Ontario College of Art with which he had been connected as a teacher since its establishment in 1912. He was surrounding by students and fellow-artists

REGULAR ADMISSION

FORCED TO FLEE AS HOUSE BURNS

Blaze at 29 Pine Street is Soon Subdued by The Firemen

A fire broke out in the home of Norman Williamson, 29 Pine street, early this morning and the occupants of the home were forced to leave in their night attire. The house was full of smoke when discovered by Mrs. Williamson, apparently coming from the cellar. An alarm was put in and the brigade responded quickly and the blaze was soon subdued. Mrs. Williamson feared for the safety of her children and instead of waiting to dress hurriedly left the home. The damage was only slight by the fire although there was considerable from water and smoke.

Tanlac Frees John Burkhardt of Stomach Troubles

Flat on Back, Super Medicine Puts Him Back on Job

In a few days quicker than you ever thought possible—that super medicine Tanlac starts to prove its merit. And amazing though it may seem, the more stubborn and unyielding the case may be, the more remarkable is the work that Tanlac does in straightening out weak disordered stomachs. It's a real medicine formulated according to modern medical science—that's why—not just a "patent medicine"—that makes a lot of ridiculous claims to cure everything. Tanlac was prepared for the specific purpose of strengthening the allimportant organs of digestion and because every ingredient in it is designed for helping the good work along, it has won many victories where everything else has failed. And remember this, when stomach troubles are ended you'll be absolutely amazed at the way bowel troubles, constipation, dizziness, headaches, and even rheumatism usually disappear completely. Tanlac has brought glorious new health to hundreds right here in this town. Among the recent cases is Mr. John Burkhardt who says: "I was flat on my back when I started taking Tanlac. A few doses began to improve my appetite, my digestion grew better and I was soon back on the job." Every mail brings enthusiastic letters of testimonial—2,000,000 bottles have been sold. Guaranteed by all the druggists so accept no substitute.

CHINESE BATTLE IN 'PEG STREET

Police Rout Fighters Who Leave Wounded in Gutters

Winnipeg, May 14—Axes and baseball bats were wielded in Chinatown late last night as two Oriental factions clashed in riotous street war fare. Three Chinese were seriously injured and were taken to hospital while numerous others were being attended at their homes. Seven Orientals are under arrest. Police arrived while the riot was in full swing and the battlers dispersed within a few moments, leaving wounded and unconscious men lying on the road and in the gutter.

Plans Complete for Summer Camp at Barriefield

Three Thousand Men Will Receive Instruction at Kingston

The arrangements for the summer camp of Military District No. 3, to be at Barriefield again this year, from July 8 to 20, are nearing completion. It is expected that the camp will be somewhat larger than last year as other regiments have signified their intention of taking advantage of this training period. Except for the increase in number the camp will be conducted along the same lines as previously. Battalions which do not utilize the Barriefield camp period will be authorized to carry on their field training for three days in camp and nine days drill at their local head quarters.

The Commandant of this camp will be Col. W. B. Anderson, C.M.G., D.S.O., officer commanding military district No. 3.

The 3rd Divisional Train will carry out the supply transport duties at the camp and the 3rd Detachment of the Canadian Ordnance Corp will be in charge of the ordnance stores.

Provided that sufficient candidates unroll to justify the expense, a camp school for a period of 13 days, commencing July 7, will be held at Barriefield in order that officers and other ranks, who have their theoretic al qualifications to supplement, may obtain their practical qualifications. District camp schools will be conduct ed at Barriefield during the training period covering couples of Cavalry, Infantry, Machine Guns and Canadian Army Service Corps.

The various regiments which will comprise the camp this year are as follows:

The 2nd Mounted Brigade, H.Q., Princess Louise Dragoon Guards; 3rd Prince of Wales' Canadian Dragoons; 4th Hussars; 3rd Divisional Engineers, H.Q., 3rd Field Company Engineers; 3rd Division Signallers; 2nd Signal Troop; Infantry Brigade, H.Q., Princess of Wales' Own Regiment; Argyll Light Infantry; Victory and Hallowton Regiment; Brockville Rifles; 8th Infantry Brigade ;H.Q., Lanark and Renfrew Scottish Regiment; Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry Highlanders; Ottawa Highlanders; Regiment de Hull; 9th Infantry Brigade, H.Q.; Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment; Northumberland Regiment Durham Regiment; 4th Battalion Canadian Machine Gun Corp, H.Q., No. 1 2 and 3 Companys of the 4th Battalion Canadian Machine Gun Corp; 3rd Division Train Canadian Army Service Corps No. 2 and 23 Field Ambulance Canadian Medical Corp; No. 2 Detachment Canadian Ordnance Corp No. 3 Section Canadian Army Veterinary Corp; and No. 3 Section Canadian Army Postal Corp.

There will be over 1,000 men in camp this year for the twelve days which the camp will run they will put in a period of intensive training in all branches of the service. The camp will close with a field day similar to the event held last year.

Lt.-Col. Hope has been prevailed on by the Lanark and Renfrew Regiment to retain command and this pop ular officer will again be at camp this year.

Now is the time to get your Buildings erected

There are decided advantages in undertaking building construction now. Prompt deliveries of materials at very favorable prices can be obtained and available Canadian workmen are available for the job.

Giving men work now will do twice the good it may do a year hence. Canada's favorable outlook well justifies provision being made now for expansion in the near future.

Our own new Head Office building, containing 250,000 feet of floor space is making excellent progress. Over 2,400 tons of steel structure, on 8 floors, were erected in 4 weeks, which constitutes a new record in Canada. Concrete is being poured at the rate of a floor a week.

Now is the time to build.

Distinguished Visitors at Eureka Lodge Include Bishop Vaughan

Banker Gives Address on Banking at Masonic Gathering

At a regular meeting of Eureka Lodge A.F. & A.M. held last night at the Masonic Temple, Gene Illery, manager of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, spoke to the members on the subject of "Banking". A large number were in attendance including Bishop Vaughan of London, England, who is making an official visit to the parish of the Emmanuel Church and George A. Mitchell, Assistant Supreme Chief Ranger of the Independent Order of Foresters. A degree of the craft was exemplified by the officers of the lodge under the direction of the Worshipful Master, Howard Aselstine in an efficient and excellent manner and all retired to the banquet hall for the fourth degree.

The Worshipful Master presided at the banquet and Eureka orchestra gave a number of selections. The toast to the visitors was proposed by Wor. Bro. Aselstine and both Bishop Vaughan and George Mitchell replied briefly. Bro. Illery gave an instructive address on the matter of banking tracing the progress of the institution through many centuries. He explained the uses made of banks in the present day, particularly stressing the help it gives to those who require immediate help with their private funds tied up. The industrial life of a country is materially helped by the banks and the bank is always willing to help a young progressive business man if his business is legitimate. The agricultural aspect of the bank was not forgotten, the speaker stating that it was always a pleasure to serve that it was always a pleasure to serve city.

Dust Causes Asthma. Even a little speck too small to see will lead to agonies which no words can describe. The walls of the breathing tubes contract and it seems as if the very life must pass. From this condition Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Asthma Remedy brings the user to perfect rest. It relieves the passages and normal breathing is firmly established again. Hundreds of testimonials received annually prove its effectiveness.

JOE STECHER WINS

New York, May 15.—Joe Stecher, former heavyweight wrestling champion, tossed Joe Malcevics of Utica, N.Y., last night in a one-fall match at Madison Square Garden. Time of the fall was 22.56.

RADIO FANS CORNER

Well, after thinking it over the reception last night, wasn't too awfully bad but don't run away with the idea it was good because it really wasn't. Just pass that's all. Can't roam all over the country anymore like we used to do.

The war hero and song writer Lieutenant Gitz Rice whose "Dear Old Pal of Mine" and "Hinkey-Dinkey Parlevous" helped lighten the burden of trench life presents these songs amount others when he appears with his six Canadian Mounties on the Fleischmann hour tonight along with Rudy and his Connecticut Yankees of course, WEAF at 7 E.S.T.

Old and new favourites will be featured by the Knox-Dunlop orchestra when that program goes on the air to-night over WJZ at 8 o'clock.

A new program entitled Midford Knights of the Garter goes on the air for the first time tonight over the Columbia broadcasting system WABC at 8.30. At present it is an unknown quantity but not for long.

Theme songs and selections from late Broadway hits will feature the Atwater Kent Mid-week program heard over WJZ and network to-night at 9 o'clock E.S.T.

"Lopez speaking" at 6.35 to-night from CKGW and WJZ chain so tune in on this musical maestro. It's certain to be good. B. A. Rolfe and his Lucky Strike orchestra to-night too from WJZ at 7 E.S.T. rather early but I guess for this orchestra we'd stretch a point.

Alois Havrilla who has been the master of ceremonies on Jack Pryles Melody Moments will appear as baritone soloist on the program tonight heard over WEAF and network at 9.30 E.S.T.

Outside of these programs fans I don't think the future holds anything further for us.

OBITUARY

NELSON LEPALM

There passed away recently at Christie Street Hospital, Toronto, Nelson LePalm, a veteran of the Great War. He was in his thirty-eighth year. Early in 1915 he enlisted in Belleville with the 39th Battalion later being transferred to the Machine Gun Corps. He served overseas three years two of them in France. He was gassed June 3rd., 1918 at Cambrai and his death was attributed to this attack.

His gentle and affectionate disposition and patience and consideration for others, even in extreme pain made him much loved by all who knew him. He leaves to mourn the loss, his wife, his son Nelson, and his daughter Rose Marie; his father, Charles LePalm, resides on Queenston, while four brothers also remain; Fred and Martin of Detroit, Felix and Edward of Queenston, four sisters also survive Mrs. P. Franklin, Queenboro, Mrs. G. Burns, Orillia; Mrs. R. Banks, Bracebridge, Mrs. J. Combs, Hoquiano, Washington. Requiem mass was sung at St. Michael's Church, Belleville, and the remains were laid to rest in St. James cemetery. The bearers were: Fred, Martin and Felix LePalm, John and William Germaux and Sheldon Storey.

GIANTS RETAIN THE TOP RUNG

Brooklyn Dodgers Climb Into 3rd Place in National League

St. Louis, May 15.—The league-leading New York Giants dropped to within 1½ points of the idle second-place Chicago Cubs yesterday as the St. Louis Cardinals stretched their winning streak to eight games by taking the second game of the series, 7 to 3.

The Giants had one big inning, the third, when Terry's double with the bases full scored three runs. Herman Bell entered the game in the fifth and held the Giants to one hit for the next five innings.

The Cardinals also had a big inning, the sixth, when four hits, including a home run by Frankie Frisch, an error and a walk scored six runs.

Cincinnati, May 15.—The Brooklyn Dodgers climbed into undisputed possession of third place yesterday with a 7 to 4 victory over the Cincinnati Reds in the first game of the season between the two teams.

The home runs were sufficient to give the Robins the edge. Wilcox led four hits, including two triples and a single, hit a home run scoring Gilbert ahead in the third and Johnny Frederick connected for the circuit with Finn and Lopez on the bases in the sixth. Bob Meusel hit a homer for the Reds in the sixth.

Montreal, May 15.—Newark broke a five-game losing streak when they captured a 7-2 victory from the Royals in the opening game of the series here yesterday.

Carl Fischer, Bear southpaw, was wild, and was hit hard into the bargain, but the Royals were feeble in the pinches.

Marty Griffin twirled the first seven innings and besides being hit hard in the sixth and seventh the Royals committed bad errors in these frames to practically toss the game into the laps of the visitors.

Toronto, May 15.—With yesterday's scheduled game at the Stadium between the Leafs and Baltimore rained out, the two teams face a doubleheader today and one on Saturday. The Leafs will also take part in two games tomorrow. They will play the Orioles at two o'clock and afterwards will take on the Detroit Tigers, and all the former Toronto players, including Dale Alexander, Charlie Gehringer, Johnny Stone, Reg Hargrave, George Reuss, Ray Hayworth, Phil Page, Owen Carroll and Ed Borrell, are slated to be in uniform. Many of those favorites will take part in the game.

On top of the busy time Steve O'Neill and his men will put in the next three afternoons, they will jump to Newark Saturday night for a game with the Bears on Sunday. Then jump back home again for further engagements Monday, with the Tris Speaker athletes. Sam Gibson and Kyle Graham are due to work on the mound against the Orioles today and Joe Harris will play the outfield in one of the games, probably in both.

It is a slugging team that Fritz Maisel, manager of the Orioles, pilots into town yesterday morning, only two of Maisel's regulars are hitting below the .300 mark, which is in striking contrast to the spotty way our Leafs are meeting the old onion these days. At every position but one

Raynor Crash Echo is Heard

Appeal Is Heard Against Judgement of Court on Losses

Toronto, May 15 (CP)—Who should pay losses sustained when R. H. Raynor, Picton and Belleville automobile dealer who went into bankruptcy almost 3 years ago when subsequent revelations of fraud sent him to the penitentiary was the question submitted to first divisional court at Osgoode Hall yesterday when the Western Assurance Co., the Merchants' Casualty Insurance Co. and the Retail Credit Co. entered an appeal from the judgment finding them liable to the Commercial Finance Corporation Ltd. for its proven losses on cars financed for Raynor.

His Lordship found that in July 1927 when Raynor should have had 70 cars in his garages he had none at all. Checking up on the same the two fire insurance companies insured the Commercial Finance Co. against any loss by fraud on Raynor's part and after his conviction two actions were brought for $49,708.10 and $9,495.30 against the insurance companies and for damages against the Retail Credit Co. for failure to check up on cars on Raynor's floors. Mr. Justice Garrow reserved the matter of damages and losses to the Master.

PICTORIAL GOLF INSTRUCTIONS (BY R. B. MARTIN)

Upright Swing Leads to Pivot

An upright swinger does not always have an advantage on the flat swinger, but he has the satisfaction of knowing that he is more orthodox and is also times out of ten a more graceful and easier swinger.

The upright swinger is always a pivoter. There is seldom any sway in his body at all. It will be seen in the picture here that the body has turned around to face the hole and that the clubhead has only completed about three fourths of its journey. The ball is usually picked up clean with the upright club as it comes onto the ball directly from behind.

Coast Pitcher in Great Form

Sacramento, May 15.—(UP)—A no-run, no-hit game, the first of the Pacific Coast League season, was hurled here today by Jimmy Zinn, who came to the San Francisco Seals this year from the Cleveland Indians. Zinn stopped the league-leading Sacramento Senators with his brilliant performance and the Seals won, 6 to 0.

MORNING MEETING OF SUNDAY SCHOOL

The staff and scholars of Bridge St. Sunday School have arranged that beginning next Sunday, the regular Sunday School session will be held at 10 a.m. sharp and be dismissed at 10.55 a.m. in time for Church service. All members and friends of the school are notified and asked to pass on this information.

FAST TIME ADOPTED

BROCKVILLE, May 15.—Brockville is to have daylight-saving beginning next Sunday and continuing until September 28, according to a resolution passed by a majority of one at last night's Council meeting. A petition bearing 1,100 names praying for the measure was presented to the Council. A year ago last December a referendum on daylight saving was defeated by a majority of 450.

On the Sport Trail

There arrived at the Sports' Editor's desk today a circular from the Ontario Athletic Commission respecting the events for the district and final athletic meets sponsored by that organization This is the outstanding boys meet of the year and some wonderful athletes have been developed since its inception. The true sporting spirit is developed in the district and at the same time his body is built commensurate with the sixth district. The district meet has ability. The events for the different classes are the same as in years passed with Public and Separate Schools, Junior High schools, Intermediate and senior each having classes in which to compete. The Province is divided into eight districts, Belleville being included in will be held in Kingston with T. A. McGinnis as convener on June 6th and 7th finals at Hamilton on August 22nd.

The sixth district of which Belleville Collegiate Institute and Vocational school forms a part is as follows, Albert College, Albens High School, Bancroft Collegiate Institute C S, Brockville C I, Consecot C S Delta C S, Descronto H.S., Elgin C.S., Gananoque H.S., Kingston C.I., Kingston Technical School, Lansdowne C.S. Lyndhurst C.S., Madoc H.S., MacCrytown C.S. Mariners C.S., Napanee C.I. Newburgh H.S., Odessa C.S., Picton C.I., Seeley's Bay C.S., Stella, C.S., Stirling H. S., Sydenham H.S., Tamworth C.S., Trenton H.S., Tweed H.S., Wellington C.S., Westport C.S., Westport S.S., Wolfe Island C.S.

The conditions of the competitions are quite concise and are given here for information of all students intending to enter.

All ages date from May 1st 1930.

Each boy entering an event in the District Meet MUST forward an official birth certificate with his entry form. Those boys who forward birth certificates to the Ontario Athletic Commission for last year's Finals need do not need to do this. NO FEE REQUIRED.

Boys must represent the schools they are attending May 1st, 1930. No boy under 12 on May 1st, 1930 is eligible.

No boy may enter two age classes. No substitutes from other schools will be allowed in Relays.

Expenses of winners on'y, if they attain the Standards, will be paid by the Commission to the Provincial Final Meet at Hamilton. Winners who do not attain these Standards, and runners-up, may enter the Finals, but will do so at their own expense.

Winners at District meets who have not made the standards, and all seconds, must notify the Commission two weeks in advance that they intend to compete in the Finals.

The Commission is in no way responsible for any injuries sustained by boys competing, nor for any expenses incurred therefor.

Competitors bringing their own equipment to games must be responsible for such against loss or breakage.

No pupil who has not made 50 per cent. in his school examinations is eligible to compete in District or Final games.

Relay Rules—The competitor shall pass the baton within the distance of 20 yards, 10 yards within either side of the starting line marked out for each team. The baton must be passed, not thrown. The composition of the team must not be changed after a trial heat has been run.

Discus—The discus to be used in this event is to be the official men's discus according to the Rules of the A.A.U. of Canada (Weight, 4 lbs. 6 oz.)

It would seem that baseball excepting that played in the Bay of Quinte League will be all the summer pastime the fans will have in this city A number of meetings have been called regarding the senior situation in this city but none have borne fruition. The prospects of playing a series with Kingston is an amicable arrangement knowing that the four teams will not operate in the C.O.B.A. this year. The Yanks have a good team and the locals can field a team that will provide stiff opposition and probably win the banting. The season is getting late and certainly some start should be made and a direct announcement whether or not the Belleville Nationals will operate this summer.

In the advent of no baseball for Belleville, softball should have a successful season. The league is away to a good start and the five teams that will compose the loop are the best that ever represented the city. The Whoopees, Nationals, Frontenacs and Ciaco are all rebuilt and Trenton will have the splendid team of last year. The Nationals under the direction of Mr Allan Meagher should be in the fight through the season. He captured nearly all of the old Beaver team and the National Bakeries are sponsoring the team. The Whoopee under Sergt. Lloyd will be strong while Rev. Mewhirt can be expected to produce a fast nine. The league will be handled by Harold Woodley and this young man knows the game and will rule impartially on all matters affecting the League.

Wise and experienced mothers know when their children are troubled with worms and lose no time in applying Miller's Worm Powders, the most effective vermifuge that can be used. It is absolute in clearing the system of worms and restoring those healthy conditions without which there can be no comfort for the child, or hope of robust growth. It is the most trustworthy of worm exterminators.

Discovery of a new short length wave, that easily may develop into a death ray, but also has great curative properties, is announced.

Maisel has a player clouting the ball at a higher figure than has Steve O'Neill.

Si th Anniversary . . . C. N. R. Broadcast

Toronto, May 15.—Eileen Kelly, soloist during the first Canadian National Railways' broadcast from Toronto six years ago will be heard again Thursday night during the sixth anniversary broadcast of CNRT. It was on Friday, May 16, 1924, that the first programme was presented from CNRT and for several years Friday evening was known in radio circles far and wide as CNRT's night. This was altered two years ago to Thursday in order to tie in with the other stations in the Canadian National network. Miss Kelly will sing "Cara Nome" from "Rigoletto", "When Spring Awaken" and other numbers. Allan Burt, well-known Canadian baritone will sing English, Irish and Scotch folk songs and several French and Italian airs. Viola solos will be contributed by Milton Blackstone, who will play on this beautiful instrument, no seldom used for solos, numbers from Pach, Tartini, Cala and Lotti. Mrs. A. J. Gibson will be accompanist and on orchestra under R. N. Cornfield will play "The World Is Waiting For The Sunrise", "Song of Love", the ballet from "Lasource" and Massenet's "Aragonaise". The programme will be broadcast from seventeen stations.

Foresters Greet Assistant S.C.R.

G. A. Mitchell of Toronto Addresses I.O.F. on Lodge Matters

An important event in the history of Court Moira No. 32, Independent Order of Foresters, took place last night in the True Blue Hall on the occasion of the official visit of Mr. George A. Mitchell of Toronto, Assistant Supreme Chief Ranger, in addition to the members of the local court a large delegation was present from Court Shannonville.

After the regular business of the court had been transacted Brother Mitchell was introduced and gave an address which for eloquence and inspirational power has seldom if ever been equaled in the annals of the local court. The keynote of the discourse was good cheer and optimism, and it was not only a review of Forestry achievements in the past but it also gave a most encouraging outlook upon future possibilities. "The order," said Mr. Mitchell, "was established upon a financial basis that is as sound as that of the most reliable insurance companies in Canada. Each month is now showing most encouraging increases in memberships. The order has expended over 104 million dollars in benefits, mostly toward the maintenance of widows and orphans. Since its establishment 55 years ago, and at the children's home in Orillville, 1,500 children have been cared for and educated because of the death of parents or relatives." Some of these children, continued the speaker, have risen to positions of great eminence in Canada. Mr. Mitchell praised the new Post-Square insurance certificate that had been adopted last summer at a meeting of the Supreme Court at Toronto. "It was so excellent", said the speaker, "that it has been since copied by one of the greatest insurance companies in our country." Mr. Mitchell in closing urged the members to maintain an interest in the local court and to become themselves missionaries in the cause of Forestry.

Following Mr. Mitchell's address several members of the local court spoke briefly. Among them were Brothers Percy Skinner, Alf. Harrow of Court Moira, and Brothers Greatrix and Liddle of Court Shannonville. Brother William Kennedy presided as Chief Ranger and Archie Scott as Vice Chief Ranger.

Wallace Havelock Robb, Bird Poet of Canada in City Today

Mr. Wallace Havelock Robb of Abbey Dawn, near Kingston was in the city today on a short visit. Mr. Robb besides being a naturalist and poet is now a cattle man and possesses ten head of pedegreed Holsteins.

Mr. Robb, whose poetic work is so well known, was asked by The Ontario Intelligencer what he thought of the appointment of John Masefield as poet laureate of England. His reply was that the appointment pleased him for Masefield has been pure poet and he knows life and is in sympathy with the present age.

Abbey Dawn, east of Kingston, possesses a rock overlooking the water which he named some time ago the Robert Holmes Rock with the consent of Mr. Robert Holmes, R.C.A., of Toronto, the great painter of wild flowers. Mr. Robb spoke feelingly today of Mr. Holmes who died suddenly last night in Toronto at the close of an address he delivered to the Arts and Letters Club.

Radio waves travel in a north and south direction more readily than east and west, due to the influence of the earth's magnetic field.

A new method has been discovered of purifying water. It consists of pumping hypochlorite into the water, by which it is possible to reduce the purifier in one-fortieth of the previous amount.

POSTPONE LEAGUE OPENING
Brantford, May 15.—The weather conditions forced postponement of the official opening of the City Senior Football League from last night to Friday night, steady rainfall all day having made play out of the question.

Trenton and District

POSTPONED THE OPENING OF NEW BASEBALL LOOP

Picton and Point Anne Forced to Call off Engagement

(Special By Staff Reporter)

TRENTON, Ont. May 15.—Yesterday afternoon's opening Bay of Quinte League ball game at Trenton had to be postponed on account of the weather, the diamond at the new C.P.R. Recreation Grounds being in bad shape. It will likely be played at the end of the schedule. Picton who were to be the guests of Point Anne, also had to postpone their Victoria Day game there on account of the rain. It is doubtful if the Bay Shore softball diamond will be in shape for to-night's scheduled game in the town league, but if possible at all, this game will be played. Tuesday night's game between the Trenton Cotions and the Continentals had to be postponed on account of the extremely high wind, which blew the skid in all directions so that it was impossible to play ball.

SOFTBALL LOOP DATES NAMED

Canadian Pacific Team Will Play Games at New Park

(Special By Staff Reporter)

TRENTON, Ont., May 15. —At a well attended meeting of the Trenton Softball League held in the Trent Theatre last night, the league decided that all games must be played at the Bay Shore Park, and at no other place. The C.P.R. team had asked permission to have their games at their new baseball park, but it was thought by the delegates that this was too much out of the way both for the spectators and players. A revised schedule was then drawn up, as follows:

Complete Schedule

May 13—C.P.R. vs. L.O.L., played
May 13—Continentals vs Cotions — postponed.
May 15—Senators vs Ben-Proctor.
May 16—Continentals vs C.P.R.
May 19—Cotions vs Ben. Proctor.
May 20—L.O.L. vs Senators.
May 22—Cotions vs Continentals.
May 23—C.P.R. vs Senators.
May 26—Ben Proctors vs L.O.L.
May 26—Senators vs Cotions.
May 29—L.O.L. vs C.P.R.
May 30—Continentals vs Ben Proctor.
June 2—Cotions vs L.O.L.
June 3—Continentals vs Senators.
June 5—L.O.L. vs Continentals.
June 6—C.P.R. vs Cotions.
June 9—L.O.L. vs Ben. Proctor.
June 12—Senators vs Continentals.
June 13—Cotions vs C.P.R.
June 16—Ben Proctor vs Senators.
June 17—Continentals vs L. O. L.
June 18—Ben Proctor vs Cotions.
June 19—Senators vs C.P.R.
June 20—Ben Proctor vs Continentals.
June 23—L.O.L. vs Cotions.
June 26—C.P.R. vs Ben Proctor.
June 27—Cotions vs Senators.
June 30—C.P.R. vs Continentals.
July 2—Senators vs L.O.L.
July 3—Ben Proctor vs C.P.R.

Ready-made Medicine.—You need no physician for ordinary ills when you have a handy bottle of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. For coughs, colds, sore throat, bronchial troubles, it is invaluable; for scalds, burns, bruised, sprains it is unsurpassed; while for cuts, sores and the like it is an unquestionable healer. It needs no testimonial other than the use, and that will satisfy anyone as to its effectiveness.

FRANK SMITH NEW PRESIDENT CANADIAN CLUB

Two Young Montreal Hikers Assisted in Musical Program

(Special By Staff Reporter)

TRENTON, Ont., May 15—Although slimly attended due to the rainy weather, the Canadian Club meeting which was held last night in the Trent Community Hall was an enthusiastic gathering. Election of officers for the coming year and an address on Empire Affairs by Lt.-Col. H. J. Smith were the two important items of business, while a fine musical programme helped make the occasion even more enjoyable. Mrs. Luscombe, of Trenton rendered a vocal solo, and the two young Montrealers who are hiking to Hollywood were also present, and took part in the musical programme.

Officers elected were as follows:

President—W. Frank Smith.

1st Vice-Presidents—W. H. Fickle.

2nd Vice-Presidents—E. B. Jordan.

Corresponding Secretary—E. L. Fraser.

Secretary-Treasurer—H. F. Stockwood.

Executive —Rev. C. K. Nicoll, Thomas Ainslie, E. Brown, J. M. Hess, J. H. Reddick, H. E. Mayhew, O. A. Brundage, H. Owen, A. Blakey, O. H. Cobley.

DRIVERS IMPRESSED WITH UNUSUAL SCENE

(Special by Staff Reporter)

Trenton, Ont., May 15—One of the phenomena of nature which was noticed along the west bank of the Trent River above Glen Miller yesterday was a huge pile of foam at least five feet high, and extending for over half a mile down river. It was piled in drifts along the west shore, where the wind had pushed it, and had been apparently formed by the water coming over one of the dams. A pile of foam such as this is not seen every day, and more than one motorist stopped on it.

MUNRO'S CONDITION GREATLY IMPROVED

(Special by Staff Reporter)

Stirling, Ont., May 15— The condition of Mr. J. Ernest Munro, who had the misfortune to lose his left hand in an accident at the Stirling Cheese Box and Basket Factory a week or ten days ago, is improved, but the member is far from healed yet. It was thought for a time that poison had set in, but this was checked, and it is not likely that any other serious complications will arise now.

STIRLING VILLAGE ENJOYS THE TALKIES

(Special by Staff Reporter)

Stirling, Ont., May. 15—Stirling now has a completely equipped Community Hall, where talking pictures are shown twice a week, and where banquets and other entertainments can be held by the citizens of Stirling. It is only recently that the talking pictures were installed in the Community Hall, but they are giving general satisfaction, and patrons of the theatre find them a big improvement over the old system.

JOIN HIGH SCHOOL STAFF

Trenton, May 15—C. W. Speer, Toronto, was appointed to the vacancy on the Trenton High School staff at a meeting of the High School Board.

SHIMON REGAINS TITLE

Milwaukee, May 15.—Max Shimon, Milwaukee, last night regained the national amateur three-cushion billiard championship by defeating Joseph Hall, San Francisco, former titleholder.

The average operating cost of an automobile has been reduced to 6.43 cents a mile.

Frankford Workmen Believe The Industrial Depression Temporary

Hydro Will Erect New Line to Wooler This Year

(Special By Staff Reporter)

FRANKFORD, Ont., May 15.—Although industrial depression has struck this village with the closing down of the Frankford Paper Mills many of the townsfolk believe that this is only a temporary condition, and that within a year some other company will have taken over the Mill, with the resultant boom for Frankford. Many of the men have already been laid off at the Mill, but several are still working there, and until the pulp wood which is on hand is used up the mill will be kept running.

There is a strong likelihood of the power company putting the road from Trenton to Frankford next year, and if this is the case, many of the men who have been forced to leave their Frankford homes to look for work will be able to return. In addition to the paving, the Hydro will soon start construction from Frankford to Wooler at least, of the Rural Hydro system, and a large number of men will be needed.

Jack Miner and the Birds

and Some Things I Know About Nature

by

Jack Miner Himself

"COPYRIGHT AND FOR SALE IN BOOK FORM AT ALL BOOK STORES"

From the time she starts laying, she covers the eggs very carefully with grass and sticks before she leaves the nest, therefore they are absolutely out of sight and protected from a slight frost, such as we sometimes have after the wild ducks have started laying. When the eight to twelve eggs are laid she pulls down off her breast and covers them. Now comes the question, how can she pack these eggs in that down, and cover them with sticks and grass, and not leave a sign of down to indicate that there is a duck's nest within a mile? This is certainly a piece of shrewd work.

Wild ducks seldom ever leave their nests in the daytime after they start to set. I often go back to the north pond and watch them come home to feed, just at dusk, and they are usually there at twilight in the morning. This compels me to believe they sometimes stay off all night. However I found the duck's nest, and one extremely hot day I saw her in the pond so I slipped away with the kodak and got two photographs. The down keeps the eggs warm until the old lady returns; you see the heat of her body gets the ground good and warm; then she packs the down carefully and firmly around the eggs, which holds the warmth there. She then puts the thatch of grass and sticks over the down and all is O.K., for she can stay away twenty-four hours if she sees fit.

Yes, we human beings invented a great thing when we produced the thermos bottle, but to the fowls of the air the invention is as old and as new as this beautiful earth.

Then when the young are hatched and old enough to catch insects, the mother starts off with her little sweethearts toddling after her in single file towards home, where she knows she will be helped in raising her family.

Her feathers are slightly ruffled, but this is a wild duck's way when caring for the young. To me it is a beautiful sight, knowing she is on her way to the park where she will receive food and protection in time of need.

CHAPTER XIX.

My Last Distinguished Family of Pets

At the present time I have only one grey duck of my own. She is pinioned and lives in the park. In the spring of 1918 she paired off with one of the wild mallard drakes that came, built a nest and laid eleven eggs.

I have a pair of Egyptian geese in the park, and of all the web-footed devils I know of on earth, these Egyptian geese are the worst. I knew full well I must not let this duck hatch her young there, so a few days previous to their hatching I stole the eggs and put them under a domestic fowl. She hatched the whole clutch and in about twenty-four hours I moved them all to the north pond, shutting the eleven pets in a playground about two feet square which I made in front of their own stepmother. The third day I gave them their liberty by quietly removing the three boards, but of course left the hen in the permanent coop. I sat for a few minutes and watched them as they saw water for the first time. Finally all apparently lined up along the sloping bank of the pond, looking and peering sidewise as they slowly advanced to the edge of the water, where all stood still for a few seconds, then as suddenly as anything could possibly be, they dove into the water, just like eleven frogs, and equally as quick, some of them coming up fully ten feet from shore.

The first week I fed them a little custard, then gradually tapered off to oatmeal, throwing the feed in the shallow water so they would have to tip up to get it.

They grew quite rapidly, but the thirteenth was their unlucky day for a snapping turtle took one. Fortunately three other wild ducks were rais ing their families there, and these old ducks gave the alarm and I arrived just in time to see this little duck's finish; but the other ten got along O.K., for that was the last meal that old monsback ever required."

In about a week I heard these old ducks' alarming cries again. I hustled back and shortened the career of another snapping turtle, but this time my nerve was not very steady and I missed his head, but the ball split the roof of his house, causing it to leak, letting in the water that gradually pushed his life out, leaving him just strength enough to walk to shore.

About a week later I again heard these old ducks' call of distress, saying "Help, help! Help, help!" and this cry continued until I arrived with the clattering rifle in my hand; then it ceased. All were standing on the shore, and, best of all, my ten had learned the alarm and had also come out of the water; the forty or fifty ducks, young and old, were on their tiptoes, each with one eye directed towards the middle of the pond. So I hid myself in the growing rye surrounding the pond. Finally the three old birds ventured in the water about twenty feet in front of me, and just as I was about to give up watching they all three raised their heads and said "Quack! Quack! Quack!" and they swam quickly towards me and their young who were preening their baby feathers on the bank. I could not see a thing. Yet they continued the alarm, as much as to say, "There he is!" Now what could it be? Finally I saw a little speck not much larger than an ordinary bean projecting above the calm surface of the water. I watched it closely and it still grew larger until I was sure it was the periscope of one of these old four-legged submarines. The ducks having my nerves keyed up to the highest tension, I wanted to make a sure shot. When this speck was as large as my two thumbs above the water I slowly raised the high-powered rifle, took steady air and pressed the button, and I have never seen that turtle's head since.

But here is what is interesting: Of those three old ducks two were tagged in 1916, and have migrated and returned three times to my personal knowledge, and have undoubtedly been shot at, time and again; one has part of her foot shot away. Yet when this rifle cracked, right above the three, not one attempted to fly, but all rushed right up to the muzzle of the gun. This was only a starter of them exposing their knowledge; for ten minutes later each took her family right out into the water. Whether they knew I had killed the turtle, or if it was the calmness and safety brought about by the crack of the rifle the two previous times that gave them confidence to go out into the water, I do not know; only this, that they did go out with the appearance of perfect safety. Moreover I had no proof that I had killed the turtle. But time told that tale; the weather was very hot and on the second day and about the eleventh hour he arose, but minus a head.

Well, to return to the ten little ducks. I was trying to make them grow as fast as the old ducks did their broods. In other words I was racing with the old duck, but I was like Dad's last horse, just fast enough to lose. Fortunately one day mine followed me towards the house and found the mulberries. These trees were only five years old and therefore hadn't much fruit, but the ducks ate every berry almost before it touched the ground. Now I had the old duck a-going some, for these Mulberry ducks outgrew theirs. For three weeks they ignored me, but as the weather was dry and hot the bulk of this fruit gave out and the Mulberry family, as we called them, were glad to come back to their old stepfather.

They were hatched on May 25th. The day they were eight weeks old they arose and flew the full length of the pond, two hundred and forty feet. At nine weeks old they were going over the top of the white premises including the seventy-five foot chimney at the drain-tile factory. I put two tags on each duck so I could see how many returned in the spring without catching them, the one being the usual tag that I put on any duck; the other was a little narrow and contained just the initials of the duck's name. Their names were as follows:

Agnes Mulberry; Ruth Mulberry; Mabel Mulberry; Flossie Mulberry; Nellie Mulberry; Joseph Mulberry; Woodrow Mulberry; John Mulberry; Theodore Mulberry; Peter Mulberry.

In August the pond dried up and most all of my ducks went away. Mr. William Scratch, Kingsville, Ontario, shot Theodore Mulberry on September 1st at Cedar Creek. Later on, in October, seven of them were home again, and all migrated on December 2nd. On December 12th, Joseph Mulberry was shot by Mr. August Holstein of Columbus, Ohio. Mr. Holstein shot the drake near that city, and on January 3rd, 1930, Mr. H. C. Leiding of Charleston, South Carolina, killed Mabel Mulberry near that city. In the spring at least three of them returned but strangely I haven't any proof of what happened to any of the rest; possibly some may be alive yet.

It may seem strange to you that I enjoy keeping a history of different families of birds, but if you were to do the same I am sure you would enjoy it far better than tracing your own family history, for in tracing the history of the birds we are not so apt to find out things we wish we had never known.

CHAPTER XX

Ducks' Love Soon Ceases

During the last few years I have received letters from different men in America questioning about wild ducks' ways, and I have promised to answer in this book.

Yes, wild ducks as well as geese, all go through an annual moult, their wing feathers all dropping out within a few days, leaving them unable to fly for from four to six weeks, according to the healthy condition they are in to produce new wing feathers.

SOMETIMES TOO MUCH WELL-MEANT INTERFERENCE DOES THE CHILD MORE HARM THAN GOOD

By Beatrice Fairfax
An Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

It must be that one of the strongest temptations in the world, as strong perhaps as those afforded by drinking or dice, is the temptation to interfere with the bringing up of one's grandchildren.

Thousands of well-meaning young mothers are in despair at this moment, not because they believe themselves incapable of keeping the baby out of draughts or of straining its spinach, but because more information on baby culture has been forced on them than they can digest or take care of.

Their own mothers or their husbands' mothers, or both, have, you see, more or less assumed control ever since the baby's birth. These energetic, baby-worshipping women, each convinced in her heart she is an expert, have been willing to come at least as often as once a day in order to leave directions, to see that the directions have been carried out, and to disagree, each of them, with the advice of the other grandmother.

Sometimes this advice of theirs is sensible and good. Sometimes it is old-fashioned or impractical. In any case there is almost too much of it.

But its really very hard, when you've married Robert for love and regard him as practically perfect, to withstand the mother who naturally regards Robert's perfection as her own handiwork and personal testimonial. Shouldn't she have a share in making the baby perfect, too?

And it's harder still to oppose your own mother, because she's even more authoritative in the way she takes charge of the baby as though he really belonged to her and as though you yourself weren't quite grown up enough to be trusted with it.

"Don't you think," wrote a young mother the other day, "that when I carefully follow the doctor's orders and when my baby is a fine, healthy child, my mother-in-law ought not to interfere?

I do think she ought not to interfere. I think she should offer no advice at all unless somebody begs her to. If sometime the baby takes cold, as babies do, I think she should sternly force herself not to look as though she thought the baby's mother was to blame.

I don't mean that this warm-hearted and officious relative is likely to do the baby itself any harm. She merely runs the risk of ruining the young mother's nervous system and of destroying the harmony between the young parents. And that's quite a risk to run.

In fact to play the part of grandmother with the necessary tact one ought to be either so busy that one has practically no spare time, or else superhumanly self-controlled.

And if one is vigorous and just barely middle-aged and sees warmly in love with pink-and-white babyhood as most women are, I'll admit it isn't easy to play the stand-offish role I have suggested.

But there's a reward in sight.

If you, devoted, young-ish grandmothers, filled to the brim, as you naturally are, with recollections of your own experience as mothers, even bring yourselves not to interfere with the right of your daughters and daughters-in-law to gain their own experience, too, I think you'll achieve a popularity in your own family that will be worth a great deal to you.

The mother that sees you respect her privilege to bring up her children unhampered will not only be much fonder of you, herself, than she would be otherwise, but she will, as they grow out of babyhood, promote the sweet, natural relationship that ought to exist between children and their grandparents.

If grandmothers need the affection of those babies that they are so eager to handle and make love to, little children are just as much in need of grandmas and grandpas who can be leisurely and loving and non-disciplinary, and who have it in their power often to make the days that a child loves most and remembers longest.

OCEAN VESSEL SLICED IN TWO AND MIDDLE SECTION INSERTED INCREASING LENGTH BY 50 FEET

Marvel of Engineering Skill Performed at St. John Dry-dock

Copyright 1930)

St. John, N. B., May 15—Marine engineers achieved an unusual feat in Saint John, New Brunswick, when they cut the ocean tug, "St. Hellers" in half and exactly three minutes and twenty seconds pulled the two sections apart a distance of fifty-five feet. The big tug is to have a cargo-carrying section inserted thereby making the vessel's total length, when this work is completed, one hundred and eighty feet. The Saint John Dry Dock and Shipbuilding company is doing the job which must be completed soon in order to have the St. Hellers on the Great Lakes at the opening of navigation in May.

The first job of its kind ever attempted by the Dry Dock company, the St. Hellers was hauled up on the marine railway at the Dry Dock yards in three days workmen succeeded in cutting through the steel hull and dividing the vessel in two. The cradle on which the large tug rested was disconnected at the point where the vessel had been divided and, after careful preparation, the powerful electric motors of the marine railway were slowly operated. It was a thrilling sight for the little group of Dry Dock officials and spectators when the St. Hellers was seen to part amidships after which the forward section of the steamer was seen to slowly but surely move away from the solidly anchored after section. That the hazardous task was completed without mishap is remarkably quick time was a source of pride to W. H. Bline, general superintendent of the Dry Dock who personally supervised the work.

The St. Hellers is being converted into a buoy-carrying and placing boat for use on the Great Lakes by the Department of Marine and Fisheries.

Extra cabin space is being built on her upper deck to provide accommodation for surveyors and other officials of the Department which will operate the steamer.

Never before had the people of Saint John seen such a strange sight as the St. Hellers presented following the operation which separated the forward and after sections of the tug by fifty-five feet of space. To see the bow of a steamer with the large boiler and engine of the ship open to view from keel to deck was in itself an unusual sight, but the after-section of the tug presented an even stranger view. Here could be seen the bridge and cabins hanging out into space they had formerly been over the boiler room while the decks were fuel and were fuel and water tanks plainly exposed to the light of day.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

DIANE

by

J. L. Sherard

Copyright, 1930, International Feature Service, Inc

It was plain to all the office force backwash of long suppressed desires, that some unrevealed trouble had fallen on Teck. But all said hold on scanning Teck. But all the ventured guesses widely missed the mark of truth—except that of Miss Hazel Hurst, his personal secretary, as he chose to call her—and that proper and discreet young woman of the euphonious name kept her surmises to herself with no little mental trepidation, as she thought.

The truth of the matter—and it was a startling truth to Mr. Teck, who kidded himself into believing that he had been pulled helplessly down into the vortex of powerful emotions quite beyond his power to control—was that the fifty-year-old broker was deeply infatuated with the delectable Miss Hurst.

When a man of Teck's temperament, quiet, reserved, self-effacing, but anguished at last in the terrific backwash of long suppressed desires, that refuse to remain submerged, he fails for a thing like that, he fails hard.

Teck sat at his polished mahogany desk, apparently busy with his correspondence, but actually wasting much valuable time scribbling sentimental misquotations of erotic poetry on sheet after sheet of paper, and contrasting Miss Hurst with his wife, Mabel.

The comparison, he admitted with a pleasant sensation of guilt, was all in favor of his secretary. It was not that he did not love Mabel, if dull, prosaic contentment can be called love. Mabel was a model of domestic virtues, but twenty or more years of unbroken routine, drab and sodden as a washday, had squeezed the juice of sentiment out of his inherently romantic nature, and left it as dry as a sponge.

The intensity of his desire braced Teck's vacillating will. He mustered up courage to go to Hazel's desk for the purpose of inviting her point-blank to join him that evening in a quiet dinner—and then the show.

She looked up into his face without manifestation of surprise, the symptom in him of her sparkling eyes seeming to invite the question that hung hesitatingly on her lips.

But panic seized him at the crucial moment, blundering some inconsequential directions about an order, he left the room rather abruptly.

Back to his desk, the broker chided himself for his foolish timidity. He seized a sheet of paper and wrote hurriedly, under the driving impulse of defeat and thwarted desire:

"Dearie:

"I want you to join me for a quiet little dinner at the Plaza this evening I can't call for you, but will ask you to meet me there at eight. Dinner and then a cabaret. How about it?

M. T."

It was a bold stroke. The "dearie" part of it he regarded as a clever inspiration. He had hesitated an instant before formality and rashness. He put the salutation in quotation marks so as not to offend her. She would understand that he had copied it from Cable the fatherly old bookkeeping—"Cabbie" as the office force had affectionately dubbed him—a term he always used in addressing the girl to her evident pleasure. Teck felt that it wasn't copyrighted and that he could use it as well as the guileless old bookkeeper and get away with it as gracefully.

From across the big room, Teck watched and waited for the reaction. The girl read the note slowly, a second time, and then suddenly glanced across at her employer.

Hazel nodded her pert blonde head and smiled.

The effect was like setting a match to a highly inflammable object. Teck was riding on the clouds. He left the office before the regular closing hour to brush up and add all the little mas culine adornment appropriate to the role he was playing. But before he went out he stopped at old Cable's desk.

"I'm in a hurry, Cabbie, and I want you to phone to Mabel—Mrs. Teck—my wife—and tell her I won't get in until a late hour. An important—business meeting — detains me. Now, don't forget, Cabbie."

Cabbie, old and wizened and impersonal, nodded assent.

"Very well, sir."

As soon as the boss had left the office, Miss Hurst went to Cabbie's desk

"Did Mr. Teck leave any message?"

"Yes. Told me to phone to his wife that an important business engagement would detain him this evening."

Cabbie had not given to the stock excuse the honor of a doubt. Mr. Teck had been too mechanically conventional for anything to arouse suspicion in the old man's routine mind.

"Leave it to me, Cabbie dear. I'll deliver the message for you. I've got something to send Mrs. Teck anyhow."

For a pleasing instant she let her hand rest affectionately on the old man's shoulder. He looked up gratefully and nodded a sincere "thank you." It meant just one thing less to do for a tired old man who always had had too many things to look after.

Promptly at the appointed hour, Teck showed up at the Plaza. He was pompadoed, shampooed, manicured and perfumed to the nth degree of immaculate art. Visions of bright lights, of the entrancing strains of music, of a cozy little booth screened and secluded where they could have a long, uninterrupted tete-a-tete, filled his mind with rosy pictures and made him almost riotously happy.

As the moment of meeting approached, however, he began to weaken a little on the show. It offered too much dangerous publicity. He would get out of it if he could. There was entirely too much risk of having snoopers and squealers carry the news back to Mabel.

Teck stepped quietly into the room, bathed in a soft light, where she stood waiting.

A dazzling figure came up to him, excitedly.

"Oh, Mannie, how happy you've made me!" sounded a quick, rapturous voice, as two gleaming arms, flabby fat, with difficulty restrained a wild impulse to steal round his neck. "And you called me 'dearie' for the first time in—oh, I didn't know for many ages! I though you had ceased to care as you once did, Mannie, love. That precious little note! I'm the happiest wife alive!" And a whole lot more gush like that.

Manning Teck rose to the occasion with sheepish but creditable sportsmanship.

"T-yes, Mabel, I guess I am gettin' a bit—sentimental—in my old age."

THE END

Huntingdon West

West Huntingdon, May 14 (By Mail) —Mothers' Day was a day at West Huntingdon long to be remembered. The programme was carried out very beautifully with the Pianist Miss Kathleen Sarles at her place. Special singing was put on by Mrs. Willie Pitchett, Mr. Lorne Wilson and Mr. Elmer Post. An address and a beautiful letter was given very feelingly by Mrs. Truscott and Mr. Arthur Wilson. Mr. Carr read a very suitable poem and Mr. Bray led in prayer. After the calling to the front of the church, the Sunday school staff of officers. There was a beautiful baptism of two babies, Mr. and Mrs. Sandy McCurdy's and Mr. and Mrs. Foster Wilson's. After the ceremony Mrs. Cooke presented the two babies with certificates. Mr. P. Carr led in prayer. Collection was then taken up by two little boys, Keith Bray and Master Harold Thompson. After singing that popular hymn "We give Thee but Thine Own," the Benediction was pronounced in unison.

The regular monthly meeting of the W.M.S. was held at the home of Mrs. O. Poste on May 8th at the usual hour opening by singing the Doxology followed by prayer by several of the members, a good number being present. Roll call was responded to by the key word "Create." Minutes were read and adopted. Scripture lesson was taken by Mrs. F. Ashley, Hymn 296 was then sung. Watch towel was answered by several of the Heralds. Duet by Mrs. Truscott and Mrs. S. Fargey. The study book was then taken by Mrs. J. J. Wilson. A splendid reading was given by Mrs. Joe English in her usual way that had great hearing. The business part was taken up and several items of interest were discussed. The meeting was closed by singing that good old hymn "Come to the Saviour."

It was decided to have an open meeting inviting the different auxiliaries of the different churches around on May 22nd, 1930.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Welsh of Moira visited Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Sarles on Mothers' Day.

Mr. and Mrs. F. Palmer visited Mr. and Mrs. Frank Ashley on Sunday.

FIFTY YEARS OF CONSTANT ENTERPRISE

THEY ARE IMPERIAL

The men who work for Imperial are Imperial. Most of them have ownership in the company, for Imperial Oil has made it easy for them to acquire stock ownership. Through their committees, they also have their part in managing the company. They share both Imperial's profits and Imperial's affairs.

Some of these men have been with Imperial almost since it began fifty years ago. Many of them have been in the company for twenty-five or thirty years. When they retire from active work, they remain "Imperial" men under the Imperial Oil Annuities Plan.

People trust Imperial Oil products because the men who make these products take pride in their work and in its result—incentives always to do their best.

That is one reason why Imperial has grown in fifty years from a small plant at Sarnia, Ontario, to a great company operating Canada's six largest refineries, with miles of tank cars, ships on the Atlantic and Pacific, stations in every corner of Canada, thousands of partner-employees.

Fifty years of constant enterprise are in the products Imperial Oil sells today.

URBAN DECENTRALIZATION

While the growth of cities is what concerns many of the smaller centres, there is serious talk in large centres of the real need and urgency of decentralization. Migration to large cities is not all from the farm but from the smaller cities and towns the newcomers of cities come in increasing numbers.

The New York Times discusses the question under the heading "Cities, Big and Livable."

"This is the arrival of an era of decentralization in industry, and with it in population. The future is pictured as one in which industry, favored by the development of power transmission, has departed from the vast human hives which the factory system built up and dispersed itself over the country in moderately sized population units. Some prophets have gone so far as to see our principal highways flanked by virtually continuous lines of urban settlement and activity backing in turn upon a rural hinterland. This forecast has been based on fairly numerous experiments by large business enterprises. But apparently the centripetal urge has so far been stronger than the flight from the centre.

"One reservation, however, is in order. When people speak of decentralization they have in mind the very best cities, in which the nervous tension of living, the congestion, the noise, the complicated traffic problems are needlessly more than even a jaz generation can stand. In this sense it may well be that decentralization is not far removed. The process has been strikingly operative within New York City, where population in great numbers has moved away from Manhattan Island to the outlying boroughs. It may be found to apply to Greater New York as a whole, which gained 860,000 people between 1910 and 1920, but which according to present estimates, will show not much more than half that gain in the present census. The figures for New York, Chicago, Philadelphia and Detroit will be instructive on that point."

GRAND STANDS

Grand stands are under attack in larger cities for too many of them have fallen down with loss of life and property in the States in recent years. College stadia have been scenes of many such mishaps.

The American Standards Association has appointed a committee of engineers and construction experts to formulate rules for the proper building of grandstands. One newspaper discussing stands says that wooden stands may be built cheaply but they are often thrown together cheaply with an idea of the greatest number of seats possible as the goal. Standardization of structures is felt to be the need across the line.

NANSEN AS EXPLORER

Death of the explorer Nansen who died Monday while he had in contemplation a trip over the north pole in a Zeppelin, attracts attention to the easy means that explorers have today in reaching the polar caps. Nansen and others had the hard route to go, they had no planes when they sought the pole. Even Commander Peary, the discoverer of the North Pole had to use the older means of ships and sleds.

Yet Nansen and his class kept up the fight for conquest of the pole. He it was who had his craft attached to an ice field in order to drift over the pole. His theory worked out all right. While he did not reach the pole, his explorations proved of invaluable aid to his successors.

Nansen was a statesman also of world prominence but he returned to his first love, exploration.

FOREST FIRES

Forest fires have started unusually early this year in parts of Ontario.

What with the loss of valuable timberlands, and the menace of life and property and time spent in battling the outbreaks, fires are the greatest foes of mankind.

In Canada there has been ample experience with these destructive force which have caused untold harm.

The very fact that fire is so easy to start and so difficult to control should be impressed upon every mind as the summer season approaches when picnicing parties visit woodlands and resorts and start fires to prepare meals. Eternal vigilance is the need.

An elderly Quaker gentleman riding in a carriage with a fashionable girl decked with a profusion of jewelry, heard her complaining of the cold. Shivering in her lace gown and shawl as light as a cobweb, she exclaimed: "What shall I do to get warm?"

"I really don't know," replied the Quaker solemnly, "unless thee should put on another breastpin."

Little Doris was drawing a portrait of her father. When she had labored for some time she stopped, and after seriously inspecting the likeness, exclaimed in disgust:

"Oh, dear! I think I'll put on a tail and call it a monkey.

GREEN RAIN

The barns are sleek with rain
Among the steam of blossoming apple trees,
The robins wade in wet grass to their knees,
The maple woods again
Turn the black asphalt green,
And from the sky of dripping leaves there falls
Green rain at slow monotonous intervals
With a sea-wind between.

SIXTY-FIVE YEARS AGO, April 14, 1865, President Lincoln was assassinated in the Ford Theatre, Washington, by J. Wilkes Booth, an actor. Another actor, William J. Ferguson, who was on the stage that night and witnessed the crime, died last week in Pikesville, Maryland Ferguson, a youth at the time was a member of the cast supporting Laura Keene in "Our American Cousin." He afterwards supported Richard Mansfield, and was in the original American cast of "Charley's Aunt," and achieved considerable success in Broadway productions.

A TALE OF TWO CITIES

About thirty-five years ago a Lowland laddie left St. Andrews to seek his fortune in America. He took with him the golf clubs with which he used to whack his way around the famous seaside course. Landing in New York, he took a lowly position in the electrical trade. The hours were long and the pay was meager. Nevertheless, he found time to play an occasional round of golf at Van Cortlandt Park, and once he ventured to enter a tournament at the aristocratic Morris County Golf Club.

He was unknown to the members, and they eyed the bashful youth somewhat askance, so much so that he didn't dare invite the club dining room between the morning and afternoon rounds. He sat out under a tree and ate some sandwiches he had brought along in his pocket. A Long Island golfer, seeing him all alone under the tree, went out and made friends with him and invited him to join the Nassau Country Club, which was then being formed.

A year later the bashful Scot had the pleasure of winning the national amateur championship over the Morris County course. That was in 1898. Though it was slower work, he achieved equal success in business and rose to wealth and high position. His name is Findlay S. Douglas, and he is now the president of the United States Golf Association.

He had planned to revisit his native city of St. Andrews as the official escort for Bob Jones and his Walker Cup team-mates in the British amateur championship, but, at the last moment, business cares interfered. The return of the native would have been a great day for St. Andrews, but the romance is still in the tale, and the career of Findlay S. Douglas can still remain as an inspiration to the ambitious lads of the "seaport and royal burgh thirty-nine miles northeast of Edinburgh."

LETTERS to the Editor

PROPER ZONING

133 Bleecker Avenue,
Belleville, Ont.,
May 14, 1930.

Editor The Ontario Intelligencer,

Belleville, Ont.

Dear Sir:

It is with considerable surprise that I have heard of the decision of the City Council to disregard the petition signed by householders on Bleecker Avenue, between Bridge and Dundas streets as well as many householders on Dundas Street, and permit the establishment of a cleaning and pressing plant in that vicinity.

I understand that the man who proposes to operate this establishment stated in the first place that the residents did not have any objection and also that the investigating committee reported that the residents would not bar any objection if certain precautions were taken. As the one most closely affected, I may state that I was not have any objection if certain precautions were taken. As far as I am concerned, such statements, if made, were absolutely incorrect; as in fact is proved by the text of the above mentioned petition.

Surely it is time that this city was properly zoned so that anyone purchasing property for residential purposes might be properly protected in the investment and not have it entirely at the mercy of the men who are entrusted with the government and management of our city. I cannot help wondering if the aldermen who voted in favour of permitting this establishment would have done so if it had been proposed to operate it within a short distance of their own residences.

I am, Sir,

Yours very truly,

(Sgd.) A. P. WESLEY.

This Is The Season for Mumps

Mumps is a contagious disease in which a certain salivary gland is involved, namely the parotid. Usually both parotids are diseased, one on each side of the neck. The other salivary glands may also become involved.

The three pairs of glands which secrete and pour saliva into the mouth cavity are the parotid, the submaxillary and the sublingual.

Each parotid gland is just under and in front of the ear. The sublingual is below the jaw and under the tongue, while the submaxillary is behind it.

Exactly what the poison or germ may be that causes mumps remains unknown.

But one case spreads to another, from one person coming into contact with another.

Children and young adults are most often affected, especially those between age four and fourteen. Infants seldom contract the malady.

Mumps is a disease which seems to be more frequent in the Spring and Autumn and always likely to appear in cities than in rural districts.

The length of time between the appearance of the symptoms and the infection—the so-called "incubation" period—varies. It may be three days or longer, up to a fortnight or more.

After this the fever starts, although in mild cases the swelling on one side of the neck may be the first sign to receive attention.

As regards this most characteristic swelling, its pain is often complained of when the jaws are moved and it has not yet assumed large proportions. Then pain is felt below the ear.

It is rare for only one parotid gland to become infected. Usually the enlargement of the second appears on the one on the other side of the neck by a day or two. Occasionally it takes a week or more.

The swelling grows larger until the third day. It remains stationary for two or three days and then slowly grows smaller. In a way one might say that the more severe the case the larger is the swelling. Sometimes it is so great as actually to disfigure the expression of the child.

With the swelling there is fever. In mild cases this ranges from 100 to 101 degrees Fahrenheit. In some cases from 102 to 104.

Orchitis is often a serious complication in mumps especially during adolescence. Less severe complications may occur in adolescent girls. Sterility has been known to result in boys. It is often due to the fact that the child has been permitted to leave the sick bed too soon.

Occasionally the kidneys are involved in mumps, also nervous manifestations.

Mumps is a disease in which the house or school or institution should be quarantined for three weeks.

However, if a healthy child is exposed to a case of mumps the chances are that the disease will be transmitted. Particularly is this true as between brothers and sisters in a family.

THOMASBURG IS 100 YEARS OLD

Early History of Hastings County Village Is Told

One hundred years ago Thomasburg was first inhabited, that is, it became a place of habitation. April of th's year was the centenary of this village, one of the most beautiful, situated as it is on the hills, which at night give it a romantic atmosphere.

Many years ago the history of the foundation and the early years of Thomasburg was written by Mrs. L. K. Berry in the Tweed News. As the history proves interesting in the light of the present centennial the sketch written in the News is reproduced below:—

Rawdon township was surveyed in the year 1820 by Samuel Benson with a party of assistants. The first to settle in the township were Michael Donohue and Charles Coolan. They settled on or near Sugar Island. Mr. Sullman soon after came to the island and Mr. B. Reid to the 11th concession, near the Anglican church.

The first family to move into what is now called Thomasburg was that of Mr. Thomas Clare. This was in 1830. Mr. Clare had helped to survey the township, while doing so he fell into one of its streams and was nearly drowned, which stream has ever since gone by the name of Clare River. While surveying he had a good opportunity to select the best location and the spring, so much used and prized ever since, decided his choice. He was soon followed by Messrs. James Morton, S. Halstead, Thos. Graham and Thomas Nichol. Mr. Clare lived on the east side of the spring and Mr. Graham and Mr. Nichol on the west side, and from these three Thomases the place received its name. Land was soon taken up by other settlers among whom were John Brown, Geo. Stokes, James Barber, John Prentice, James Cobber, John Embury, Robert Morton, F. Oldrich, Richard Newton and Isaac Dean; John R. Way being the first to move into what is now the Bethel neighborhood. Soon after came George Hart, William and Miles Orton, David Maynes, Mr. Trumpour and others. These early settlers were long without religious services.

A goodly number of them were from Ireland and brought with them a good deal of Methodism and Methodists. They contributed largely to Canadian Methodism, both ministers and laymen; and we remember it was a party of Irish Palatines that started the first Methodist society in America in the city of New York, also the first Methodist society in Canada and one of these was an Embury, relatives of the Emburys of Thomasburg. Samuel, son of Philip Embury was also the first regularly appointed Methodist class leader in Canada.

The first religious service held in Thomasburg was at Mr. Clare's house and was conducted by Mr. Richard Newton, father of the late R. Newton of Woodstock, and the late John Newton of Bethel. The first preaching was by Mr. William Bell—we learn a preacher of Huntingdon, a man much loved for his integrity, earnestness and intelligence.

The first Methodist class leader in Thomasburg was Mr. John Brown, the first at Bethel was Mr. David Maynes and the first at Rawdon, Mr. David Lowry. Mr. William Hales was another very acceptable local preacher and it was his daughter Margaret who taught the first public school in Thomasburg and assisted in the first Sabbath School.

Our fathers, where are they?
In an ample plot, surrounding the Anglican church, of parallel history.

One by one they laid their burdens down,

Make a Child's Tasks Easy and Short

It is one thing to trust and love a person, to think he is above the average, but it is quite another to overdo that attitude. Overidealization is bound to come to grief sooner or later. And the reason is not far to seek.

We all are human. We all have faults. We are prone to make mistakes, disappoint our friends or somehow create doubt in the minds of those who care for us.

When we do commit error, when we fall off the pedestal that adoring or beloved persons have placed us on, there is a cruel and harsh awakening and such awakenings usually hurt!

This business of glorifying others almost to the point of absurdity has a sound scientific foundation.

Between the years of 5 to 8 all children worship their parents.

During these impressionable years they think no persons could possibly be more wonderful.

The attitude starts off the overidealization tendency in all of us. It more or less dominates throughout life.

Now then, some of us have it strong er than others. In some it sticks long er. In some it remains an overpowering factor. The habit of placing a halo of glorification over the heads of all those beloved becomes a fixed attitude.

It would not really matter so much were it not for the fact that such over idealization is likely, sooner or later to come to grief.

And what's more, after swinging the pendulum so markedly in one direction these people almost invariably go to the other extreme and swing the pendulum too far that other way.

That is, when the overidealized person has done something that does not accord with the romantic concept with which he or she has been clothed, the disillusioned one is apt to jump to the conclusion that all the other fine qualities that the fallen hero may actually possess are as nothing as well.

The beloved object, therefore, does not receive credit for even a single virtue.

Let us idealize by all means, but let us also be sane and sensible.

Let us be prepared—always—to make allowances for the frailties of human nature.

If we don't we are sure to be disappointed and such disappointments can actually sour a whole life.

Women probably tend to glorify more than men and especially is this true during the romantic years of courtship. For every woman likes to flatter herself that her man—the man she has chosen—is different from all others, whereas other males may flirt a bit or actually philander, where as others may grow cold in affection, surely the man whom she picked is ideal.

Then after the honeymoon stage is over such a woman comes face to face with stern reality and her disillusionment becomes as exaggerated as was her original idealism. She finds that her husband is human after all—not a god nor a half-god. And then she concludes at once that happiness in this world can never be hers.

Try to think well of others, yes. Endow them with ideal qualities, if you will, but never, never clothe them in a garb that your common sense tells you is rather far-fetched and absurd.

The human being is full of frailties. Idealize, but don't over-idealize if you would remain serene.

Fashionably Speaking
By Lucille

DEAR READERS:

As many of you are either in the middle of your Spring housecleaning or contemplating on doing it in the very near future, it seems a fitting time to say a few words on the color theme for summer. Of course the most important thing to remember is that the keynote of refreshment in home decoration is the colouring on the walls, ceilings, and hangings. Especially lovely and exquisite for the boudoir or dainty drawing-room is the union of pale turquoise with pale lavender. Doesn't that sound lovely, and I assure you it looks lovelier than it sounds. The use of green blue this spring has gained great favour. It may range from turquoise to peacock and it will give great opportunity for satisfying harmonies.

Now if you really feel you should like to work out the idea, follow closely. Start with your window drapery. Choose a suitable weave and carry your colour from these to other parts of the room by a cushion, a couch throw, lamp shade, small painted table, or a box or basket. Let the size of your room rule the number of articles you use in the turquoise shade. Your room should never have the appearance of catering to a special vogue. You should balance the colors and this is not always an easy thing to do and requires much care and studying of effect. It will be most interesting to bring your rooms into harmony throughout their furnishings, and you will enjoy the excitement.

A short time ago dear reader, we spoke on redecorating the kitchen and now that you are housecleaning it would be a splendid time to look up our little article and refer to it before you re-paint and decorate. You will remember that we suggested the combination of apple green and yellow, two delightfully refreshing Spring colours. If you have mislaid the article we will gladly reprint it or mail it to you. You have only to ask. After all the kitchen is perhaps the most important corner in your home for is it not there that you spend the most time in the house? Therefore if any room should receive attention it most assuredly should be the kitchen. It should not be crowded, or stuffy, or dark or gloomy, because if it is take it from me you will be stuffy and gloomy too. Surroundings have a great deal to do with our good temper and if we must be in the kitchen much of the time, at least let us make it as cool and cheerful as we possibly can.

Fashionably yours,
LUCILLE

Today Poem

A TESTING TIME

From out a lowly, sheltering tree
There comes a whispered melody—
A mating skylark's roundelay
Prophetic of a brighter day:

Though for a time I cannot fly
And clouds have overspread the sky—
I sing this song of gratitude
For plumage soon to be renewed.

Let not your pinions drag in dust,
But sing a little song of trust:
Be not discouraged, weary, sad—
Better, much better to be glad;
With courage held your things awing,
And every once in a while sing:

CHOCOLATE FUDGE CAKE

4 squares unsweetened chocolate,
1 tablespoonful boiling water,
1 cup sugar,
½ cup butter,
1 cup milk,
2 cups flour (Five Roses),
1 teaspoon Magic Baking Powder,
1 teaspoon vanilla,
2 egg whites, stiffly beaten.

Shave or break the chocolate in small pieces, add three tablespoonfuls sugar and the boiling water, and melt over hot water. Cream the butter, add sugar gradually, beating well after each addition. Add the egg yolks, continue beating. Stir in the chocolate. Add flour mixed and sifted with baking powder, alternately with milk. Beat vigorously. Flavor and fold in the egg whites. Bake in two layers in moderate oven. Fill and cover the top with the following:

THE FILLING

4 squares unsweetened chocolate,
2 cup brown sugar,
½ cup boiling water,
1 cup Borden's St. Charles Milk,
1 tablespoon butter,
1 teaspoon vanilla,
1 cup nutmeats, chopped or broken in pieces.

Shave or break the chocolate in small pieces and cook with sugar and milk until it forms a soft ball when tested in cold water. Remove from fire, add butter, but do not stir it in. Cool slightly, beat until creamy. Add vanilla and nuts, spread between layers, and cover top of cake.

Advice to Lovelorn
By Beatrice Fairfax
Rex and Sally

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Rex and Sally both aged twenty two, met at Summer hotel where they are employed. After the season is over Sally stops for week-end and visits Rex's people; he returns the visit to an aunt of hers, and become engaged. Then Sally leaves for her home in the West. Before parting Rex promises to go to night school, work hard and save money for their marriage. Sally writes nothing but about the good times she's having and the parties she goes to every night. Of late she hasn't written at all. Rex loses heart and quits night school. He feels that Sally no longer cares for him.

FROM REX

It looks to me, my dear Rex, as if absence was making Sally fonder of someone else." As you describe her, she sounds frivolous. If she were to earnest she would not expect you to go to night school, work hard and save money to provide a home while she goes out night after night with other young men, and, as you say, declines to answer your letters. I believe I would try to forget Sally.

Engaged to Gold-Digger

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Is a young man supposed to spend most of his salary on presents to the girl he is engaged to? My girl friend wanted a diamond ring, which I gave her, and now she expects a great many expensive attentions, including going to night clubs. At this rate, how can we ever marry?

GEORGE X.

Wouldn't it be well not to take marriage for granted, George, until you know your fiance a little better? A girl who lets a man spend more money on her than he can afford is thoughtless or ignorant or greedy. Such a girl wouldn't make a good wife and possibly even now, is only interested in the profit she can gain from a man's devotion. Suppose you tell her what your income is and ask her to help you decide how much should be set aside to meet the things of a future home. I think she will either meet this suggestion reasonably, or break the engagement, thus releasing you.

Going Out with Business Friends

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Please tell me through your interesting column what you think about girls going out with boys in their place of business. Have had many invitations of this sort but have never accepted.

TIMID

I approve very heartily of girls going out with agreeable, well-behaved young men whom they meet and know in a business way. There is no place where young people can learn to know each other better than the place of employment. Sooner or later it will crop out who is considerate, well-bred, selfish or boorish. As it's also bound to be disclosed who is in line for promotion and which is the bright young man on whom the boss has his eye.

He Breaks His "Dates"

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have known a young man about two years, but it is only lately we have taken any interest in each other. I had a date with him one night, and without giving any excuse he broke it, and he couldn't keep it. One day I had a picture of my girl friend's beau on my mind. He saw it and asked who it was. I said, "A friend." Do you think this has had anything to do with his actions?

PERPLEXED

You can hardly blame the young man for losing interest if you go about with pictures of another girl's beau on your mind. You probably did it to make him jealous and it worked too well. You might tell him in a casual way that the bracelet or wrist watch, or whatever held the picture belonged to your girl friend.

Some Parents Who Were Never Young
Miss Fairfax Pities Their Lot

It's a strange thing that the world should always contain a certain number of parents who were never young.

You find that absurd? But what else is one to think of fathers and mothers who show unsympathetic watching of the spirit of youth and who deny their children all natural recreation, unquestioning trust in their comfortable and dreary thing that they have made of home.

Such people have taken it for granted that such unnatural men and women live only in oldfashioned novels. You may have supposed that all youth is untrammelled nowadays and that in so free an age as ours, the last thing we need worry about is excessive parental severity.

But I assure you that these joy-killing parents do exist. Not a week passes that I do not receive anguished letters from their unhappy children.

"Our dad is different from all people that ever lived," an innocent sixteen-year-old girl wrote me the other day. "He thinks all amusements are wrong and foolish. He can't even go to a show, except by chance. My eldest sister eloped at the age of twenty. She went to be good, he can't we enjoy life a little? How can we make Dad understand?"

The trouble is that Dads of that order do not understand until an over repressed child breaks loose, and by some way that the parent finds highly distasteful. In most cases he does not understand even then. Can it be his own fault when a daughter elopes, like the sister of my correspondent? What father admits it? Can it? Is it his own fault when the boys run away from home before they have finished school and are never heard of again? Prove it to him if you can.

It goes without saying, I hope, that I am not pleading for lax, neglected homes, where boys and girls follow their own most reckless impulses, restrained by no wise parental authority.

On the contrary, I believe that parents can scarcely supervise too carefully the occupations and amusements of their young sons and daughters.

All I am suggesting is that young creatures cannot grow and develop healthfully, deprived of every opportunity for play. Parents have their choice. They can permit natural legit imate recreation, or they can face the explosion that sooner or later is bound to come.

Perhaps the most exasperating feature of it is that it is so often carried on in the name of religion.

It is this sort of thing of which an eighteen-year-old girl who signs herself "Silent Sufferer," is, I should say, an almost too uncomplaining victim. "I am employed all the week," she writes, "and Sunday is my only day at home. My parents go to church very often and my mother thinks I have no respect to religion because I don't go every time they do. She is so sad and gloomy all the time. I have been to only two dances in my life. If I go to a show mother will hardly speak to me for days. I've never had any fun in life at all. Shouldn't Christianity begin at home?"

Even if the writer of this letter doesn't develop melancholia, she is at least being entirely unfitted for life through having no association with other young people and no playtime. But who is going to explain to that harsh church-going mother that in the name of Christianity she is committing something that might well be called a crime? And who is going to arouse in that long-suffering daughter the spirit of healthy independence that eighteen years of submission to a parental steam-roller have apparently so thoroughly crushed in her?

Must we be tolerant of such parents on the ground that the flower of doing? their own youth was blighted by misfortunes we know nothing about? Is it merely that they have stupidity, almost brutality, forgotten the lovely careless playtime of their own lives? Or the spirit of healthy independence and young laughter, did love itself, make no impression on their stony hearts, so that in denying joy to their children, they are sadly do not know what they are doing?

NOTHING BUT SPRING

Of autumn, of winter; of the standing corn, the ripening fruit of summer; of all these things so dear to the ancients and to all men of modern times, the Middle Ages seem to know nothing. The autumn harvest, the mists and wondrous autumnal transfiguration of the bumbled tree, or bracken, or bush; the white and glittering splendour of winter, and its cosy life by hearth or stove; the drowsiness of summer, its suddenly inspired wish for shade and dew and water, all this left the mstolid. To move them was required the feeling of spring, the strongest, most complete and stirring impression which, in our temperate climates, can be given by nature. The whole pleasurableness of warm air, clear moist sky, the surprise of the summer of pale green, of the yellow blossom on tree tops, the first flicker of faint shadow where all has been uniform, colourless, shadeless; the replacing of the long silence by the endless twitter and trill of birds, endless in its way as is the sea, twitter and trill on every side, depths and depths of it, of every degree of distance and faintness, a sea of bird song; and along with this the sense of ...renovation to all the earth and to man's own heart. Of all nature's effects this one alone goes sparkling to the head; and it alone finds response in mediaeval poetry.—Violet Paget, in "Euphorion."

SENATOR BLAMES INACTION FOR ST. LAWRENCE PLAN ON CANADA

Canada Must Either Fish or Cut Bait, He Says

(Special to The Ontario Intelligence: Copyright 1930)

Washington, May 10—"Canada must either fish or cut bait." That is the way a senator of the United States put the St. Lawrence waterway situation. This senator, who is a supporter of the St. Lawrence project, sees a menace to that project in the bill sponsored by the rivers and harbors committee of the House of Representatives for the taking over by the federal government of the Erie and Oswego canals, now owned and operated by the state of New York.

He believes the whole proposition is a scheme to boost an All-American canal from the great lakes to the ocean and to defeat the St. Lawrence water way.

"It is Canada's inaction that is making things hard for us," said this senator. "While I am 100 per cent for the St. Lawrence route, what can I say to this so long as Canada holds back?

"We must get from the great lakes to the sea. We should go by the St. Lawrence. That is the natural route. There is no answer to the All-American plan except that the St. Lawrence is better. That answer, unfortunately, we can't give. It must come from Canada.

"I wish," concluded this advocate of the St. Lawrence route, "that we could get Canada to come across. If she does not, then I see nothing else for us but to go ahead with this other proposition.

There is a strongly running current of opinion in congress for the All-American plan. It sounds good to a lot of people who talk loudly about "American first," this sentiment is being played up by opponents of the St. Lawrence, who hope to beat the St. With the next best.

MEXICO TAKING S PECIAL PAINS TO CASH IN O N TOURIST TRADE

(Special to The Ontario Intelligence: Copyright 1930)

Mexico, City, May 10—Mexico is preparing to launch a campaign to attract American tourist trade that to date has been going to Canada and Europe.

The tourist and convention committee of the American Chamber of Commerce in Mexico City has issued a statement to the press pointing out Mexico's tourist attractions as compared with those of Canada. The statement in part, follows:

"Mexico is as convenient to the American traveler as Canada, Mexico affords greater attractions and has a more satisfactory and uniform climate. A few years ago Canada was not experiencing a large tourist business, but realizing its advantages to its development, steps were taken to create a tourist business which is very profitable to that country. It is conservatively estimated that the American tourist will leave in Canada this year approximately $300,000,000.

"Aside from the tourist business to Canada billions of dollars are spent in Europe every year by the American tourist. There is no reason why a great portion of it cannot be brought to Mexico."

Colonel C. D. Hicks, chairman of the tourist committee of the American Chamber of Commerce here, pointed out that an advertising campaign will be conducted for Mexico, similar to that which has so enormously increased Canada's tourist influx in recent years.

New Brunswick Lady Relieved By Taking Dodd's Kidney Pills

Mrs. Edward Knoade Speaks Highly of Canada's Leading Kidney Remedy

St. John, N. B., May 12 (Special)—"I was advised to use Dodd's Kidney Pills for my kidney trouble," writes Mrs. E. Kincade, 92 Durham St., St. John, N.B. "I was troubled with pains across the back, and after taking Dodd's Kidney Pills I found great relief. I had many friends speak about them. They are a good pill."

Dodd's Kidney Pills hold their popularity not because of the promises they make, but because of the good they do.

Dodd's Kidney Pills are purely and simply a Kidney remedy. They strengthen the kidneys so they can do their full work of straining the impurities out of the blood.

Pure blood coursing through the body carries to the different organs the nourishment they need to keep them sound and healthy.

CHRISTIANITY MEANS MISSION

Foxboro Presbyterian Church W.M.S. Hold Thank Offering

The W. M. S. of Foxboro Presbyterian church held their Easter Thank Offering service on Easter Sunday at the usual hour for the morning service, Mrs. C. D. McCullough, President of the League, presiding.

A good number of the congregation were present to hear very interesting and instructive addresses given by Mrs. S. C. Gay, Foxboro, President of the United W. M. S. Presbyterial, also Rev. W. S. MacTavish, B.A., Ph. D., Belleville. Mrs. Gay spoke on the life of Mary Magdalene. From a human standpoint Mary Magdalene was possessed of many undesirable characteristics, but Jesus saw in her a weary soul needing the touch of divine healing. In His own way he healed her body and made her a normal, healthy woman, full of love and devotion to Himself.

One thing we always notice in Jesus' method of working is that He never takes the old life away without giving something better in place of it. His method is always constructive. It is quite useless for us to hope to bring about any reformation in people or en courage them to give up old habits without giving them new ideals and new aims in life.

As to be "serving" in our own lives Mary would find no task too humble or difficult to undertake for the Saviour who had changed her entire life. There is little use in our saying that we love God and His work and not carrying it out in our living. The world is watching us with too keen an eye.

Mary Magdalene took advantage of each opportunity to be with Jesus and learn of Him. Let us prize these opportunities that come to us both to learn of and to work for the Master.

We must put first things first. Mary received her reward as she went along. In Luke 8: 2, "And certain women and Mary Magdalene out of whom went seven devils were with Him."

How she must have been helped by being in such close touch with Jesus.

When Jesus came to His crucifixion Mary's heart was broken but, as soon as it was possible she was at the tomb to show her love and devotion by making His body fragrant. And the reward came. It was to Mary a redeemed woman that Jesus first revealed Himself. Jesus teaches us from this story that we must rid ourselves of narrow criticism, that God's power to redeem is all sufficient and that these are unlimited possibilities for service in a life touched by the Divine hand.

Rev. MacTavish spoke on the missionary work. The Christian religion is in its essence missionary. Jesus Christ, the Divine Founder of Christianity, entered the task of giving His religion to the whole world consequently the history of His church has been largely a history of missions.

There are some thirteen systems of religion in the world but most of them are what might be called ethnic, that is to say they are the outcome of the thinking or the experience of the nations where they are found. And they are not adapted to other nations, nor have they been adopted by other nations.

Taoism is the outcome of Chinese thought, but the Chinese have not done much to give it to the world, and it is doubtful if they could have succeeded, even had they tried.

Christianity is meant for all classes and conditions of mankind, and is just as well adapted to the modern Kreasa and Chinee as it was to the Greeks and Romans in the days of the Apostles.

Jesus knew that it was the best religion that ever had been given to the world or that ever would be given, therefore He gave His disciples the Great Commission to go into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature. The fact is as has often been pointed out, if our religion is not true, we ought to change it, but if it is true, we are bound to propagate it.

Now there are many reasons why we should consider the claims of the heathen and respond to them, but we deal with only one today, viz. the reflex influence upon the Church at home.

On the first plan missionaries have opened the world to commerce. Livingstone said, "I go to Africa to open up the way to commerce and Christianity."

Trade will follow the banner of the cross as readily as it will follow the stars and stripes or the union jack. Usually it costs a great deal less to make it follow the banner of the cross than it costs to make it follow the stars and stripes or the union jack.

Again, the church at home is generally revived and quickened as she tries to carry the Gospel to the world. The whole history of the Church proves that, and we ought to learn the lesson.

We can have no satisfying experience of the presence of Christ with us unless we are trying to give His Gospel to the world. His command was "Go", and His promise was, "I am with you all the days."

Without Christ we can do nothing. We may have the best equipment that money or education can procure, but we shall accomplish nothing unless we have Him with us. Our best efforts will prove fruitless.

The Church can no more progress without Christ's presence and blessing than a man can lift up himself by tugging at his shoe laces.

Special music was rendered during the service, an anthem by the choir, solo by Miss Helen McCullough, and a duet by Miss Nellie Bell and Miss Verna Peacock.

The Thankoffering was $19.00.

COBOURG, BIRTHPLACE OF MARIE DRESSLER, FAMOUS MOVIE STAR

Screen Satellite Prefers Company of Lesser Classes

Marie Dressler, to be starred in Metro pictures, was Leila Koerber, of Cobourg, Ontario. She made her stage debut in 1892, as Cigarette in "Under Two Flags." In 1902 she was in "The Robber of the Rhine." In 1906 she played Mrs. Malaprop in "The Rivals." Years ago Marie ran a concession at Dreamland, Coney Island. She has many friends in New York society, including Mrs. Oliver Harriman She was once an intimate of Mrs. Oliver Belmont and the late Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish. Miss Dressler left on Friday, May 2, for a vacation in Europe.

She's been on the stage for forty-four years, and she started at fifteen, so you can do your own figuring. She never went to school, but the wisdom Marie has amassed can't be learned in school.

"I'm tremendously interested in people," she went on. "But only people who do things. For instance, I'm interested in you because you're clever enough to write. And I'm interested in anyone, no matter how obscure who does something. But fabulously rich people, if their money was left to them, I find utterly uninteresting. That's why I'm often not as nice to people as I should be."

Marie's conversation is like the proverbial snowball, gathering momentum and picking up all sort of stray subjects on its onward, endless rush. There is no limit to her fund of reminiscence and information.

"I'm always so sorry for rich people because they haven't any ideas. They have all the money, and not the faintest idea what to do with it. Once at my hotel in Naples there was a man with loads of money and a new title and he didn't know quite how to wear it. I said 'Do you know that my idea of he way to spend a lot of money would be to round up as many children as I could find, who couldn't afford it themselves, and take them all to the circus.'

Noble Waiters.

"He was delighted with the idea and he immediately asked the head waiter to invite the children of all the servants in the hotel. One of my favorite theories is that no matter what a person's station in life is, he has nobility in him. It will come out. And those waiters proved it. They came the next day and said, 'We can afford to send our children to the circus, but there's an orphanage down the street full of children who are really poor, and we'd like to suggest you take them.'

"We did. And now Naples is mine. They adore me. Though I didn't pay for a thing—I merely had the idea. I've told so many of my wealthy friends what to do with their money, and they're so happy to be told. For the poor things have no ideas.

The Priceless Dividends

"This is the lesson I'd like to leave for the younger generation. Every day, try to do something to make other people happy, think of someone besides yourself. And never with any idea of personal gain—because you are never repaid by the people you do things for. But oh, how it comes back to you later in life!"

Now, children, you may think that makes a Marie a Boy Scout. But she's right, and she can prove it. And if you could hear Marie say it, with a little comedy hat perched awry on her head, and a brilliant light in her eyes, you'd know this isn't a sermon but a hot tip, and you'd be better boys and girls.

"I'm a perfect example of that — everyone is marvelous to me. People say such nice things about me — and they exaggerate, making everything I do seem like an act of benevolence, when I was probably just having a good time.

"Yes, I'm interested in people, but I'm afraid of them," said Marie, slipping into irrelevancy. "Especially women. And the same is true of children. I adore them, but I would hate to be shut up in a room with one I'd be scared to death."

The Madeo Decades

Cyril Maude is making a talkie version of "Grumpy" for Paramount. He starred in the comedy in 1915. Born in London in 1862, he first acted in Denver in 1884, in "East Lynne," with Daniel Bandmann.

Son of the late Capt. Charles H. Maude, grandson of the Hon. Francis Maude, he is a grandson-in-law of Sir Cornwallis Maude, first Viscount Hawarden. His brother, R. W. D. Maude, married Adelaide Goldsmith, daughter of the famous Jenny Lind. His first wife was the late Winnifred Emery, of whom, and his first marriage, Mrs. Beatrice Ellis Tree. His daughter, Margery Maude, is married to a New York society man, Joseph Warren Burden. She returned to the stage this spring to appear in "The Rivals." The son, John Cyril Maude, married Rosamond Murray, Boston society girl.

THE SKINNIEST MAN IN ALL THE WORLD

He Was Weak, Sickly and Nervous

There's nothing in life so valuable as health.

And any weak, skinny, flat-chested man who fails to take quick advantage of the wonderful flesh-adding, strength-building, rejuvenating substance found so abundantly in McCoy's Cod Liver Tablets must indeed be a constantly complaining "want-ad" fellow. He'll be called "skinny" behind his back!

From livers of lowly codfish come these precious flesh-building elements of the first magnitude—for years prescribed by doctors for nervous, nervous men, women and children.

Get 60 McCOY Cod Liver Extract Tablets for 60 cents at Doyle's Drug Store or via mail, send $1 and if you don't gain at least 5 lbs. in 30 days—money back.

Banish that perpetual tired feeling—gain in energy, well developed body—that will justly be an ever source of pride.

It is estimated that only about twenty-five of the world is properly mapped, the vague regions including not only the arctic and antarctic territories, but unexplored districts in Central and South America.

TRAVELS ABOARD A FREIGHTER

Miss K Trevelyan Dislikes Publicity, But Wants to See Canada

ST. CATHARINES, May 12.—Miss Katherine Trevelyan, daughter of Sir Charles R. Trevelyan, president of the British Board of Education is today passing through the Welland Canal as a passenger on the freighter Fernie, bound for Fort William.

Interviewed at Lock 3 this morning, Miss Trevelyan declined to say anything beyond the fact that she detested publicity and felt that her trip would be spoiled if her plans were made public. The people of England might regard the trip as a 'stunt' rather than a desire to see Canada, however, she admitted she would resume her hiking tour at Fort William after the Fernie docks there.

The Fernie is making slow progress through the canal, due to a tie-up last night because of high water above Lock 24. At that point waves were dashing over the head gates last night and traffic was halted.

MAY NEGOTIATE INDIAN TROUBLES

PEACE NEGOTIATIONS IN INDIAN IMPASSE PRESAGED BY WEEKEND

Decisive Steps Heralded By Government and Congress Meetings—Woman Leader Arrested and Released—Sholapur Quiet.

BOMBAY, May 16—(CP)— Indian peace prospect brightened today when announcement was made in Liberal quarters of an early expected governmental move for negotiations with Mahatma Gandhi, civil disobedience prisoner. The Government meeting at Bombay and secret session of the All India Congress, had simultaneously presaged decisive action in some direction, it was declared, before the week-end.

While these reports were going abroad, Mme. Sarojini Nadu poetess, successor of Mahatma Gandhi and Abbas Tyabji, was arrested today for attempting a mill raid at Dharasana and shortly afterwards set at liberty Mme Nadu and her band of volunteers had sat in the road outside the village, since yesterday forenoon when halted by the police.

Some of her followers were arrested after her release. All were given food and drink from which they had abstained during the time of the roadway impasse.

CARS IN CRASH

A slight automobile collision occurred at the corner of Church and Station Streets late yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Frank Whitney of Centreville was proceeding north on Station Street in her car and Wilfrid Paradise, 58 Highland Avenue, was coming out of Church Street onto Station Street. It is alleged by the police and other witnesses that Paradise failed to observe the "stop" sign on Church Street. He locked his rear wheels when he saw the car and his own car skidded a distance of thirteen paces before striking the rear right fender of the Whitney car, crumpling it badly. The bumper on the Paradise car was bent.

REV. DR. C. SCOTT GOING TO COAST

Former Belleville Minister Will Occupy Victoria B. C. Pulpit

Hamilton, May 16 —Rev. Dr. C. T. Scott, who recently tendered his resignation at Melrose United Church, has received an invitation to act as supply minister at the Metropolitan United Church, Victoria, B.C., for ten months while Rev. Dr. Sippell engages in study at Toronto.

This is a former charge of Dr. Scott's, as he was pastor at the Metropolitan church from 1912 to 1921. It is regarded as the leading United Church in British Columbia.

At the outbreak of the war 250 young men from the congregation volunteered and went to the front. Dr. Scott begins his ministry there on September 1.

Dr. Scott was former minister of Bridge Street United Church, Belleville.

Hon. Arthur C. Hardy of Ottawa, President of the Ontario Liberal Association for the past eleven years, who has been chosen Speaker of the Canadian Senate for the balance of the present Parliamentary term.

H. MACKIM ON VISIT TO NORTH

Mr. E. H. Macklim, president and general manager of the Manitoba Free Press, Winnipeg, and Mr. Harry Sifton of Toronto, were visitors in the city yesterday afternoon, en route to the township of Bangor where they expect to join Mr. John Dafoe, editor-in-chief of the Manitoba Free Press.

Mr. John Dafoe is now regarded as the most outstanding journalist in Canada. He is the author of the "Biography of Sir Wilfrid Laurier" and of several other works of high merit. Mr. Dafoe is a native of the township of Thurlow and was born near Zion's Hill. When he was very young his family moved to the township of Bangor, where Mr. Dafoe attended public school. He is now re-visiting the old home and he and Messrs. Macklim and Sifton will spend a few days there together.

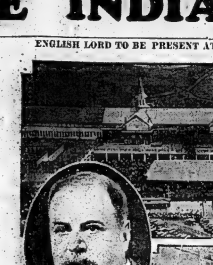
JOHN RUSHLOW BADLY CUT BY KICKING HORSE

Animal Kicked Teamster Five Times in Head, Hand, Thigh

ALSO KICKED DOG

Animal in Stable Suddenly Kicks Driver Passing Behind Horses



John Rushlow, South George Street, employed by John Cornell as a teamster, received serious injury early today when he was kicked by a horse he was attending during the morning feeding hours. Mr. Rushlow sustained a badly gashed head, requiring a number of stitches to close, a bruised hand and a badly swollen thigh. The horse kicked him at least five times before he was able to get away. Apparently the horse went furious for, when let out in yard, he attacked a dog and kicked the canine two or three times. Dr. Hill attended and only through expert medical attention was Mr. Rushlow brought around.

Rushlow was attending his early morning chores about the barn and without warning, when he was passing behind the horse, the animal lashed out with both feet. One of the hoofs caught the victim on the head inflicting a deep gash. Mr. Rushlow threw his hand to his forehead to protect his face while backing away in a stunned condition but the horse again lashed out and struck Mr. Rushlow on the hand. Again he tried to back away and again the horse kicked him on the thigh of one leg. By this time other attendants in the barn came in and dragged the victim to a place of safety and called the physician.

PRINCE WALES IS GOOD SAMARITAN

London, May 16 (CP)— The Prince of Wales today played the good Samaritan to an injured man while enroute to Sandwich to witness golf matches. The Prince was motoring to the aerodrome to take a plane when he noticed two men bending over an unconscious form by the roadside. He ordered the car stopped took possession from the car, and with the greatest care placed it under the insensible man's head. The Prince applied his handkerchief to the victim's bleeding face, and only after seeing that medical help had been summoned, drove on. The injured man had fallen off a motorcycle.

CONVENTION TO STUDY SUNDAY SCHOOLS' FUTURE

Six Thousand Leaders to Gather in Toronto

Toronto, Ont., May 16—What future has the Sunday School? This will be among the questions to be studied at the International Convention of Religious Education, in Toronto, June 23-29. Six thousand leaders in the movement will gather from all parts of the North American Continent and beyond to face basic questions arising out of the problems of progress for the future. The convention will celebrate the sesqui-centennial of the Sunday School and honor the memory of the founder, Robert Raikes, by unveiling a statue.

"The Sunday School has always been more or less the object of ridicule or criticism as an educational institution," says an announcement of the Convention manager. "Many ministers are finding it a divisive factor in church life. A great religious educator in a book on religious education says that the Sunday school is an obsolete institution and should be abolished, the church itself carrying forward the teaching function. What future has the Sunday school anyway?

"The slogan of the Convention, every church a school in Christian living, implies a new conception of the place of Christian education in the church's programme. Instead of being a side issue, it becomes the very centre of the programme. Such a conception does indeed, render the traditional Sunday school obsolete and suggests a reconstruction of the total church programme to give a new and central place to the teaching ministry."

Russel Colgate of Chicago, Ill., is President of the International Council of Religious Education. He will deliver the Presidential address at the Convention, June 23, and preside at several of the Convention sessions.

Rev. Dr. C. W. Gordon, of Winnipeg, Man., known in his books as "Ralph Connor" will lead one of the interesting events at the Convention when, on Sunday morning, June 29, a commemoration service will be held in historic Metropolitan Church of Toronto. Dr. Gordon will be in charge.

Forty-nine years ago and again 25 years ago, the International Convention met in Toronto. On both occasions Metropolitan Church was the Convention Church.

Commercials in Contest Tonight

Talented Students of Collegiate Enter Finals

Tonight, May 16th, is Commercial Night at the Belleville Collegiate Institute and keen competition will be shown this year among the senior students for the senior typewriting championship. All the students in the senior group have written at the speed of fifty words per minute, according to International rules and eleven expert typists pins have been awarded, during the year to these students. It is necessary that less than five mistakes be made in the tests in order to win the pins. Those who have achieved this high rate of proficiency are Josephine Crull, Isaac Tobe, Clare. McEwan, Doris Hogle, Bessie Connell, Jennie Vandervoort, Emma Sager Fred Elsler Nellie Marsden, Hazel Butcher and Rose Wilson. Jennie Vandervoort, intermediate champion of last year, has made a record by typewriting 70 words per minute for a period of fifteen minutes, without an error. This senior commercial form is composed of talented pupils, all of whom have acquired extraordinary speed and accuracy in both typewriting and shorthand the two chief commercial subjects.

The program this evening will comprise at eight o'clock. Four contests, junior, special, intermediate and senior, will be run off and awards will be made to the champions by Mr. Archibald at the conclusion of the program. Stunts, recitations, vocal and piano solos will also be part of the program.

A check-up today revealed cash and jewellery to the extent of six hundred dollars missing.

FELL IN CREEK AT COLBORNE

Six Year Old Boy Had Narrow Escape, But Is Rescued

Six year old Leonard McCafery of Belleville, had a narrow escape from drowning while visiting this week at the home of Mr. Bruce Redcliffe, Colborne. He fell off a cement bridge into a creek at Division street, which is quiet deep at this point, and was sinking for the third time when Bernard Redcliffe without divesting himself of his clothing, plunged into the stream to rescue the youngster. The lad was soon revived and was none the worse for his bath although he suffered slightly from chills.

Young Redcliffe's brave act will be brought to the attention of the Royal Humane Society and he will be rewarded.

SPOKE TO FLOWER GROWERS

An extremely good attendance was reported at the Horticultural Society's regular meeting in the Y. M. C. A. chambers last night. Unfortunately Professor Baird, of the Entomological laboratory, who was to have been the main speaker, was suddenly called out of town, but one of his assistants, W. Smith, filled in for him and rendered a most interesting address on pests and bugs that infest flowers. The address was not accompanied by lantern slides.

RIDER UNCYCLED DRIVER NOT BLAMED

Greig Haight, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Haight, Graham Apts., riding his bicycle, was knocked down but not seriously injured by a car driven by Mrs. Minnie Doherty, 63 Geddes St., on Victoria Avenue, shortly before one thirty today. The young lad was rushed to the surgery of Dr. W. W. Eoyce but his injuries consisted of a minor scalp wound. This was dressed and the lad continued on his way to school. The bicycle was badly damaged. The police investigated but found the driver of the car not responsible for the accident. Mrs. Doherty remained at the scene and did everything possible for the injured youth.

WOMAN TAKEN TO NAPANEE TO FACE HER TRIAL

Mr. John Dafoe is now regarded as at Cobourg on Remand

NATURE OF CHARGES

Alleged to Have Been Implicated in Cases at Brighton and Campbellford

Provincial Constables Fred Bafrett of Napanee, brought back from Cobourg jail yesterday afternoon, Mrs. Florence Shane, who has been incarcerated awaiting trial for alleged offences of receiving goods. This afternoon she appeared before Magistrate Graham on charges of breaking and entering and theft. She was remanded for one week without bail. Mrs. Shane is alleged to have been connected with George Wilson in the robbery of the stores at Brighton and Campbellford some time ago. George Coulter, alias Wilson, is now serving a term in Stoney Mountain, Manitoba, for carrying weapons and robbery while armed. He escaped from Napanee jail while awaiting trial. It is expected he will be brought back to Napanee for trial as soon as his sentence is completed in Manitoba.

SIGNS PROTECT DANGER PLACE

The intersections of Emily and Albion streets with Station street are the location of many near accidents. Stop signs have been erected on Emily and Albion streets but many motorists do not as a rule obey the signs. There are a number of little children playing in this vicinity at all hours of the day and motorists do not always stop and soon day a serious accident will be the result.

Struck Pole

Early today a car owned by Fred Rigby struck a telegraph pole and badly damaged the car trying to avoid an accident with a car which was proceeding up Station street." Mr. Rigby was coming out of the circle and apparently did not see the car until nearly on the intersection. Presence of mind in steering the car into a pole averted a possible serious accident.

OPEN COUNTRY CLUB

Officially opening the Bay of Quinte Country Club's social season, a brilliant event will be held tonight when a ball will be held in the clubhouse. FIRST CHURCH PARADE

The Argyll Light Infantry will hold its first church parade of the year on Sunday when the Regiment under the command of Col. Eric Kesler M.C., will attend St. Thomas' Church for divine service. All members of the regiment in former years are invited to attend and especially all those who served in the Great War. The Regiment will parade with both brass and pipe bands and a route march through the city will be held after the church services. Rev. John Lyons of St. Thomas' church will deliver the message to the regiment.

ONE INCH OF RAIN FELL

According to the figures released at the pump house, today practically one inch of rain fell on Wednesday and Thursday of this week. It was generally a steady shower commencing from Wednesday noon, continuing until yesterday afternoon. The apparatus which accurately gauges the fall, indicated that .39 inches were released by the heavens on Wednesday and .73 inches on Thursday. From every part of the Bay of Quinte District comes the same encouraging crop outlook for this year. Farmers state that the land has never been in better shape for years and the yield this year, if present conditions continue, should eclipse any that has been completed. All seeding operations have been completed.

BITTEN BY DOG

James Hall, eight year old boy, resident of 8 Emily street, was bitten by a dog yesterday afternoon but not seriously. The little lad was playing and a dog owned by Harper Broad, 31 Canniton street, jumped at the boy. Dr. Cronin was called but stated the bite was not serious. The police investigated and found that Mr. Broad had not purchased a tag for his pet. He visited the office today and took out the required license and also paid for the medical attendance. He promised to look after the canine.

IS HOLIDAYING HERE

Mr. John Deacon, a Belleville boy, who has been studying in New York with grand opera in view, is home for a couple of weeks before leaving for Banff and Lake Louise where he is under contract to sing at the C.P.R. hotels.

Mr. Deacon has had very successful year under the famous New York teacher Edgar Stanton. A short time ago he sang for Edward Johnson, tenor, of international fame, who expressed himself as being well pleased with the progress of his young fellow Canadian.

At the close of the service in Bridge Street Church on Sunday night Mr. Deacon will give a short recital of Sacred songs.

TIED FOR LEADERSHIP

Belleville citizens will be interested in knowing that the local representative is tied for first place with the one from New Westminster, B.C., in the recent three months' MacLean's magazine contest. The May 15th issue campaign will decide the winner. As you cannot invest ten cents more profitably than in a copy of MacLean's, I will ask your co-operation in bringing this pennant to Belleville. Copies may be procured from newsstands, MacLean boys, or by phoning 1826W. Bruce P. May, Promotion Manager and Subscription Agent for Belleville. m16-1td

A POPULAR STAR

"So This Is London" the amateur play directed by Miss Jessie B. Tuite and sponsored by the Belleville Y's Men's club which will be presented in the Collegiate auditorium next Tues day night May 20th promises to be one of the features of the season. This play has already been presented in several surrounding towns and the management has been sought to present it in other centres. The cast is entirely composed of local talent. The Y's Men's chorus under the direction of Ross Hunter will give several numbers.

NEW PLUMBING BUSINESS

Allan Moore, a well-known and popular young plumber, has started in business for himself at 289 Front Street, near the upper bridge. Mr. Moore learned his trade with Howe & Hagerman, but recently has been in the employ of Chas. Hyde.

EUCHRE AND DANCE

Johnston's Academy was the scene of a successful euchre and dance last night. A large number were in attendance and those winning at cards were, ladies' 1st, Mrs. T. Cassidy; 2nd, Mrs. Mills; 3rd, Mrs. Quincey. Gentlemen, 1st, O. Brown; 2nd, S. Kerr; 3rd, Mr. Lane. Lone Hander, C. Mercieu. After the prizes had been awarded, dancing was enjoyed until one o'clock when refreshments were served. Dainty refreshments during the evening.

SPONSOR BOXING-WRESTLING

At a meeting of the Directors of the Belleville Arena last night it was decided that it was definitely decided to sponsor a series of boxing and wrestling matches in the arena during the coming winter here this year. Wrestling has taken Toronto by storm and eight thousand flocked out to see the matches in the arena gardens last night and some of these same grapplers may be seen here. Some of Ontario's prominent boxers will also be engaged and doubtless many local sporting fans will look forward to this entertainment. More details will be given later by the directors.

GOOD OLD DAYS AS PAPERS SHOW
Ancient Papers of Thirties and Forties Reveal Old Life Here

Four or five intensely interesting documents have come to light with the finding of two old newspapers, a copy of police regulation for the City of Belleville in 1840 and two drafts, drawn on the Marmora Iron Works, Upper Canada, dated the 20th of August and the 4th of September respectively, in the year of our Lord 1833, one hundred and seven years ago.

The newspapers, one of which is one of the first editions of the "Intelligencer" ever published, is dated 1835, was published by George Benjamin with offices at the corner of Front and Bridge Streets. The motto of this publication was "Let There Be Harmony In Things Excential. Liberality In Things Not Essential, Charity In All."

In those good old days the system of coinage was the English, with pounds, shilling and pence; in those good old days Belleville was not in the province of Ontario. Far from it. It was a part of Upper Canada, if you please, for Confederation was but a dream then. The other newspaper is dated 1838, the same publisher, however, by that time had been created into a "daily". (Little more reading matter was contained in the "daily", less if possible than in the "weekly")

The police regulations of 1840 are interesting, to say the least. For instance—"No person shall be allowed to fish on the River Moira by night with flambeau or torch, above the bar by the River opposite to Mrs. Wallbridge's, nor shall anyone be allowed to fish on or near any wharf or other building with flambeau or torch under the penalty of from five shillings to thirty shillings." And—"That any person who shall, within the said town challenge another to fight, shall for every such offence forfeit and pay the sum of ten shillings." Continuing—"That any person or persons who shall set off, fire, or discharge any gun, musket, pistol or other fire arms, or any squib or fire balls in any street within the limits of the town, or within two hundreds of any house or other buildings in the town, or whodiction, shall pay at any game of ball, or knock or throw any ball in the street of the said town, shall forfeit and pay not less than two shillings and sixpense nor more than twenty shillings."

G. Benjamin was the town clerk and he intended to see that these regulations were enforced. This was fully attested by the fact that "Any person who shall be guilty of obstructing any constable or other officer the Police in the exercise of his duty, shall for every such offense forfeit and pay a fine not exceeding thirty nor less than five shillings."

Stirling

Stirling, May 16 (By Mail). — Mr. Tweedle has moved into Tourkitt's Apt.

Grant Thain, of Wellman's Corners, has been successful in obtaining his second year at Queen's University.

Mrs. Wm. Wallace and Mrs. George Richards motored to Kingston on Tuesday, May 13th and brought Mr. Wallace home from the General Hospital.

St. Paul's League met on Monday evening. The color count was eighty-two. In the absence of the President, Rev. E. W. Rowland presided over the devotional lesson, found in Luke's gospel, and Mrs. J. Sine led in prayer. After which the minutes of previous meeting were read. Florence Bailey, vice president of the Missionary Dept., then took the chair and after singing a hymn, Mrs. Earl Lorry sang effectively, "Only a Smile," after which Frances McKrown gave a pleasing piano solo, one of Chopin's rules. Mrs. H. A. Jackson gave a very interesting account of the Italian's 125,000 of them in Canada and the challenge they are to the United Church who must extend the hand of fellowship. This was followed by a flower contest put on by Florence Bailey and the meeting closed with the Mizpah Benediction.

Peterboro Club Acted as Hosts
Belleville Members Guests at Ladies' Night Program

Kiwanians from Oshawa, Lindsay, Belleville, and Kingston enjoyed the hospitality of Peterboro, Kiwanis club last night when a ladies night was staged by that organization. The enjoyable affair was held in the gymnasium and auditorium of the Collegiate Institute in Peterboro and everyone present voted it a huge success. Belleville Kiwanis Club was represented by two of its members T. E. Shapiro and Claude D. Tee and their wives. Luncheon was served in the gymnasium after which the party repaired to the auditorium where a delightful programme was given. The Spencer String Quartette gave three selections, while Art Allan of Lindsay was the song leader in the community singing. The principal speaker was Ed. Archibald, boys' worker of Toronto. Archibald is one of Canada's premier athletes holding the record for pole vaulting and since his retirement from the athletic path has turned his talent in camp craft and his success can only be measured by the instances he gave his audience of boys trained in the summer camp making good in the world of business. An interesting feature of his address was the demonstration by his famous Belgian Police dog "Bijou." This canine exhibited almost human intelligence and would obey the slightest command of its master. During the program, the gymnasium floor was cleared, and to the music of a "jazzy" four piece orchestra a program of dance music was enjoyed until good night's were said.

NEW THEORY IS FUTURE EVENTS MAY MOLD PAST

OTTAWA, Ont., May 15.—(By The Canadian Press)—The value of New Zealand's purchases of Canadian goods in 1929 was $23,935,905 as compared with $22,260,000 in 1928, an increase of 46.89 per cent whereas the total imports showed an increase of just under 9 pc. cent., writes C. M. Croft, Canadian Trade Commissioner in Auckland, in the current issue of the Commercial Intelligence Journal.

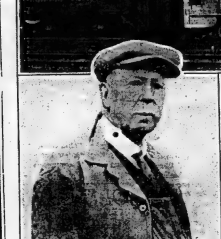
Imports from Canada showed a substantial decline in 1926 and 1927 particularly in the latter year, due principally to decreased imports of Canadian motor vehicles. In 1928 a marked improvement was noted, and even greater development is observable in 1929. Here again the imports of motor vehicles were responsible for a large percentage of the increase. In 1928, 5,149 motor vehicles valued at $3,986,830 were imported. This number of vehicles represented 27.41 per cent of the total number imported, Canada being the second largest supplier. Returns for 1929 shows that Canada supplied 12,512 vehicles to the value of $7,871,235. In other words, Canada shipped more motor vehicles than any other country, having sold 46.61 per cent. of the total number imported. The United States was next with 11,315 valued at $9,203,871, this showing a higher value than Canada but a lesser number.

The value of Canadian motor vehicles imported last year represented 22.66 per cent of the total trade from Canada. Motor tires was the second largest item imported, and here again a substantial increase is noted. Other products showing notable increases were fish, potted and preserved; provisions; chocolate confectionery; fresh apples; wheat; wheat flour; hides and skins, undressed; wood pulp and paper pulp; hosiery; boots and shoes, rubber and canvas; wrought iron pipes, tubes and fittings; electric meters; wire; iron wire nail fencing; hardware, hollow-ware, etc.; cultivators; mowers batteries and cells; insulated cable wire; woodworking machinery; Douglas fir, rough sawn, shooks; plaster of Paris; newsprint; and pianos.

POPE PIUS TO HOLD EXHIBITION IN JUNE

Vatican City, May 16.—A great exposition of the arts that have come to Pope Pius XI during his Jubilee year will be held in the Vatican in June, when the Jubilee year closes. Many of the big display rooms of the Vatican will be occupied by the thousands of presents from every part of the world.

The pope himself will open the exposition on June 1. It is believed the display will rival that of 42 years ago when Pope Leo XIII held an exposition of the gifts received during his Jubilee year.



Most of the presents, by express with of the pope, are destined to the missions. They run from portable altars to fountain pens, from sanitary materials to agricultural machines.

THE GIANT AND THE DWARF

Overshadowed by the tons of steel making up the monster that has succeeded it, "Curly," as the engine is still affectionately known among veteran railwaymen, stands alongside a modern Canadian Pacific locomotive and measures only as long as the latter's cab and tender. Nevertheless, "Curly", tiny, fifty-funnelled wood-burner of pioneer days, can claim a record seldom approached anywhere in the world for long life, usefulness and endurance. "Curly" was brought to British Columbia in 1871 and W. H. (Bill) Evans (inset), engineer of the first Canadian Pacific passenger train to reach Port Moody in 1885, says it was built in a San Francisco machine shop and later aided Count de Lesseps in the Panama Canal region, but to mention construction to Curly in Peru. Sixty years of arduous work left their mark on "Curly", but now the engine after a thorough refitting at the Canadian Pacific Vancouver shops, is to be exhibited at the Vancouver Exhibition in August, as a museum piece of the early days.

Bill Evans was called out of retirement for purposes of his picture and gladly donned the old overalls again to show himself once more in harness alongside "Curley".

RADIO FANS' CORNER

Quite an improvement last night in the radio reception wasn't there fans? Rather glad to see it that way too hope it continues on the up grade. We should be entitled to a bit of good reception now after all we've put up with lately.

Are you listening in to Sally and Cecil, fans? They are heard over CKCW every night at 5.30 their program is called "The Funniest Things" and from what I've heard they are two children, representing children rather, and their philosophy is rather good. Listen in to-night.

What a lot of fun everybody is going to have tomorrow with their radio sets About 5.30 E.S.T. to-morrow afternoon tune in on the Kentucky Derby and get all the thrills that's going. Graham McNamee and Clem McCarthy will be at the mike for the NBC and Ted Husing will handle it for the Columbia chain. The Earl of Derby descendant of the man after whom this classic was named, will be a guest of honour at the big race and will speak over the mike. Britishers across the sea will, by the aid of short wave, be enabled to hear the race.

At 6.30 tonight over WEAF and chain the Rapleston Twins are heard and at 7 the Chase Service Orchestra with Jessia Dragonette and the Cavaliers, Leo O'Rourke tenor and others.

Still on WEAF wavelength we hear the Cliequot Club Eskimos, 8 o'clock E.S.T. They are all old friends so let's turn out and give them a rousing reception.

Over WJZ at 7.30 E.S.T. the Hickok program for to-night sounds good. Phillips Carlin and Raymond Knight are putting on a comic skit entitled "Ben Hur Drives, a Mean Chariot". "Uh-uh! Ain't that sumpin!"

Mustn't forget Jones and Hare the Interwoven Pair at 8 E.S.T. over WJZ and chain including CKCW.

Phil Spitalny from the Hotel Pennsylvania Grill to-night at 10.15 E.S.T. and heard over WJZ. Looks like a great night.

I suppose by to-night the lawyer of Jackson, Jackson, Jackson and Jackson will know Andy's life history if Andy continued to talk as much as he did in last night's episode. Bill Hay was right Andy needs a muzzle.

WILLIAM J. LOCKE NOVELIST, PASSES

Paris, May 16.—William J. Locke, one of the best-loved of British novelists, died at 8.30 o'clock last night at his home here after relapse from a serious operation performed six weeks ago.

The writer's adopted daughter, Miss Sheila Locke, was with him at the end He was 67 years old.

Mr. Locke had been ill for many weeks and had submitted to two operations for abdominal trouble. The last operation relieved the condition but left him so weak that he could not combat the relapse successfully.

PORT WINE COST TO BE LOWERED

Dunning Changes Tariff Rating at Request of Drayton

Ottawa May 16.—Ontario's port wine drinkers may have a price reduction in their favorite tipple as a result of an amendment to a budget provision carried last night in the House of Commons.

Introducing this amendment, Hon. Charles Dunning, Minister of Finance, explained that it was put forward on the plea of Sir Henry Drayton, Ontario Liquor Board chairman. The latter pointed out that under conditions existing for a year or more the board had been obliged to pay Canadian duty computed on English duties when it was importing Portuguese wines.

This was caused, Sir Henry wrote, by reason of the fact that all Portuguese wine consumed here was bottled in England. "To give a case in point," Mr. Dunning last night quoted him as writing, "a case of port sold to us at 40 shillings in bond, f.o.b. London, nevertheless has to be valued for the purpose of your customs department at 56 shillings, the 16 shillings representing the customs duties of Great Britain on that port, assuming it to have been taken out of bond and released for domestic consumption in Great Britain.

Similar representations had been made by Sir William Clark, British High Commissioner to Canada, Mr. Dunning said. He therefore proposed an amendment stating that British customs duties should be disregarded in estimating the market value of such bottled goods as this wine.

She Was Troubled With Pains Across The Back

New Brunswick Lady Relieved By Taking Dodd's Kidney Pills

Mrs. Edward Kincade Speaks Highly of Dodd's Leading Kidney Remedy

St. John, N B., May 12 (Special)—"I was advised to use Dodd's Kidney Pills for my kidney trouble," writes Mrs. E. Kincade, 92 Durham St., St. John, N.B. "I was troubled with pains across the back, and after taking Dodd's Kidney Pills I found great relief. I had heard my friends speak about them. They are a good pill."

Dodd's Kidney Pills hold their popularity not because of the promises they make, but because of the good they do.

Dodd's Kidney Pills are purely and simply a Kidney remedy. They strengthen the kidneys so they can do their full work of straining the impurities out of the blood.

Pure blood coursing through the body carries to the different organs the substances they need to keep them sound and healthy.

Dodd's Kidney Pills can be obtained from all druggists, or The Dodds Medicine Co., Ltd., Toronto 2, Ont.

DUNNING BUDGET CARRIED BY 28

Three Conservatives Vote with Liberals on Division

Ottawa, May 15.—Amid a deafening tumult of cheering, booing and desk banging the Dunning budget carried by a majority of 28 votes in the House of Commons last night, with two Conservatives joining the Government in its support. The vote was 114 to 86.

Immediately after the division on the main motion, the House went into committee of ways and means and Hon. Charles Dunning, Minister of Finance, as pilot, the Government began the arduous task of steering its tariff proposals item by item through the House.

While Liberals alternately applauded and jeered, two Conservatives representatives of steel producing ridings Thomas E. Simpson of West Algoma where the Algoma Steel plant is located, and Finlay MacDonald, of South Cape Breton, home of Besco, announced that in keeping with pledges to their electors in 1926, they would support the budget with its revision of the iron and steel tariff.

A third Conservative, Dr. L. W. Johnstone, of North Cape Breton-Victoria, announced himself as observing a similar pledge but he abstained from voting either way, being paired Progressives voted against the Government with one exception, T. H. Jelliff of Lethbridge, who supported the budget.

The two budget amendments were voted down by large majorities, late yesterday afternoon. The Progressive sub-amendment, calling for lower textile duties and further extensions of the British preference, was defeated by 17 votes to 19 when the Conservatives as a body joined the Liberals against it. The Conservative non-confidence amendment was supported only by the Conservatives and perished, 124 ayes to 64.

WHITE COLLAR JOB HOLDERS TO GET SOME ACTION

Geneva, May 16.—Giving ear to the troubles of white collar workers, the International Labor Conference which opens here June 10, will discuss the question of hours of work for salaried employes. Twenty-nine countries have reported to the International Labor Office their attitudes toward the regulation of salaried workers' hours by international treaty. Eighteen countries are definitely in favor of such international regulation. They include Cuba, France, Germany, Italy, Portugal, Spain and Uruguay.

Reports from six countries indicate a preference for a recommendation by the conference, rather than the adoption of a draft convention for submission to governments. Great Britain, Japan, South Africa and Sweden do not consider the time ripe for setting up international regulation on this question. The government of Siam replied that the question has no practical interest for that country, which is essentially agricultural and has few white collar workers.

Having regard to the replies of governments, the Labor Office has prepared for debate by the conference the draft of a convention concerning commercial establishments and offices and two draft recommendations, the one referring to hotels, restaurants and like places, the other to theatres and places of public amusement.

The draft convention proposes to limit working hours in commercial establishments and offices to 48 per week; the daily hours in principle to be eight but with the provision that the 48 hours may be distributed over the various days of the week so long as no day has more than ten hours.

TRENTON'S GOLF SEASON OPENS OFFICIALLY SOON

Tea Hostesses For Opening Day Have Been Appointed

(Special By Staff Reporter)

TRENTON, Ont., May 16.—The Trenton Golf Club expect to have an unusually busy season this year, and at a meeting held recently at the home of Mrs. H. D. Graham, a meeting of the Ladies' section of the Club was held, the object being to arrange for having been postponed one of three teas and bridges, both of which proved popular last season.

The official opening will be on May 24th and a tea and bridge will be held that afternoon. Mrs. M. W. Andison, Mrs. W. G. Avery, Mrs. W. B. Crowe and Mrs. J. W. Farley will be the tea hostesses on that occasion. No plans are ready as yet for the various competitions which will be run off this summer, but Mrs. W. B. McClung has been appointed Ladies' Captain and Mr. W. G. Avery is the 1930 Men's captain. Special competitions will be arranged for the opening day, May 24th. On that occasion the course will be in excellent shape, although players have been using it for the past month.

(Special By Staff Reporter)

TRENTON, Ont. May 16.—Following the departure of the Rev. H. B. Neal pastor at the Wooler United Church for Holloway Street Church at Belleville, Rev. A. Poulter, Bethany Church, will take the former's place in Wooler, it was announced yesterday. Rev. Neal will take over his new charge in Belleville, on July 1st, and Rev. Poulter will go to Wooler shortly afterwards.

Rev. Poulter has been pastor at Bethany Church for the past five years, and comes to Wooler highly recommended. Both he and his wife have always taken an keen interest in young people's work, and although Wooler is sorry to kee Rev. Neal, they are glad that Rev. Poulter is willing to accept the invitation to fill his place.

SHAKER BROTHERS WILL CLOSE DOORS

TRENTON, Ont., May 16.—On May 24th, Trenton will lose one of its successful businesses when the Shaker Brothers will close their dry goods and Ugents furnishing store, after twenty years operation. The entire stock will be moved to Toronto where another store is located. Mr. M. Shaker was the founder of the business, he coming to Trenton in 1910, and after his death in 1922, Mr. S. Shaker, a brother, carried it on. A year ago he left Trenton to open a business in Toronto and since then the store has been under the management of Mr. S. Habib, a nephew.

Thirty Games Compose Schedule for the Season

(Special By Staff Reporter)

TRENTON, Ont., May 16.—Although the rain of the past two days has been of great benefit to the farmers of this district, it has played havoc with the Trenton Softball League, two games having been postponed on account of three scheduled already this week. Last night the Senators were slated to take on the Benedict-Proctor nine, but owing to the wet condition of the ground, it was found to be impossible to play. These games will likely be played at the end of the regular schedule.

The schedule, as printed in these columns yesterday, shows that the last game is to be played on July 3rd. This gives time before the end of the month for the second and third teams to play off for the title, which marks the first place team in a three out of five series. It also allows for time to play off postponed games. There are thirty games in the schedule and Trenton ball fans should see some real sport before the summer is over.

WOMEN'S RUMMAGE SALE IN TOWN HALL

(Special By Staff Reporter)

TRENTON, Ont., May 16.—Under the auspices of the Local Council of Women's Rummage Sale is being held in the Town Hall today and tomorrow. So far today a good sale has been recorded. The Local Council of Women is one of the strongest W ment organizations in Trenton, and have done much for the poor during the past winter. In addition, they sponsor the Trenton branch of the Victorian Order of Nurses, which is doing a wonderful work in this town.

CELEBRATE QUEEN'S BIRTHDAY MONDAY

(Special By Staff Reporter)

TRENTON, Ont., May 16—Owing to the fact that May 24th falls on a Saturday, Mayor Fraser has issued a proclamation to the effect that the holiday will be celebrated on Monday, May 26th. In this way the business of the town will not be interfered with, and farmers will be in to attend the same as on ordinary Saturdays. It is expected that other centres nearby will follow this same procedure.

LARGE ACREAGE SWEPT BY FIRE

(Special to The Ontario Intelligencer)

Picton, May 16—News has just reached town that about thirty acres of woods near Milford, South Marysburg Township were swept by fire over the week end. The fire started on Mr. Fenton Dodge's farm and spread onto Mr. John Gould's farm. Fortunately it was checked before it got into larger woods nearby. The grass in the woods was long and dry and burned very quickly. The trees were mostly young ones, being a second growth. No buildings were threatened. A large number of men in the district respond ed to the call for help, but the fire was not generally known. The origin of the blaze is not known.

MRS. BYRON CANNIFF

Mrs. Byron M. Canniff died in Los Angeles, California, recently. She was formerly Annie Eliza Norman, a daughter of the late R. A. Norman and Mrs. Norman. Police Magistrate Norman of Picton is a brother and her surviving sisters are Mrs. W. F. Reynolds, Picton, Mrs. John C. Boyle, Rochester, Mrs. W. D. Ruttan, Winnipeg. She also leaves her husband and two married daughters in Los Angeles.

Mrs. Canniff was born in Picton 80 years ago and when young married Mr. Canniff a native of Belleville, who conducted a drug store here. They moved to Portage La Prairie and where Mr. Canniff retired a few years ago they moved to Los Angeles. Mrs. Canniff was a teacher for a time. Possessed of a charming personality she made many friends.

The funeral was held at Los Angeles with interment also in that city.

Another dance was held at the Outlet Wednesday evening and a number from town were in attendance. Wilgar's orchestra of Cherry Valley furnished the music.

Talkies Popular

The talkies are proving very popular in Picton though the admission fee is 47 cents. Each night sees large crowds in attendance at both shows, the first starting at seven o'clock. The Regent, Picton's only theatre, George Cook, manager, is a credit to the town. The many changes that were made when installing the talkies makes it one of the best in the district. Some very fine shows are being presented.

ANGUS McGOWAN

Ex-Mayor Fraser of Picton and Mr. George Fraser of Montreal, left Wednesday to attend the funeral of their brother-in-law, Mr. Angus McGowan at Madison, Wisconsin. The funeral takes place Friday. Mr. McGowan died Sunday morning, May 11, after a short illness from blood poisoning. Mr. McGowan was born in Picton. He resided for many years at Madison, Wis., also at Toon, New Mexico and Albuquerque, New Mexico, where he died.

MOUNT PLEASANT W. M. S. GATHER

Rawdon, May 16, (By Mail)—On Tuesday, May 6th the members of Mount Pleasant W.M.S. met at the church and the president opened with hymn "My Jesus, I love Thee, My Saviour and Friend," and all repeated the Lord's prayer in unison. The Sec., Mrs. Thrasher, read the minutes and eleven members answered the roll call, one visitor and three kiddies were also present. Treasurer, Mrs. Smith reported $116.68 to date. Psalm 107-1-15 was read responsively. Hymn, 3 verses of "O Master when Thou comest," Mrs. Will Potts gave a talk on "Stewardship is the soul of Religion," and she said the church today needs money as there is a vast amount of work to do. We must give a just account of our money as missionary work cannot be carried on without financial support. She asked "Will the stewardship of ourselves be wholly acceptable to God." Mrs. Gilbert Smith took charge of the fourth chapter of the Study Book, dealing with "The glorious company of missionaries." She traced Christianity through the dark ages and told of their labours, services and sacrifices for the Master's cause, and no one but the Lord Himself ever knew just what they underwent and suffered for Christianity. She very vividly told the story of Henry Martyn of Persia.

Mrs. John Holmes gave a splendid description of the life of Bishop Crowther, an African boy, who gave the best years of his life for his native country.

Mrs. Will Hubble outlined the lives of John Duhe, a son of a Zulu chieftain and King Khama who was a sufferer because of manhood, and who was greatly opposed to drink.

Mrs. Frank Jeffs depicted the life of Eleanor Chesman, a missionary martyr to China, she was an orphan and early in life she gave herself for the Master's service as a medical doctor.

Mrs. Frank Smith gave a vivid description of the life of Charlotte Tucker, who wrote many books and at the age of 54, she gave her life to be a missionary in India, and it is written that she grew several year by year.

Mrs. Irvin Reid pictured the life of Clara Swain, the first fully equipped female medical missionary and later she was given the novel position of palace physician.

The Study Book next month will be in charge of Mrs. Will Hubble. Mrs. John Reid gave a harp solo "Bear ye one another's burdens." The report of the Branch Convention was to have been given by Mrs. Pearcy MacMullen but owing to the lateness of the hour, it will be given at the June meeting.

Offering amounted to $5.25. The 3rd and 4th verses of "O Master," was sung and Mrs. J. Reid closed with prayer.

No woman is truly beautiful when she is half starved or antsiar and bony.—Florence Ziegfeld.

Real Estate and Copper

We offer as investments two excellent First Mortgage Bonds. The first is the obligation of the London Realty Co., Limited, and is secured by well-located, revenue-producing real estate as well as being a first floating charge upon its undertaking and all other assets—present and future. The annual earnings of this company have been over twice interest requirements and should be over three times interest requirements when the new addition to the property is completed.

PRICE: 99½ and interest to yield over 6½%

The other Bond is that issued by Canadian Copper Refiners Limited. This obligation is unconditionally guaranteed as to principal and interest by Noranda Mines Limited, which company's annual earnings (on the basis of 14 cent copper) are more than twenty-five times yearly interest requirements. This bond is one of the most amply secured investments ever offered.

PRICE: 100 and interest to yield 6%

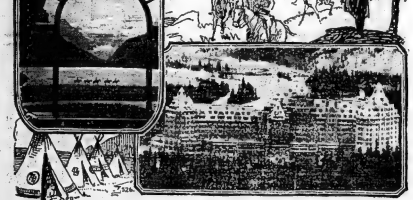
Handsomely Appointed Restaurant Opens Doors to Public

Belleville business world has been augmented by the opening of a new and modern restaurant, ice cream parlor and confectionery store at 208 Front street, adjacent to the Dominion Bank, by Chris Scopis of Cobourg. For some years Mr. Scopis has conducted business in Cobourg where he achieved success and made many friends. Starting business in Belleville Mr. Scopis invested a large sum of money in fixtures and modern appointments and will have one of the finest restaurants in the province where meals and lunches will be served amid beautiful surroundings. Formal opening will take place Saturday.



George Gavares of Brantford, will be the manager of Scopis restaurant, and comes to Belleville with a fine record from Brantford, where he made many friends. The Brantford Expositor, in chronicling the departure of Mr. Gavares from that city, states that he was honored by two groups of citizens and presented with addresses of appreciation and gifts by both. The Expositor said:

"The departure of George Gavares, former partner of James Valachos in the Olympia, to Belleville, where he will enter the catering business, was the reason for a little organization among local sportsmen in order that the well known dispenser of soda, ice cream and humor, might have reason to think well of the connections he had made in the city. He was presented with a handsome travelling kit. . . . .

Saturday another body of men who often met in the place got together to show some reason for their regret and presented George with gold and silver coins together with an address that expressed their opinions."

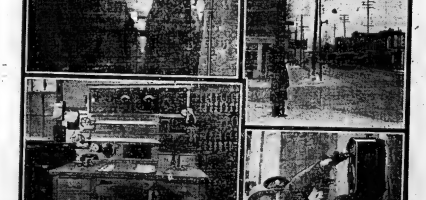
The Rockies Are Calling You



The combination of the extremes of natural and sophisticated at Banff Springs Hotel and Chateau Lake Louise, which open May 15 and June 1, respectively, until September 30, is perhaps the secret of their charm. Located in the heart of the finest scenery of the continent—mountain, lake and forest—each offers to the visitor everything that the most ritzy hotel in the most cosmopolitan cities of the world can furnish. You may cut dancing to look through huge windows at silver-billion-dollar scenery or you may attire yourself to please yourself and go out for days on horseback into territory virtually untouched by the white man and all within a few miles of either hotel. You may live grandly but well on food packed into the wilds by horse or you may dine on the rarest dainties drawn from the ends of the earth. You may be strictly formal or you may whether you are admiring the moonlight on snow-crowned peaks or listening at your ease to a cosmopolitan dance orchestra playing the latest jazz. Anyone visiting either of these hotels has laid in a memory that will last a lifetime. Layout shows, left, view from Chateau Lake Louise; lower right, the Banff Springs Hotel.

OBITUARY

THOMAS ARTHUR O'SHEA

Thomas Arthur O'Shea died this morning at the residence of his mother in-law, Mrs. J. La Berge, 32 Boswell street after a lingering illness. He was born in Ireland and came to Canada when four years old and was a member of St. Michael's Church and of Moose Lodge. Surviving are his widow infant daughter his mother and one brother, Daniel of Toronto, three sisters, Mrs. Bert Lappen of Toronto Mrs. D. Marion of Lorne, Ont., and Miss Helen of Rochester, N.Y.

By the new, up-to-date police signal system which Toronto officially took over the other day, with considerable ceremony, the Police Department is enabled to transmit a description of a stolen car, hold-up man or bandit to every man on his beat; this new system is also available for service every moment of the night or day for the conduct of ordinary routine business and communication of orders. The system is spread over the entire 32.8 square miles of city area, and is divided into twelve police divisions.

BELLEVILLE AND KINGSTON PLAY BALL MAY 24

Four Games in Each City to be Played by Ball Teams

PRACTICES CALLED

At a well attended meeting of the executive committee of the National Baseball Club held last night, it was unanimously decided to carry on for the season. Kingston and Belleville will comprise the teams of the O.B.L. and the committee recommended to the league officials that 4 games in each city be played with the winner entering the Provincial playdowns. R. A. Elliott president of the league and Newton Thompson, the secretary, will meet with representatives of the two teams to arrange that schedule in the near future. The first game will likely be played in Belleville on May 24th which is the day on which the city will celebrate the holiday.

At one time negotiations appeared well on the way to have North Toronto and Oshawa enter the league with Kingston and Belleville, but Oshawa finally demurred fearing the expense account would be too high on account of the long jumps. It was then suggested that North Toronto and Oshawa play a series and also Kingston and Belleville and the winners of the two sections meet for the championship of the O.B.L. Possibly this suggestion will be acted upon but in the mean time Belleville and Kingston will go ahead and assure the fans of these two cities some real baseball. The Nationals will entertain many outside teams in exhibition tilts through the season and the best teams in the Province will be brought in and it is expected with efficient and league fixtures the fans will be given plenty of baseball. The arrangement arrived at was the only logical one and Belleville will field one of its best teams. Practices will be called in the very near future and although only a week separates the team from the opening clash they will be ready for the fray.

BALL AND SOFT BALL

Kingston While-Standard Says—"Plans are being formulated to have Belleville and Kingston play a series of nine games in the O.B.L. and fill in the rest of the time with exhibition games. If such a plan is carried through, the local fans will get far better baseball than they would have if Oshawa and Peterborough had remained in.

"Saturday night the annual meeting of the Eastern Ontario Ladies' Softball Association is being held here, and it is probable that delegates from Ottawa, Brockville and Belleville will be in attendance."

PICTORIAL Ggolf
(BY H. B. MARTIN)

Control More Important Than Distance When Driving

The long, loose swing quite often is responsible for the long drive, but it is not the swing of the finished golfer, nor the successful golfer. Young golfers are inclined to strive for distance with their tee shots, winning to gamble on keeping the majority of them in the fairway. Experienced players are more content to keep the ball straight and with this aim in view they gradually shorten the arch and make an attempt to keep the swing under perfect control.

The swing need not be short so long as it is compact and well timed. The finish of the swing does not go back, as a rule, as far as the shoulder. Further dipping of the club is unnecessary and only goes to prove that there has been a dipping also at the top of the swing. With the compact, well-grooved swing there is little chance of one losing his balance, as the foot action is usually perfect.

SONNENBERG IS STILL CchampION

Felled De Vito Before Eight Thousand Toronto Fans

Toronto, May 16.—Like a bolt of ereased lightning, coming from nowhere, Gus Sonnenberg hit Joe DeVito with one of his flying tackles at the Arena Gardens last night to prove to a capacity crowd that he is still champion of the wrestling world. The tackle that felled Italy's head-lock master came with the speed of an electric shock and, before the dazed DeVito could assemble himself, he was hit again and smashed to unconsciousness. The first fall came after 35 minutes and 10 seconds and, with DeVito still dazed from the effects, Sonnenberg finished the match in five minutes and 26 seconds, of the second round, with another flying billygoat butt, followed up with a body slam.

A thrilled crowd of about 8,000 was held in almost breathless suspense during the bout and, with the championship of the world swaying in the balance, at the mercy of flying tackles and flashing holds, it was a succession of sensations. DeVito, with his punishing head-lock and flying mare, appeared to have the champion in those vicious arms, but Sonnenberg was always smart enough to pivot when twisted in the air and fall in a good defensive position. How Sonnenberg weathered the whirl of flying mares is last attributed to why he is undefeated in the ancient sport of wrestling.

The championship clash came as a grand climax to a great show, for the crowd was elevated to a concert pitch when Sonnenberg and DeVito entered the ring. Jack Taylor toppled Nino D'Arnoldi to start the show after 12 minutes of rough-and-tumble battling. Carl Vogel, the villain with a sergeant-major attitude, moustache and eyeglasses, gained the decision over Bill Demetral in 30 minutes after a wild scrap, while Jim Maloney, the giant Irishman, had no trouble in strength for Tom Haiches, stretching the Chicago veteran out with a full Nelson in 17 minutes and 30 seconds. The preliminaries enthused the crowd for the main match of the night and when the show was all over there was a general sigh of satisfaction for a real evening of excitement.

LEAFS CAPTURE DOUBLE-HEADER

Sam Jones Chalked Up His Fourth Straight Win

TORONTO, May 15.—Not many fans braved the damp, raw weather yesterday to see the Leafs and the much-vaunted Baltimore Orioles play a doubleheader at the Stadium. The 1,500 or so courageous fans who did edged in on a double treat—for them, not for the Maisel flock.

So-called heavy sluggers in the Baltimore line-up did not slug, at least not to any appreciable extent, and the Leafs won both games. They were on the front end at all stages in the first affair, which was turned into a 5 to 2 victory. They stopped the flock five runs in the third inning of the closing half of the twin bill and then came on to win 8-0.

Sam Gibson pitching his fourth winning game of the season, tamed the Orioles with his under-arm curve and fire ball in the opening fray and he drove in a run with a triple in the second inning. Lefty Mackie hit Andy Cohen's bid in round one for a triple to send two runners scampering over the plate. In the fifth he crashed one of Hugh Pezkets Jim Weaver's best serves for a double to score another run. A long fly by Harris accounted for the Leafs other run, also in the fifth.

Gibson wasn't in much trouble at any stage. A three-bagger by Hauser and a sacrifice fly accounted for a Baltimore run in the second, and a double by Sand, who seemed to be on base every time the Orioles had a turn at bat, and a single by Ike Danning gave them a run in the fourth.

BUFFALO, May 16.— The Buffalo Jersey City Bisons annihilated the Black Cats in the opening game of the series here yesterday afternoon 18 to 6, enabling them to hold the league leadership over the Toronto Maple Leafs who conquered Baltimore twice.

The Bisons scored 14 tallies before the visitors got to Fussell for two markers. The Bisons plugged Hopkins for ten hits, including four long homers, and seven men walked. Manager Allen sent in a pinch hitter for the harassed Jersey hurler in the ninth.

WASHINGTON, May 16.—Sad Sam Jones chalked up his fourth straight win, while the Washington Senators extend the series with the Cleveland Indians, winning 4 to 2. Sam Rice ran his hitting streak to 25 consecutive games, doubling in the seventh.

The Senators put across one run in the first, West tripling the first pitched ball and scoring on Coalin's single. West's homer with one on in the third accounted for two more runs.

Jon's did not allow an Indian to reach second until the fifth, when they nicked him for one run, and another in the eighth.

The Nats put across the final tally in the seventh on a single, a sacrifice and Rice's double.

West was the batting star of the day, getting a triple and a homer in four trips.

CHICAGO, May 16. —The Chicago Cubs closed a long home stand yesterday by losing their last game to the Boston Braves 10 to 8.

It was a wild game, the lead several times changing from one team to the other. Herzog's homer with two on in the eight gave the Cubs an 8 to 7 lead, but the Braves pounded Blake for a trio of counters in the ninth.

In their home stay, during all clubs in the league, the Cubs won 13 and lost 8.

Chicago has beaten Grimes only twice since 1927.

NOISY BOYS' NAMES TAKEN BY POLICE

The police have received numerous complaints from residents in the vicinity of John and St. Paul streets, about young boys raising disturbances at night. Last night Constable Evans was sent down to investigate and took the names of five boys, who were ordered to report to the Chief of Police tonight. No charges will be laid against the boys but they will receive a stiff reprimand. The ages of the youth run from fifteen to eighteen years of age.

"SEVEN DAYS LEAVE"

Variety is the long suit of the business policy of Manager George Forhan of the Belle Theatre who believes, that the art of entertaining caters in a mixed diet, and that too much of the sameness leads to boredom. This week for instance he presented his paired with "Happy Days" for a starter, and Oh, Boy! it was Happy Days all the way, featuring all the headliners in Hollywood and incidentally presenting the best minstrel show since Paul Lavonde doubled in brass with the Al G. Fields Minstrels. "Montana Moon" followed with its breezy western flavor and high, wide and handsome humor, then to give the peek an artistic finish with a dramatic flourish he serv ed "Seven Days Leave" with Beryl Mercer and Gary Cooper in the leads. Beryl Mercer always clever, has an opportunity to show her talent to full it this story and the result is a wow! Gary Cooper, although he does a very creditable bit of work too, The Three Musketeers, including The Submarine, charwomen extraordinary, are perfect types of a section of the night workers of London town, and the various pictures of London night life, its pubs and its 'bis, restaurants and streets is a "fair treat". "Seven Days Leave" has a tear here and there but is seasoned with jaunty laughs and is one of those really artistic bits which should not be missed by those who appreciate real dramatic talent.

DIVORCE BILL HAS BECOME LAW

Awaits Only Royal Assent After Vote in Senate

Ottawa, May 16.—The Ontario divorce court bill completed its tempestuous course through Parliament last night. By a vote of 60 to 12 it was passed by the Senate and now awaits only royal accent to become law.

It has created the longest series of divisions and overcome the most sustained opposition that has greeted any legislation this session. It is three years since it was first introduced in the Senate and it has been the target of opposition ever since. Even back in its original home in the Upper Chamber it encountered unexpected opposition yesterday and today.

Caught on a surprise division early in the session it was defeated by a majority of one only to create a near precedent by being voted back on the order paper. Attempts to talk it out failed, and from now on Ontario's divorce bills will cease to be a problem for Dominion legislators.

Maybe a man has so many changes of heart because he has so few chances of clothes.

Obituary

Stirling, May 16 (By Mail).—The remains of Mr. eGorge Kennedy, B.A., were laid to rest in Stirling Cemetery The committal service was conducted by two ministers from Colborne and Brighton. Colborne High School Board were the pall bearers, while all students carried the flowers which were many and numerous, silently testifying to the esteem in which he was held.

Stirling, May 16—The funeral of the late Mrs. Cullis was held on Monday night in Carmel church, conducted by her pastor, Rev. E. W. Rowland assisted by Rev. W. Barrett, of Kingston preached the sermon from Proverbs 31 and 15-31 regarding woman. "Who can find a virtuous woman for her price is far above rubies."
Besides the sorrowing husband, she leaves six children, a married daughter Mrs. Johnston, of Oshawa; four boys, Ewart, John, Garnet and Ernest, and Beatrice, aged eighteen months, and her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Forman, of Carmel.
The pall bearers were nephews of Mrs. Grills and the Rockah Lodge No. 211 too charge at the grave, the deceased having been a member of it. The floral tributes were most beautiful, conveying the deep sympathy of the givers.

Beverley Nichols, the young English author of "Twenty-Five, Are they the Same at Home," etc., who lectured extensively in America two years ago, writes now from England saying that he is working eighteen hours a day on a revue with Ivor Novello, which is to be produced by Charles B. Cochran. When Mr. Nichols sleeps is a deep mystery, for he also has another play and novel well under way.

AUSTRALIA IS IN DEPRESSION

Big Decrease in Yield From Great Wool Crop is Cause

SYDNEY, Australia, May 15.—By the Canadian Press—Australia is undergoing a period of severe economic depression. The present government has taken valiant measures, including increases in many customs duties designed to aid in establishment of industries in Australia, cutting down loans from overseas markets, pulling into effect a rigid programme of economy. The state governments have followed this example.
A sharp decrease in the price of wool Australia's greatest export industry is the underlying cause of the depression. There is more money invested in wool, and the value of its annual production is greater, than any other industry in the commonwealth. Australia's record wool crop of 1929-30 has reached a total of $350,000,000.
Australia's sheep population is about 100,000,000, many of them merinos, ultimate scope of suitable country, and the skill and enterprise of breeders have enabled Australia to lead the world in sheep and wool.
But in the last nine months wool prices fell disastrously. Whereas the average price was 7 pence halfpenny 1928-29 selling season, it is today around little more than 4 pence. The present average cost of production of wool is higher than the prices obtained and wool is being sold at a loss to the growers.
Australia's receipts for her wool this year will be about $125,000,000 less than last season. Naturally there is this much money less in circulation, and the ramifications spread through all the country's activities. Fewer people are employed in office, shop, or factory governments feel the pinch through reduced general revenues, and this is as well.

FIFTH BIRTHDAY OF Y-SDOM WAS CELEBRATED

Peterboro Club Motored to Belleville for Red-Letter Affair

Belleville Y's Men's Club celebrated the fifth anniversary of its foundation last night at the Association building on Campbell Street. The occasion was a particularly significant one as the event was marked in conjunction with the Peterboro club, twenty members of which motored here. It was a red-letter night in District Y'sdom circles and one which will not soon be forgotten. It was the unanimous wish of the members of both clubs and district officers that similar affairs be held at intervals, in order to strengthen the bonds existing between the various branches of this great Service organization.

Last night's get-together was featured by a delightful musical program while the Y's Men's male chorus under the direction of Ross Hunter contributed several numbers.

Bob Brown, President of the Belleville Club occupied the chair and under his direction, the program presented, proved one of interest and keen enjoyment.

Previous to the opening of the meeting, a huge birthday cake bearing five candles was cut by the Past-Presidents of the local club, Norm Edwards, "Army" Armstrong and George Pauley. Unfortunately Steve Lacroe one of the charter members and one of the first Presidents found it impossible to attend. Percy Cole acted as community song leader while "Army" Armstrong was sergeant-at-arms. Harry Poste who has held the position of club treasurer for the past four years, was signally honoured when he was presented with a small token by the members. The presentation was made by "Al" Walters who, in his own inimitable style brought down the house with his remarks levelled at the luck'een Harry, who was somewhat chagrined on opening the parcel.

Officially Recognized

President Harry Todhope of the Peterboro club said he was looking forward to a return visit on the part of the Belleville club to Peterboro. Newton Thompson, President of International Y's Men embracing all the branches in the world, spoke briefly dwelling chiefly on a conference held in New York last week when Y'sdom received official recognition from the National Council of the United States Young Men's Christian Association. The Canadian National Council endorsed the movement some months ago. "Y's Men's Clubs are further ing Y.M.C.A. work throughout the world, and the U. S. Council have promised to do all in their power to develop the work. It is one of the greatest Service Club movements in the world and I know on a number basis than ever before," President Thompson said. He mentioned the International convention at Wilkes-Barre, Pa., this year when all members will be recipients of real American hospitality. A short talk by Larry Beatty of St. Catharines, Ontario Governor, was followed by a violin solo by Mack Warren of Peterboro. Mr. Beatty urged co-operation on the part of the members to make for a successful club.

"We are representing something as Y's Men," said "Army" Armstrong. Past President, "that we have a real duty to perform in community service." He paid his tribute to Joe Sheriff local Association Secretary, Mr. Armstrong thanked the importance of concentrating in the Y.M. C.A. for service. "I think we have made a real contribution both toward the community and the Association in the last five years," he observed Jack Marsh and Percy Cole then brought down the house with two intriguing numbers.

"We usually get something back for our investment and I think I have from this club" said George Pauley, a former President. Russel Rollins of Peterboro was a piano number Norm Edwards, Lieut Governor for Eastern Ontario spoke of the necessity of Sectional conferences and proposed that one be held in October jointly with Peterboro, when the officers of both clubs will be initiated. His suggestion met with general approval. Doug Lemieux, physical director of the "Y" in Peterboro and Tommy Dolson, an officer, of the Peterboro club both spoke briefly after which the affair was brought to a close.

Dr. O. A. Marshall and Mrs. Marshall have been on a motor trip through Northern Ontario and Manitoulin Island, and are at present visiting their son, Dr. Jack Marshall at Thessalon, Ontario.

Jack Miner and the Birds

and Some Things I Know About Nature

by

Jack Miner Himself

"COPYRIGHT AND FOR SALE IN BOOK FORM AT ALL BOOK STORES"

The drakes have nothing else to do for the summer months, and they moult the latter part of June. Their wing feathers are about out so fast they usually are flying again in about a month. But the ducks, as I have previously stated, are the most faithful mothers on earth, and neglect themselves for their families, not moulting before the young are full grown and have been flying at least two weeks. Then her wing feathers drop out, and because she cannot fly with her family they all desert her, and she sneaks away in the rushes and is seldom seen until she is able to fly again. By this time her family have completely forgotten all about her. I have never seen them pay any particular attention to her afterwards, in fact they pay just as much attention to a drake who possibly might have been their father, and by the first of October the whole family may be scattered and become comparative strangers to each other, seldom two of them ever being together. This is pointed out plainly by the ducks with rings on being noted here and there without any two banded together. Further proof of this is that only two or three sportsmen through America have ever reported killing over one, yet they will often say, "a flock of ducks came into our decoys; we killed so many; among them was this one with the tag on," and so forth. And as I have previously stated, we have never noticed two tagged ducks return together.

We often hear sportsmen speak of seeing floppers in the marsh on the first of September, apparently believing that they are young ducks. I have never seen a young duck in my life that could not fly on that date. They usually fly by July 20th. Sometimes an old duck will lay a second setting if the first nest is destroyed; this will put her back five or six weeks. The floppers that are seen in September are old ducks. We had a duck we called "Old Lame," she had part of her foot shot away. After raising her family she did not moult until August, and it was October 5th before I saw her flying.

One gentleman writes me, "If a duck looses her mate will she pair off again that summer?"

This all depends on the variety of duck. Wood ducks pair off and if one is killed the other is a failure for at least that season, but black and grey ducks will pair off the very next day. I have taken a black drake and a grey across black and some half-grey ducks, all from the setting of her own eggs.

During the spring months one often see three ducks flying here and there all over the marsh. This is a pair of ducks and a strange drake interfering. Now I have never seen a case of this cough and rendy Brigham where the duck was the least bit to blame. The drakes are all the same, like barnacles. The less said the better.

CHAPTER XXI

The Migration of Ducks

Ever since I started tagging birds, my desire for the never-tiring sport has been constantly increasing, and today I have carloads of unsatisfied ambition all over America just because I cannot get my leg on them all. Altogether, I have tagged four thousand and forty ducks since starting, and I am well pleased with the amount of interest the sportsmen have displayed in writing me from different shooting grounds of America where these tagged birds have fallen.

It is remarkable how these letters differ in tone, how men will expose who they are by their hand-writing, stating how they captured the bird, or how it got caught in a muskrat trap; this, of course, is their Latin way of saying "I shot the duck out of season." But about the limit was when a gentleman wrote as follows: "I am an officer or tne law, and the other night while on duty I was in pursuit of two whiskey smugglers crossing our river. I ordered them to stop, but they did not heed, so I fired my revolver in the air, and down came a wild duck with a tag on."

I would like to match this "officer of the law" against a "detective" we have in our town. This man had been duck hunting and next day when asked "What-luck?" replied, "Well, just middling; good and bad both. You know I had the old muzzle-loader, and I got up at Cedar Creek just daybreak; looked, and saw the largest flock of ducks on earth coming right towards me. So I squatted in the rushes, and when they came over I rose up, taking steady aim where they were the thickest, pressed the trigger, and both barrels snapped, but down came twenty-seven ducks. Really if the gun had gone off I know I would have killed a thousand!"

Another letter states, "I wish I could get more of the ducks. I was out all morning and got only twenty-four. The one with the tag on was amongst them. How is the shooting down your way?" Reply: Good.

Worst of all was a well-educated man who never wrote at all, but the duck was seen by a friend of mine, who reported it; then I wrote the doctor the second time, enclosing a self-addressed postal card before I got a short acknowledgment.

But like all other things in my life, the good that has been blown my way has completely drifted the undesirable under. I have received some of the most beautiful letters that ever were written by God-fearing and loving hands.

One man explains, "I received the message you put on the duck's leg, and it is so personal it makes me love you for sending it. Will you please let me keep it?" His request was cheerfully granted, for the message read, "He careth for you. Peter 5:7."

A lady writes, "My boy shot the duck. Thank you for the message; it makes us friends."

A soldier boy writes, "Uncle Sam has me fighting in the colors and I cannot respond. Should I live to return I will be pleased to come and see you. You will find enclosed the tag I took from the duck's leg. Good-bye." On looking at the tag which this duck had carried for over a year and finally delivered to this young soldier, out for his last day's recreation before leaving for the battlefield, I nearly choked with human blood, I found that the message read: "For me to live is Christ, and to die is gain. Philippians 1:21."

The following is a letter from Dr. Axby in reply to my printed pamphlet requesting him to return the tag. I know the Doctor will pardon my reproducing his letter, as I have dozens similar to it, but his was the first I came to.

January 1st, 1919.

Mr. Jack Miner,

I am in receipt of your interesting letter, and assure you we are glad there are such men as you in the world, and shall endeavor to remember your interest in game life and govern ourselves in accord with your wishes.

Here wishing you a Happy, Prosperous, Peaceful 1920, and more to come,

Enclosed find your tag.

Your truly,

(Dr.) J. L. Axby.

The following letter would cause one to believe that there are Stupid Men, have not yet been visited by Billy Sunday, particularly as the entire Bible verse was stamped on the tag:

May 2, 1920.

Box 68,

Kingsville, Ont.

Dear Unseen Friend,—

On the aluminum plate bent around a wild duck's leg bore these words: John 1-21. I can't make out the meaning.

Wishing to hear from you,

Yours truly,

H. Holly Grove, Ark., Feby. 28th, 1920.

Box 48,

Kingsville, Ontario.

The mallard drake on which you placed the aluminum tag bearing the following inscription on one side, "Write Box 48, Kingsville, Ontario," and on the other side, "Will; God all things are possible, Mark 10:27," was killed near this place a few days ago. We had notice put in the Arks, Democrat, published in Little Rock, Ark.

About the 1st of October of each year these ducks begin to come into this country, and they feed on rice and acorns and other seeds. Some years they are very numerous. We also have a few geese. They begin to go away from now on to the latter part of March. None remains except those which have been wounded too badly to make the long flight.

Will you please write me when you put the tag on this duck, and how old was he when you put it on? Do they stay in your country during the summer months? Write me any information concerning them.

Very truly,

T. G. Trice.

Then a lady from the South gives a laughable account of what happened down there over one of the colored preachers getting a message in this most unexpected way:

Dear Mr. Miner—

I think you will be interested in knowing about some of your geese and ducks. While I was in Mississippi last winter I visited in Louisana and Arkansas. Along the last of November some of the negroes on the plantation went over on the sandbar to hunt for wild geese, and they got several ducks and two big gray geese and on one of the legs was a tin tag with a Bible inscription on it. The old darky that happened to get it was a great preacher; could not read a word, but was gifted with lots of gab and exhorted quite a lot. He though the message came down from heaven and they had quite a revival over it. I heard him one night and he said: "This am the message of the Lord. I sent the bird wending with this fowl in His arms, and it flew right at me. And now am the judgment coming and we are all elected, and am going straight to His arms."

I don't remember just what verse it was, but I remember it was your address and think perhaps this will interest you.

Yours truly,

SATTERED ON DUTY

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., May 16 (CP) —William Latham, customs officer at the ferry dock is in hospital here, badly injured by two men who assaulted and robbed him of sixty-five dollars belonging to the department. The first intimation the police had of the crime was a call from some person inquiring as to the officer's condition.

T. B. FROM MILK

BUCKETING OF STOCK SHARES

Provinces' Suggestion Regarding Security Fraud Followed

Ottawa, May 16.—Amendments to the Criminal Code which were suggested at the recent conference in Toronto of Attorneys-General of the various Provinces with respect to bucketing and other stock market operations were introduced in the House of Commons by the Minister of Justice, Hon. Ernest Lapointe.

Section 11 of the bill is inserted upon the recommendation of the Interprovincial Conference regarding security frauds and matters incidental thereto, held at Toronto upon the invitation of the Attorney-General of Ontario. Paragraph 3 on page 4 of the printed report of the conference reads as follows:

"That in respect of Dominion criminal law, as all provisions for major offences had to be made under the Criminal Code, and as the Deputy Attorney-General attending the conference reported great difficulty in the past in proving bucketing, it was advisable to suggest to the Minis ry of Justice at Ottawa that a new section be added to the Criminal Code. Accordingly a draft, Section 231A, was prepared to cover the offense of a broker reducing the quantity of stock which he should be carrying for his customers by selling for his own account against his customers' buying orders."

New Section

The new section of the act is as follows:

"11. The said Act is further amended by adding immediately after Section 231 thereof the following:

"231A. Every person is guilty of an indictable offence, and liable to seven years' imprisonment, who, being an individual, or a member or employee of a partnership, or a director, officer or the partnership or corporation is a second degree to a term of imprisonment not exceeding two years, or both, who, directly or indirectly, either in Canada or elsewhere, thereafter sells, or causes to be sold, shares of such company or undertaking for any account in which he or his firm, or partner thereof, or the corporation of which he is director, officer or employee, has a direct or indirect interest, if the effect of such sale shall otherwise than unintention ally be to reduce the amount of such shares in the hands of the broker, or under his control, in the ordinary course of business, below the amount of such shares which the broker should be carrying for all customers.

Drunken Driving

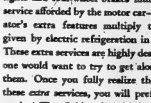
The Minister of Justice is putting teeth in the law making provisions for more adequate penalties for drunken motorists.

Present Subsection 4 of Section 285 of the Criminal Code reads as follows:

"4. Every one who, while intoxicated, has the charge or control of a horse or cattle or a motor vehicle or a motor or not, shall be guilty of an offense and liable, upon summary conviction, for the first offence, to a term of imprisonment not exceeding thirty days and not less than seven days; for a second offence, to a term of imprisonment not exceeding three months and not less than one month; and for each subsequent offence to a term of imprisonment not exceeding one year and not less than three months."

Search Made for Another Woman

Cleveland, Ohio, May 16 (CP). — Search for the woman said to have threatened Dr. Alfred F. Scully with death if he married another woman was begun in Chicago and California by private investigators retained by friends of the physician who was slain in his office here, last March. At the same time the police have planned to question Mrs. Eunice Rockwell, this y two, who arrived here from Miami, claiming to have been married to the doctor. It was she who told of another woman, police say. The woman brought with her her fourteen year old boy said to be the son of the physician who was supposed to have been a bachelor. Dr. Scully was a native of Lindsay, Ontario.



TWIN CALVES

Callander, Ont., May 16 (CP).—For the third consecutive year one of Robert Hatton's two cows have given birth to twins. Within the past week both gave birth to twins, three male and one female.

THE 4-way cold KELVINATOR gives these Extra Services!

- Automatic Super-Fast Freezing—Iso-Thermic Tubes, an exclusive Kelvinator discovery, provide for the first time amazingly fast automatic freezing of ice cubes and desserts.
- Cold Storage Compartment—In de luxe models, a compartment always below freezing for storing fresh or frozen meats, fish, game and those new frozen delicacies you now find at many markets.
- Greatest Ice Capacity—De luxe models provide more ice, size for size, than any other refrigerator. A single freezing gives from 20 pounds in the smallest size to 34 pounds in the largest size.
- Kelvin Cooler—An accessory, useful in two ways: First, to freshen vegetables and keep them fresh; and second, as a water cooler. All-porcelain, inside and out, and fitted with faucet.

In the same sense that the self-starter, electric lights and footwheel brakes multiplied the service afforded by the motor car—so Kelvinator's extra features multiply the service given by electric refrigeration in the home. These extra services are highly desirable. No one would want to try to get along without them. Once you fully realize the merit of these extra services, you will prefer Kelvinator's 4-Way Cold and multiple services in home refrigeration.

Three Canadian Heirs to Estate

Toronto, May 16 (CP).—Three Canadian heirs are named in the will of the late Mrs. Lilian Wagner of Dunkirk, N.Y., which was granted ancillary probate today. Mrs. Wagner left an estate valued at $62,360, a large part of which consists of interest in the Gordon Mackay Co. Ltd., of Toronto. Most of the estate goes to her husband, her brother and other relatives at Dunkirk, N.Y. The Canadian beneficiaries are Daisy Ellis, Toronto, who was left $100 in cash; Rebecca Ellis, of the same address, who will receive 20 shares of the first preference stock of the Gordon Mackay Co., and Dr. G. H. Jenning, of Brantford, who is to receive 10 shares of the same stock. The estate consists of real estate valued at $42,740 which includes a three-seventeenth interest in the Gordon Mackay property at the corner of Bay and Front streets, Toronto; mortgages $2,734, 65 stocks $24,495, cash $479.54 rem: in hands of trustees $552 and miscellaneous personal property including real estate in Dunkirk N.Y.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

SUNSET EYES

by

H. Louis Raybold

Copyright, 1930, International Features Service, Inc.

Two women stood in the doorway of the small wooden shack that served Venturas as both post-office and general store and discussed the neighbor of one of them.

"This business of the dam hits your friend Jim harder'n the rest of us, I allow," said the elder of the two.

Judith shrugged her slender shoulders. "To tell the truth, Libby, I'm sick and tired of Jim's shiftlessness. Before his first wife did die. Is that any reason he should lie down on his job with two youngsters on his hands? Other men have lost their wives and buckled down to being both pa and ma to their kids."

"Well, he sure is all broke up now at having to give up his homestead to the government that he and Bessie claimed together."

"You mean, sell it to the government. And at a good price, besides. this dam is going to be the making of all of us. Something besides sagebrush in our dooryards. No more lugging water by the pail from a creek that dries up come June. I hated some ways to move out of my place, but I'd feel like a fool to waste tears over something that in the long run is to my advantage."

The two women separated. One to climb into a topless flivver gray with dust, the other to mount a sleek range pony eager to be off.

Judith gave Peter the rein. Her thoughts were busy, not with the hand in along whose rim she rode, filled though it was with the activity of a thousand men and machines laboring to pile up the great Jacinta Dam that was to impound the waters of Jacinta Creek.

No, she was thinking about Jim whom she had loved ever since she could remember.

She was recalling the day he had left her to join the fire fighters up in the Raven Mountains. He had grabbed her two hands in his. "Good-by, Jude, no telling how long I'll be gone but when I come back I've got some thing to tell you."

He had been gone nearly three weeks and when he returned his dad fanned him something to tell her but it wasn't what he had meant at the time.

"I feel kinder queer about surprising you this way, Judith. You see — well, I met a girl up there. The fire warden's daughter. We sort er fell in love at first sight. Anyhow, we ran away to Buffalo Corners and got married two days ago!"

Bessie, the fire warden's daughter, had hated the plains from the beginning. Four years later she had died shortly after the birth of her second child.

Ah, if only Jim had never gone off to set that back-fire in the mountains! Suddenly, Judith drew a quick deep breath. Backfire! Well, why not? Why couldn't she start a little backfire of her own to combat Jim's despondency?

A few months later Jacinta Reservoir covered all that had once been Judith's ranch and, a little farther on, Jim's.

Judith had taken up a homestead seven miles west, not very far from Jim this time, either. Jim, in fact, to reach his own gate must first pass Judith's.

But a great change had taken place in Judith. Even Jim, absorbed in his own misfortunes, had become aware of it. Always as he rode by Judith was busily in the dooryard, her hands folded, her dark eyes fixed on the speck of blue in the distance as though they sought beneath those far waters her former home.

Whenever he stopped, she had always one sad complaint. "Leaving the old place has taken the heart out of me, Jim."

"I don't understand you, Judith," he said one day. "You used to be so —well, so full of go and energy you put me to shame. And now, why you don't even fuss with your flowers when you've got plenty of water!"

Judith had sighed. "Where would I get anybody to dig me a garden!"

Jim had pondered a moment. Then, "Tell you what I'll do. I'll come over and dig your garden. There's a piece of your corral that needs patching, too, and I'll tend to that."

He did not see Judith later as she went about her task of getting supper. Gone was the droop at the corners of her mouth. Her eyes shone. Maybe—maybe Jim was going to wake up at last!

He was as good as his word and appeared the next day with little Jimmy and two year old Betty. Judith made flapjacks for them all afterwards. She even meddled little Jimmy's rompers and curled his little sister's hair. Ah, how good she would be to them if—

Jim continued to drop in regularly. Jim and the youngsters. One day he mended the tar-papered roof over her kitchen. Another, he helped her set out some young poplars for a future windbreak.

Then one evening as they sat on the doorstep watching a purple sunset behind the dim serrated line on the horizon thus was the Raven mountain range, Jim laid down his pipe and spoke out what was on his mind.

"Jude, I've got something to tell you!"

The girl's heart lost a beat.

"I'm thinking of getting married again. And—and I want you to know it's more out of duty to the kids than out of love for the woman. I'm not even sure she'll have me."

"What an odd way to put a proposal!" was the thought that flashed through Judith's mind.

"The children need a mother and I daresay Libby Barnes will be as good as any."

"Libby!" Ah, what a fool she had been! Something in her stricken eyes must have awakened Jim.

"Judith!" he cried. "Judith! If I thought there was any chance in the world—you know it has always been you I loved but I felt as if I had lost all right to even think about you. If you would forgive me and marry me, why I'd pitch in and make our two places here the talk of Jacinta County! But I can't ask you to mother another's kids, too—"

"The sunset was no more shining than Judith's eyes. "Try it and see!" she whispered, softly.

Joy of Thrift is Not in Scrimping

By S. W. Straus, President American Society for Thrift

A reader of this department writes: "I should like to have information on the amount of one's income to be spent on each item."

It would not be possible to give an answer to this question for the reason that different conditions prevail with each individual. We each have our problems of personal economics and what might be considered good thrift upon the part of one person might be quite the opposite for another. We are all striving to make progress but each of us is confronted by situations that must be taken into consideration in planning our budgets.

There are certain principles, however to which we should all adhere. We should bear in mind that thrift is not merely saving money. It is the process of thriving. We should save as much money as possible and most persons are so situated that they can to advantage save from 5 per cent to 25 per cent of their incomes but we should not save money to the detriment of our personal welfare. We must conserve our health and maintain a standard of living commensurate with our position in the world. If we are young we must secure an education. We must do our share in contributing to worthy religious and philanthropic movements. We must not get into a rut which means that we should read good books, patronize good forms of entertainment and broaden ourselves through travel. At the same time we must do none of these things wastefully. Thrift is the elimination of waste.

The science of personal management involves ingenuity and resourcefulness. We can not work out our destiny by fixed rule. We must think out our plans and have sufficient willpower and character to do what we know is for our best. In this way we develop judgment and administrative ability.

The joy of thrift is not in scrimping and saving every penny possible and putting it in a savings bank. The joy of thrift is in planning our personal affairs so that we shall truly thrive. The test of thrift is our ability in spite of all odds and obstacles to carry out a well ordered system of personal advancement.

It's True —

GASOLENE can GUM-UP YOUR VALVES

"What's the matter?" asked the motorist. "Sticky valves," answered the repair man. "What's the reason?" was the next question.

We'll tell you—gum in gasolene!

Cities Service experts were among the first to discover the harmful effects of excessive gum in gasolene — and to provide a remedy.

The remedy is Koolmotor Gasolene—a gas that is free from harmful gum. Extra care and extra refining—known as the Cities Service mini-gum process—have reduced the gum content in Koolmotor Gasolene to a harmless minimum.

This superior motor fuel is powerful and clean burning. It is eager to go—full of speed—provides mile after mile of smooth, knock-free performance. It keeps your valves clean, free moving—it guards against loss of compression and power.

Don't burden your motor with sticky, gummy, clogging gasolenes. Insist on Koolmotor Gasolene, the original high test, anti-knock green gas. Then your motor will be free to do its best.

MOTHER'S DAY WAS OBSERVED IN MADOC VILLAGE CHURCH, SUNDAY

Madoc, May 14 (By Mail)—Mothers' Day was fittingly observed at Trinity United Church on Sunday last in a service of song, story and pageant, at the Sunday school first, and then in the morning service, which the members of the Sunday school attended in a body, marching into the church. The form of service supplied by the O.S.H.C., was used, and the superintendent, Mr. Jas. Keene, led the service, taking his place with Rev. O. V. Rivers on the platform.

The Invocation was followed by "Holy, Holy, Holy, Lord God Almighty," prayer followed and then "I think, when I read that Sweet Story of Old." Scripture readings followed, the juniors giving the story of Mary and the Infant Jesus, the intermediate telling of the boy Jesus, and the seniors telling the story of Jesus' thoughtfulness and care of His Mother.

The offering for Sunday school work was taken in the Sunday school hour. Miss Norma Fair gave a wonderful story of "The Search for the Beautiful," after which a very excellent duet was given by Mrs. Hollis (contralto) and Mr. Ross (baritone) "O Mother, My Own."

The hymn "For the beauty of the Earth," was followed by a pageant which had been carefully prepared, and was well given, showing "What makes the difference?" a good lesson on the difference between Women of Heathen lands and the Women of Christendom and containing also splendid suggestions as to how Sunday evenings may be made interesting and profitable to the younger members of the family. The parts of parents were well taken by Mrs. Rutherford and R. Wellman. The children were Gray Rivers, Kelvin Kincaid, Aileen Kelly, Jean Nickle, Helen Wellman and Donald Rutherford. Special mention should be made of the solo so pretty sung by little Miss Wellman, who gave "Away in a Manger." All the parts were well given, and the pageant was most interesting throughout.

At the evening service, which was preceded by an Organ recital by Miss Ramsay, the special feature was a full choir of Mothers to lead in the singing of hymns of thanksgiving and praise. The Invocation was followed by the singing of "Thou gracious God, whose mercy lends the light of home, the smile of Friends," and the prayer by Rev. O. V. Rivers was one of thanksgiving and petition for mothers and homes. The voluntary followed the solo part being taken by Mrs. George White, and chosen by the whole choir, "Friendship so lasting, tender and true, these Mother dear, are my wish for You."

The Scripture reading was from Proverbs, thirty-first Chapter, and the text for the evening was from the same chapter, and the 28th verse: Her children arise up, and call her blessed; her husband also, and he praiseth her. This chapter Mr. Rivers called a classic of the attributes of Womanhood and Motherhood. The theme was "Helping Mother" and was a plea for the home and home-training, which would show its fruits in the bettering not only of home conditions but would influence the Community life and social life.

A beautiful duet was given by Mrs. V. Reid and Mrs. C. N. Whytock, "When Mother Prayed," and the service was closed by the hymn, "Happy the Home when God is There, and Love fills every breast," followed by the Benediction and Vesper hymn.

In the Mothers' Choir were Mesdames Ashley, Morcroft, Huffman, Maybee, Taylor, White, Whytock, Irwin, Lodbrook, Fair, Reid, Fox, Rivers Embury and Lowery.

"THE CANADIAN CAR"

Keep Your Finger On Public Events

Curiosity Is a Good Thing—Bloch

Curiosity is the propelling motive that makes children learn.

Curiosity is the same motive that keeps adults educated.

This instinct of curiosity is found focused in concentrated form in lower forms of the animal kingdom and it is some thing no animal nor any human being ever entirely conquers.

Nor should it be conquered providing one's curiosity is directed to learning and finding out facts that are of value

Keep abreast of current events through reading of newspapers, magazines, books, etc., is a worth-while way of satisfying the curiosity urge.

But indulging in petty gossip, running after fire engines, stopping to investigate every crowd that gathers in the street, is giving way to curiosity in a form that will never benefit anybody.

Curiosity, like all other instincts, can be used for useful purposes as well as abused to the extent of self-detriment.

Be curious to find out the best in life and you will be subscribing to a most valuable form of education.

Don't accept people merely on faith. Be curious to investigate and analyze them in order to discover whether or not their companionship or friendship will be an asset or a hindrance.

In reading a book try to find the author's purpose and be curious to know whether or not he portrays life truthfully.

Incite your natural-born curiosity to discovering merit, earnestness, sincerity, sentiment, knowledge or attested worth, the true facts of life.

Curiosity of this worthwhile type is never annoying or offensive.

No one will ever criticize you for being curious for purposes of self-education.

It is only the petty type of curiosity that is repulsive, the prying into other people's affairs, the unmasking of things that are salacious or strictly private.

Every great inventor has been prompted by curiosity.

Every medical discovery that has saved lives or ameliorated suffering has had the same kind of propelling urge.

Every boon to mankind that has ever been thought of has had the background of curiosity to start it going.

Do not, therefore, stifle your curiosity instinct.

Rather, foster it.

Be sure in making it fulfill a fundamental craving, that you make it serve you for self-betterment!

Were it not for the fact that scientific curiosity finally supplanted the mysticism and superstitious beliefs of the Middle Ages civilization would not be where it is today.

We cannot, however, rest our oars, as it were, at this stage of development.

Although every one cannot be a Galileo, a Newton, a Harvey, an Edison, a Ford or an Einstein, surely everyone can arouse his curiosity sufficiently to find out how his own possibilities can be developed to the best notch, thereby in sum total, to combination with everyone else, pushing civilization ahead.

It is never too late to be curious.

Only let curiosity be of the right kind and make it lead to something worth while.

Religion is becoming less and less a way to get into heaven and more and more a way to get hell out of the earth.—William Allen White.

DISCUSS DOG QUESTION

Council's delay on the dog question has given the citizens time to discuss the matter. In today's paper is a letter from Dr. Ackerill discussing the question and doubtless others will be pleased to give their views on the matter.

GETTING ALONG

So far Belleville has got along well while the lower bridge is closed. Of course it is too early to boast but if the present happy arrangement continues to work out during the next two months, the situation created by the detour will have been solved.

MOTORIST BLAMED

Another crime has been charged against the motorcar. In the freedom of Canada and the United States fences are a rarity in this age, the wooden barriers of other days having largely disappeared as people felt the benefit of living in amity and accord without a fence to keep them from invading one another's property.

But the motorcar has brought unusual visitors to unusual parts and flowers have been stolen from private grounds. The result is inevitable, gates are coming back and freedom of the visitors is being restricted. European properties are many of them safeguarded with fences, walls and hedges and while it is not at all probable that they will come here, there is a chance of greater restriction. The lawns which merge into one another may be again scored and checkered with fences and walls if motor visitors do not leave private property alone.

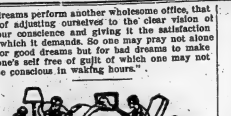
Motorists from cities should respect the rights of farmers to their orchards and flowers and vegetables.

APPEAL TO TOURISTS

Three hundred and fifty million dollars was spent last year in Canada by United States tourists is the statement by United States authorities. While the amount may be difficult to arrive at, it is easily seen that there was a large amount of money expended here by guest motorists.

How much did Belleville get out of this? Whatever Belleville was able to attract during her tourist camp, her fine stores and stocks of goods, and the general appearance of the city. Tourists did not spend money except for food and gasoline unless there was a real appeal. Belleville like other places is certain to get a percentage of the outlay for foods and gasoline which motorists are so-called upon to make. But if the city can coax and persuade motorists to stay over, then the real profits begin for motorists when they have time on their hands, spend money for foods and for whatever catches their eye.

Hold the passing tourist is a good motto for this city to have. Hotels are doing their utmost to keep the visitors about for a few days for this may mean their return next year.



One of the best ways to scare away some of that $350,000,000 in 1930 is to allow individuals to pester motorists on highways and streets by soliciting them to remain over. That fortunately is to be prevented in the future. We are more likely to stay over if they are not pestered to death by boys acting as agents for camps and houses turned into summer homes or tourists' rests.

THE DREAM HOUSE

Dr. Franz Alexander speaking at Washington discussed dreams. Dr. Alexander gives dreams an office allowing the conscience, the super-ego, to perform its judicial functions while we sleep. We may thus be enabled to do waking life at peace with our environment. The New York Times says:

"One might say of such a hall of dreams what the Sibyl said to Aeneas concerning the city around which Phlegethon rolled: It is the judgment hall of Rhadamanthus where things are brought to light which one thought impenetrably hid and where the scorpion whips are applied. Bad dreams are but the punishment of one's supreme self, the "hungry divinity" insisting upon justice and exacting expiation. The sleep of the just man is one presumably undisturbed by such dreams because his conscience has no biases against him in its Rhadamanthan court. One wonders, however, if the judge is not sometimes influenced by bribes to let the subject sleep on when he should be working out a sentence.

"It is a theory which tells us too—even the Freudian Dr. Brill assenting—that "the average man cannot do wrong without feeling guilt." But if his guilt may be exorcised in dreams, the offense must be solely against one's best self and not against society. This Rhadamanthine court, which sits only at night and inflicts its punishments during the hours of sleep is of limited jurisdiction but it it is efficient within its bounds, it follows that one who under its sentence becomes true to himself cannot then be false to any man. So one who has any doubt as to his own complete integrity can almost pray for a bad dream to assure himself that he is square again with his best self and so with the world. Some dreams are perhaps our ambitions, whose substance is itself "but the shadow of a dream-" but other dreams perform another wholesome office, that of adjusting ourselves to the clear vision of our conscience and giving it the satisfaction which it demands. So one may pray not alone for good dreams but for bad dreams to make one's self free of guilt of which one may not be conscious in waking hours."

SIDELIGHTS

TWO VIEWS

By Alice Michaelis

This is a world of greed and haste,
Of ruthlessness and pain,
Of cruel want and careless waste,
An evil, mad domain.

Ah can it truly be
This is the world you see,
When here before your eyes
A world of splendor lies?

This world breathes loveliness-
And brims with joy and light,
Where sun and stars confess
God's glory day and night!

The sad, dark place you see
Of misery and care,
Is but a phantasy
Of some dark hohr's despair.

Then turn, ah- turn away
To this real world that glows,
Glad world of work and play
Which every brave heart knows!

UR OF THE CHALDEES, has a tinge of romance for the Bible student, which will give added interest to a discovery recently made at Ur of the Chaldees where excavation has revealed the best preserved temple ever found in Mesopotamia. The temple was built by Nebuchadnezzar about 600 B.C., and was enlarged and restored about fifty years later by Nabonidus. It lies in the inner corner of the northern harbor at Ur, and was concealed by a mound whose excavation the archaeologists undertook for topographical reasons. To protect the temple against the sandstorms of the summer months a temporary roof has been laid over it and it is now possible to walk down the dark interior of Nebuchadnezzar's shrine and almost forget that its massive walls were built 2,500 years ago.

WHERE MOLOCH ONCE HELD SWAY

If the Carthage where the 1930 Eucharistic Congress is being held is only a heap of ruins, a dozen miles from the prosperous city of Tunis, the reason is not primarily that stern old Sato in a real sense had his way. That fine hater did conclude every one of his speeches in the Roman Senate- no matter on what subject, with the urgent recommendation that Carthage be destroyed, and had he lived only another three years he would have seen a Roman army execute his wish, in 146 B.C.

Within twenty-five years from its destruction the Romans were establishing a new colony on the site of Dido's and Hannibal's and Salammbo's city. Less a person than the younger Gracchus was the promoter. The settlement did not thrive, but a hundred years later the Emperor Augustus had better luck. A prosperous city grew up, the birthplace of one mighty pillar of the Church, Tertullian, and the scene of activity of a still greater figure, St. Augustine.

The ruined Carthage of today is the work of the Arab invaders of the seventh century, the same hands that wiped Roman civilization from the entire length of North Africa in the space of a few years.

LETTERS to the Editor

DOGS AND SNOW

Editor, The Ontario Intelligencer,—

Sir,—As our Council seem to have difficulty in settling the dog question I would like to make a few suggestions:

First—Ask for tenders for pound-keeper with the following conditions. For each untagged dog brought to the pound grant the sum of 25 cents to the pound-keeper. Then ask for tenders for the amount required per year in addition to this.

Second—The applicant must be a property owner if possible, and have a barn on his place. Property owners given preference over renters.

Third—In addition pound-keeper is to look after the delinquents who fail to observe the snow bylaw, also if he observes cruelty to animals, or fowls, report such. Dogs to be kept in pound two days only.

Fourth—All dogs not wearing up to date tags after May 1st to be impounded.

Fifth—The keeper is to stay at home in the morning and in the afternoon accor the city to its limits for untagged dogs and those who fail to keep their walks clear of snow.

Sixth—The time has come when a pound-keeper is absolutely necessary if justice is done to all alike. I paid $6.00 license dollars dog tax last year and almost daily had the pleasure of seeing dogs untagged many owned by people as well or better able to pay the tax.

I, who never in fifty years, was reprimanded for not keeping my walk clean of snow, was fined because my tenant's walk was not cleaned by 10 a.m. I had the pleasure of seeing dozens of walks still uncleaned the next day.

Seventh—The pound-keeper will not cost the city a cent because every dog owner will have to pay and that will double the amount collected in taxes and justice will be meted out to all alike which has got to be, else myself and others who do their duty without asking, will refuse to be made the goat any longer. One of our police told me they could not look after the dogs properly but were willing to help as I said. In one of my former letters, it is an impossition to compel them to do so. In conclusion let me say again if this business is properly handled it will not cost the city a dollar.

Yours truly,
D. H. Ackerill, V.S.

FRED FEERNOT AND THE OLD LADY

A Play by Benny Potts

Scene, a trolley car.

Fred Feernot. O, look at that poor old lady looking as if she wished she had a seet. Why don't somebody give her theirs? Why don't I, for that matter? I bleeve I will, actooly—spesh boulder than there. Would you mind having my seet, madam?

Old Lady. At last my patience is rewarded. I been riding in crowded trolley cars for 2 years waiting for some boy to offer me his seet so I could rewang him for his pollitness by paying his way through college, and at last its happened and your the boy. I'm not a poor old lady, Im a rich old lady disguised for the ideer. What college do you choose and when do you want to start?

Fei man. Well, if nobody's going to take that seet, I know somebody that is. (Meaning himself).

Fred Feernot. Hay, goodnite, look whats happened. Now I cant give you my seet because for the simple reason I havent got any left to give.

Old Lady. Well thats too bad, after me waiting 2 years. O well, maybe youll see me in another trolley car some time, but I doubt it, Ive had about enough, I think ill ride in my imported automoebeel after this.

Fred Feernot. O well, its healthier to work your way through college anyway.

Old lady. I bleeve your rite, perhaps its all for the best.

Gleaners' Class Feted Mothers

Fonmore, Mar. 15.—A very enjoyable time was spent at the home of Miss Vera Wall on Friday evening, when the Gleaners S. S. Class entertained their mothers at their regular monthly meeting.

The items on the programme pertained to "Mothers". Written invitations were sent to the mothers to attend.

The meeting opened by singing the class songs after which Miss Evelyn Gough had charge of the devotional exercises.

Miss Ferne Bamber read the scripture lesson, and Mrs. Earle Spencer and Miss Vera Wall rendered a beautiful duet. After Miss Bessie Dafoe gave a recitation. Some beautiful selections were given on the gramophone and Miss Marion Daniels gave an interesting sketch on the origin of Mother's Day, while Mrs. Rodgers gave a reading. The meeting closed with the Mizpah benediction, after which games and music were enjoyed, while Mrs. Wall served a very dainty lunch. The party broke up after the class yell was given, thus ending a very pleasant evening.

LITTLE BENNY'S NOTE BOOK

Yestidday I was late for supper again, and I was hurry up walking home, thinking, Heck, how did I know it was going to get dark so quick, heck. I'll get heck, and I saw some little bits of white flowers growing alongside of a fents. Giving me a iceer, and I thawt, O, I'll pick a bokay for ma and she'll see it as soon as she sees me.

Whn I did, oey the bokay was mostly long grass on account of the flowers needing help to make a bokay on account of only being about 4 of them altogether and pore and ma was eating supper already potity near half ways through, and I quick sneaked in the dining room saying, Heres a bokay for you, ma, it took me quite a while to pick it.

Meaning one reason why I was late, and ma sed, You dont need to think I cant see on the kitchen you, young man, the ideer of strolling in here by broad sunclite and handing me a bunch of muddy grass and thinking your pulling a lot of wool over my eyes.

Come, come, mother, have you no romance and poetry left? pop sed. Heres a young man handing you a floral offering fresh plucked, in fact with a few roots still geticately dangling from it and instead of a pritty blush you give him a hawty snort. Is that romance, is that poetry? he sed.

Well, I suppose I will as well take the deed for the will, ma sed. And she put the bokay on the sideord and threw a hot mash handing you a way, speaking of this young man's poetical sections, it seems that Mr. Lewis called you up yestidday to tell you of a long lost poker game or something that you were sippose to know about last nite, and Mr. Romance here just remembered to tell me this afternoon.

Yes gods, I had been waiting a week for that message, pop sed, and ma sed Well its too late now, but no doubt youll be able to find a romantic and poetical side to it hee hee.

Carmel Women's Missionary Society Held Fine Meeting

Carmel, May 15. (By Mail). — Carmel W. M. S. Ladies met at the home of Mrs. J. B. Patterson on Wednesday, May 7th. The meeting opened with the President, Mrs. Hine, as leader, singing "The Whole Wide World for Jesus." Mrs. Dafoe offered prayers. The minutes were read by the secretary, Mrs. Simmons. Mrs. Morton moved the adoption.

Fourteen members gave short sketches on Watch Tower. Mrs. Haines read the first chapter of Acts. Miss Fern Patterson took the devotional part.

Miss Mildred Jones explained in her own words, the first chapter of the study book, which was very interesting to the members. The Pres. asked questions on the chapter, the members replying.

A piano solo was given by Miss Fern Patterson. A reading was then given by Miss Reynolds and also a reading by Mrs. Patterson, entitled "The Heroine of the North Country".

The meeting closed with the benediction. A social hour was spent at which Mrs. Patterson and Fern served dainty refreshments.

Tabernacle W.M.S.

The May meeting of the W. M. S. of the Tabernacle United Church was held Thursday afternoon, May 8th, in the church parlors, with the President Mrs. Horton, in the chair.

The meeting was opened with hymn "On in Victory." The scripture lesson from S. John, 17th chapter, was read by Mrs. Caverly, followed with prayer by Mrs. Horton. After the minutes of the last meeting were read and adopted, the Treasurer, Mrs. Fisher, gave her report showing a steady progress with work done by the different groups. Mrs. Sanford and members of her group were in charge of the program in honor of Mother's Day. Mrs. Barlow gave a reading and Mrs. Duff contributed a solo. Mrs. Hinds gave a reading on Mother's Day, and Mrs. Boardman a reading on Mother's Love. Mrs. Frost sang a beautiful solo, "The Fairest and Sweetest of them All", and readings by Mrs. Fisher and Mrs. Sanford concluded the program. A special collection for flowers was taken and the meeting was closed by all repeating the Lord's Prayer.

THE PLAY

"Rebecca's Triumph," a play in three acts, premiered on the evening of May 5th at Alkin's Church, was great ly appreciated by a large audience.

The cast of characters was:

Rebecca—a foundling around whose life the play centres—Mrs. C. McMullen.

Mrs. Rokeman—a proud, wealthy, light toned lady—Mrs. Delborne Westover.

Crazy Meg—a vagrant, Clara Delmar, who turns out to be Mrs. Rokeman's sister—Mrs. Roy Duffin, a t.

Mrs. Delaine—a widow, nurse of the Delmar girls—Mrs. Wm. McMullen.

Gyp—a colored girl, maid for Mrs. Delaine—Miss Jennie Moon.

Katie Connor—an Irish girl in love Maid for Mrs. Rokeman—Mrs Herb Hinchcliffe.

Clarissa Codman—a spinster looking for a man—Mrs. H. Eggleton.

The Girls' Cooking Club—Dora Calnes, a tease; Gladys Wheeler, Gadie Morrel, Mable Reynolds, Jennie Wegman, Evelyn Pinkle, Mellie Dunbar, Gladys Page, Maria Gray, Eleanor Kells, Gussie Green, Beadie Bush, Bush, Grace Greenwood, Aletha Perry.

The first act opens on a scene in the kitchen of Mrs. Delaine's home where Rebecca has been adopted. Mrs. Rokeman comes to visit her old nurse, almost recognizes Rebecca, her sister's child. She has disowned her sister because they both loved one man and pledged each other with rings that which ever one he chose, his choice would be sacred. The taker who is a wandering vagabond in the neighborhood comes to Mrs. Delaine's home while Mrs. Rokeman is there and tells her sad story.

Act two is a picnic scene in the grove where the girls cooking club and Rebecca are having a happy time and Dora finds a letter in an old hollow oak, which has been there for years, written by Clara's dying husband, pleading to Mrs. Rokeman to find her sister. She appears on the scene, is much moved by the contents of the letter, but still does not give in.

Act three is a reception in Mrs. Rokeman's home where the cooking club are being entertained. In the act Rebecca comes out triumphant. Mrs Rokeman pleads her sister's forgiveness. The sisters are again united and a happy family reunion follows.

The play is enlivened by the witty speeches of Gyp, the colored girl, and Katy's love affair, who can't "trade" her Patsy's love let'em. Clarissa Codman comes on the scene several times in her endeavors to find a man and at last marries the deacon, a widower, with nine children.

The play was full of wit, humor, pathos and sentiment. Interpersed with plenty of lively music and singing, each character playing their parts exceptionally well and being well-chosen.

The success of the play was credited to Mrs. A. M. Lawrence, who so capably directed it. Solos and instrument al music were rendered between acts by talent from Holloway Street Church Belleville.

THE BEAUTY BOX

Since the bob came in, women have ceased to believe that cutting makes the hair grow thicker. Foolish notion. If cutting acted as a tonic there wouldn't be any bald-headed men. Cutting does precisely nothing to the growth of the hair. Short hair has one advantage; it can be washed more thoroughly and more conveniently. Short hair is better ventilated than long hair. That counts.

When brushing the teeth do not overlook the inner surfaces. They should be brushed from the gum down ward. An excess of starches and sweets use up alkaline secretions, necessary for the health of the teeth. Saliva is necessary not only for the digestion of food, but for the strength of pretty fangs.

Green eye shadows are being used by the la-la sirens who are always chasing the latest beauty butterfly. They come in oily form. The application is made close to the lashes, and does a fade-out as it nears the eyebrows. The safest eyeshadow, the one easiest to apply, is rouge that is used on the cheeks. When the face finishes naturally, the eyelids do a little pinking on their own.

Fashion Fancies

Introducing the Short Evening Wrap

One never would think the short evening wrap would go over. Visualizing it you might think that, worn with the new flowing, trailing gowns, the effect would be awkward. But your vision would be wrong, for in actuality there is nothing lovelier than those new short evening wraps when worn with the gowns of the new mode.

Illustrated is an interesting example of the new wrap fashioned of white velvet. This version, straight at the front, has a brief swinging cape at the back, attached by means of a V-shaped yoke. The tie collar swings around and ties in a casual manner.

The wrap proves particularly effective when worn over the gown of black and white printed chiffon.

Unless worms be expelled from the system, no child can be healthy. Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator is an excellent medicine to destroy worms.

Fashionably Speaking

By Lucille

DEAR READERS: Rainy day smartness is a comforting thing to have when skys are grey and threatening. There is nothing that is more wearing on your temper, and your clothes, than to have to wear your new spring clothes in the pouring rain.

So whether the sun beams benignantly, or rain pours down relentlessly, let's take a minute or two right now for deciding how to be fashionable and dry on a rainy day.

The French coats that caught the attention of everyone last season, were very fitting for dull days. They had a swagger touch, and were just the right weight to wear with comfort during the warm showers of summertime. The bright little leather coats helped a lot, too, and three brilliant colours make a gay note in dismal weather.

Just recently fancy fabrics, in all shades, have been introduced as the latest in fashions for wet days. And surely with all that color one can decide on a coat that appeals to you. For your head, why not wear one of those little French berets that look so engagingly smart. You can select one that nearly matches your coat or that adds a dashing note of contrast. The thing, you know is to get away from the drab in rainy day apparel.

Rubbers have given way to dainty little rain shoes to match your costume. You can get many styles, in blue, gray, beige, brown or gunmetal. Have you seen the little rubberettes that have only toes and fold up into a tiny rubber bag to be tucked into your bag? They would be very suitable for travelling, for they only last a bit of time when packing, and that's an important thing to consider when there seems to be so much to go in, and so little room to put it in!

You can get any kind of brightly-hued umbrella, at any price and then you are all ready to brave the weather And when you have such a smart costume assembled there will be no rain for weeks and weeks. Things like that do happen, don't they. Still there is one thing about a rainy day outfit, you always know that sometime it will have to rain, and then you will be all ready.

Fashionably yours,
Lucille.

EXCITED GIRLS REHEARSING FOR SEASON'S ROYAL COURT

LONDON, May 13. —In a swirl of feathers and lengthy trains, excited girls of a dozen nations are anxiously practicing swerping curtesies before their mirrors tonight in preparation for what they will make it the season's first Royal Court at Buckingham Palace tomorrow.

The formal white gowns, with their long court trains, have received their final fittings, prescribed curtsey feathers and headdresses have been tried on, locked coiffures and long white gloves laid out in anticipation of to-morrow's curtesy before the twin golden thrones.

One change will be noted in the costumes of the girls who make their court bows this season. Most of them have chosen to carry small round old fashioned bouquets instead of the tremendous sheafs so long in vogue.

The presence of the King at the court for the first time in two years will lend particular glamour to the occasion tomorrow night, as 800 notables—His Majesty's subjects and foreign guests— take the opportunity to give public thanksgiving for the King's return to health after a year's illness and convalescence. Last year the Prince of Wales deputized for King George beside his mother.

Tomorrow night dinner will be served at Buckingham Palace half an hour earlier than usual. That ended, the King and Queen will head the formal procession through the state rooms to the ballroom, followed by Princes and Princess of the Royal blood.

Accompanied by the ladies and gentlemen of the household, the Lord Great Chamberlain and such century-old functionaries as the Gold Stick and the Silver Stick in Waiting, their Majesties will take their places on the gold thrones on the scarlet and gold dais under the golden canopy, then the Princes and Princesses, including Mary, Countess of Harewood, will take their places in the Royal box behind the thrones, and the pageant of presentation will begin to unfold.

One of two innovations will mark the procedure this year, both inside and outside the palace. For the first time a wireless loudspeaker will be used to summons cars parked in the Mall and containing the waiting debutantes.

Seat the Elderly Woman First at Table

By Mrs. Cornelius Beckman

DEAR MRS BECKMAN:

You have aided so many people with their social problems by your very fine knowledge of etiquette I am now wondering if you would settle a few of my perfexities.

1. When a young girl is dining with a very dear and intimate friend, an elderly married woman and her husband, who should be seated first at the table?

2. Who should make the first move or suggest leaving the table? This seems a simple matter, yet always there seems to be an awkward moment when the repast has been finished. My host and hostess make no effort to leave and it seems to me that the guests should wait for their hostess to make such a move.

3. When crossing a busy, crowded city thoroughfare with a man, should the young lady take the man's arm, or should he take the young lady's arm?

4. A personal typewritten letter is never permissible, is it?

Thank you for your kind words—and I am delighted to have the opportunity of helping you.

1. The elderly married woman would be seated first at table as a mature and gracious compliment to her.

2. This woman too should suggest when they leave the table.

3. The gentleman offers his arm to the lady. Or he may place his hand gently under her elbow, and help her across in this way.

4. There are varying ideas about this and of course the "moderns" maintain that often such a typed note is permissible. But, to my taste one of the charming social amenities is a beautifully written note or letter, and a typewritten letter or note just isn't in the same gracious classification with the written note. Don't you agree?

Advice to Lovelorn

By Beatrice Fairfax

She Doesn't Smoke or Pet

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a girl twenty years of age. I have no boy friends. I went with one boy for a while, but he is married now. He had a date for a certain night and he had to work that night, he would not call or get in touch with me to tell me so. I often overlooked this fact, but now I know it was a mistake, also sometimes when I saw him on the street he would fail to speak. He is awful bashful and his sister says she does the same with all girls. But it hurts me for him to act so.

I guess it is needless for me to tell you that I love him. I am always thinking about him. When he went out with me he said he loved me. Do you think he could have cared when he acted so?

I am old-fashioned and do not like to kiss and pet, and therefore am not asked out much. What is wrong with me? I am not ugly. Don't boys like good girls, or do they like girls to pet and smoke. I am bashful, and always feel out of place when with boys. How can I overcome this? I don't think I can ever love another boy, because I still love the one I am telling you about. What shall I do about it, forget him if possible?

OLD-FASHIONED.

I think you've let yourself dwell too much on the case of your bashful friend who breaks his dates. A good many boys act this way to judge from the number of similar letters I get from girls. Shyness—ladies—and not very good manners all contribute to such neglect of obligation. I'm afraid. You can, of course, cut a young man who treats you this way out of your life, but the process will probably hurt you worse than it does him. I don't believe I'd stop speaking to this boy because that shows how deeply you're hurt. Why not try a little indifference—joke him a little about his date-breaking propensities, don't take him so seriously. Meantime try and make some new friends, any number of girls who do not pet and smoke, have good times. In my morning's mail, is a letter from a young man, very blue because his girl is getting tired of him. "She is so different," he writes, "she's not cheap, she doesn't pet or use a lipstick."

Boys Who Have No Idea of Team Work

By Constance Cameron

The mother of an 8-year-old boy is intimely worried because her young son doesn't display interest with the "team" or crowd of boys he associates with in any play project. His idea of life just at present is "every man for himself." What can be done about it? What is the matter with small son?

First of all there is one rather grave thing the matter, and that, unhappily is not easily remedied. The neighborhood in which the family lives harbors many children, but they are all from a year to three years older than the youngster. Now that may not seem at first glance to be any thing serious.

But when we consider the various play-phases through which a child passes we arrive immediately at the conclusion that Sonny has not yet graduated from what Joseph Lee calls the "Big Injun" state of growth. Sonny is not yet ready to be loyal to a cause, nor to take part in team play. That seems to be the last play stage to develop.

Some of us never do get the big idea, particularly us women. For so many generations we have remained at home alone, while the men have banded together to hunt or make war for our protection, that we are having a struggle to combine us women and our efforts co-operative, to be a sporting enough to submerge our own personalities to the good of whatever cause we are espousing. We are still as little children at the "Big Injun" stage, the stage of "me and mine" as opposed to "you and yours". We must learn like 8-year-old Sonny the meaning of ours.

Don't worry about your child because he does not show loyalty to a group as yet. Maybe he isn't ready for team play. Many psychologists place the team-play age as beginning around the eleventh year. Of course, no hard and fast line of demarcation can be made between this stage and any other. But don't expect nor try to urge this form of play until the child grows into the need of it.

First of all a baby, then the young child, has to establish himself as an entity. He has to prove his significance in the world. This he does through play which is growth, growth which comes by doing things, making things shewing his prowess in throwing, jumping, catching until he no longer feels the need of proving himself a successful, necessary respected human being. Just as the truly successful adult never needs to prove to himself that he is successful by bragging, so does the child outgrow the need of forcing himself and his feats and accomplishments upon the attention of others.

Only when he takes himself for granted as a necessary factor in the group, is he ready to submerge that personality of his for the good of the group, the success of his team.

The Lovable Fragrance

There is nothing in all the world of beauty that can take the place of the Lovable Fragrance of the Yardley Lavender. Wistful, winsome, caressing—its charm is all its own. Since 1770 it has lent its sweet vivacity to beauty—and consoled with the very breath of peace the weary, the sad, and the sick.

EIGHT DAINTY CHOCOLATES

Dearest Man,

"The most precious thing has happened—what I mean, it's positively ravishing—Lowney's have put out a new box of, really dainty chocolates—they're the most scrumptious things, only one bite to a piece, and the unbelievable number of 80 pieces in a pound box. I simply must have a couple of boxes for my party tomorrow afternoon. I'm not going to have the girls spoiling their dresses and the table covers with big, soft creams or melted chocolate at my party—it's so ruinous to the cards, too. So, be a treasure, and bring me two boxes from the Lowney dealer when you come up tomorrow—they are called Eighty Dainty Chocolates—and only cost a dollar."

Tons of love,
BETTY.

Macdonald's Will Argued Saturday

Weekly Court to See Unusual Hearing—Distribution Involved

OTTAWA, May 15.—The motion for the interpretation of the will of Sir John A. Macdonald, one time Prime Minister of Canada, who died June 6 last, will be made next Saturday morning in the weekly court of the Supreme Court of Ontario, Chancery to the distinguished niche carved by Sir John in Canadian Public life, the application is of unusual interest. It is understood Sir Charles Tupper, Bart., of Winnipeg, grandson of the great Canadian statesman's right hand man in the Maritime Provinces, Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper, will represent Isabel Gainsford, of Winnipeg, granddaughter of Sir John, Allan C. T. Lewis, of Lewis & Company, barristers, represents the Royal Trust Company, executors of the estate.

The motion seeks to determine the person or persons entitled to the corpus and income from the first moiety of the residue of the estate upon the death of Baroness Macdonald of Earnscliffe, widow of Sir John, and the second half on the death of his son, Sir Hugh John Macdonald.

The motion also seeks to determine the person or persons entitled to the corpus and income from the testimonial fund raised by admirers of Sir John A. Macdonald in recognition of his distinguished public services.

Persons interested in the disposition of the estate are the Hon. Mary Macdonald; Isabella Mary Gainsford, daughter of Sir Hugh John Macdonald Lady Agnes Gertrude Macdonald, widow of Sir Hugh John Macdonald; Hugh Alexander George Macdonald Gainsford and Lionel Harold Gainsford, great-grandsons of Sir John A. Macdonald.

Raft Split and Fisher Was Blown Out Into Lake

With fishermen episodes of an unusual nature are sometimes experienced and such was the case of a follower of Izaak Walton in this city. Two well-known citizens left here a few days ago in search of a stream where brook trout abounds. When they reached the end of their journey they were upon the shores of a small lake named Neale, which is located a short distance from Maynooth, in the wilds of North Hastings. One of them contented himself by fishing from off the shore, but his companion in the belief that the game trout were more plentiful further out in the waters constructed a raft and pushed out from shore. He had not proceeded far when the frail structure commenced to break up and piece by piece it drifted away. The plucky fisherman clung to one of the pieces of the raft and after considerable difficulty and a thorough soaking safely reached shore. Fortunately he experienced nothing more than a ducking and was also able to retain possession of his fishing outfit. The two upon returning to the city brought with them a number of the speckled beauties.

"I Was Skinny and Tired. Now Peppy. Gained 11 Lbs.

"Had tired feeling no pep. But Ironized Yeast gave me pep; much stronger. Gained 11 lbs. Boils and pimples disappeared." — Mack Latoria.

"Amazing new Ironized Yeast adds 5 to 15 lbs. in 3 weeks. Changes skinny weak men and women into new pep-filled form all admire." Blotchy skin gets clear and rosy like magic. Nervousness, indigestion, constipation disappear overnight. Ironized Yeast is now pep from very first day.

Two great tonics in one—special weight-building Malt Concentrate and strengthening Iron. Pleasant little tablets. Far stronger than ordinary called yeast. Results in ¼ time. No yeasty taste. No gas.

What Does It Matter What the Past Has Been? It's the Future That Counts, Says Psychologist

By Louis E. Bisch, M. D., Ph.D.
Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

We all get "fed up" with things as they are some time or other.

Getting caught in a rut, with no immediate prospect of escape may occur not once but often in the course of a lifetime.

No matter what you are, no matter what your antecedents may have been you undoubtedly have felt that you could not go on any longer—that you had borne all you possibly could stand.

Life presents so many disappointments, so many thwartings of desire, so much unhappiness, so much grief, so much plain down-to-the-ground existence, that no one ever escapes boredom and desperation entirely.

Naturally we all think that the other fellow is happier than we are.

We often think that nobody can possibly have suffered as we have.

We are prone to call others lucky and to believe that life has dealt exceedingly gently with them.

All of which, is of course, not true.

Let other people take you into their confidence, let them tell you their own trials, pitfalls and failures and you will be astonished to find, perhaps, that you, by comparison, got off rather easily.

But you don't discover such facts about others unless you do become unusually confidential and "unload" completely.

Therefore, always suspect at least that others may be worse off than you!

Indeed you need not suspect merely. You can be quite sure about it.

Life is quite complicated, hence one person is more fortunate in business that another, while, on the other hand he is less fortunate about health or affairs of the heart, or what not.

Make the best of what you have!

Don't waste time speculating about the good fortune of others. Use that time instead in developing yourself.

Being obsessed with the idea that others are faring better than you in the game of life won't help you one individual case or your own particular problems a particle.

Let others take care of themselves as regards good fortune. Often it is short-lived, anyway.

Try to understand your own life —from every angle and point of view.

Then having mastered envy, petty jealousy, the "blues" and all other factors that center your attention on others instead of yourself—then and "then only" will you be able unhampered, to take the bit in your own mouth and race ahead!

Anyway, what does it matter what the past has been. It is the future that counts.

A good runner never looks back to see what his running mates are doing. If he does he loses.

Therefore, look ahead, always ahead. Don't worry about the other fellow. Don't even think of him except insofar as to profit by his mistakes.

The important thing is not who starts first but who gets there first.

Vivid Picture of British Isles in New Booklet

A pleasing series of glimpses of "Those Magic Isles," embracing England, Wales, Scotland and Ireland, is contained in an artistic booklet under that title, just issued by the London offices of the Canadian Pacific Railway.

Replete with a wealth of artistic photographic illustrations, the publication forms one of the most complete guides to the Old Country which has appeared in recent times. All aspects of the life of each country are dealt with, both in picture and story, from the teeming hub of Empire itself along the leafy lanes and hedgerows of England to the rugged shores of Wales and might moors of Scotland, Ireland, both the Free States and the North is also given considerable space, while rural scenes and graphic descriptions of popular resorts are not wanting.

To the traveller contemplating a holiday overseas it is an alluring foretaste of what is to come; to the returned voyager, it is a pleasing souvenir and an inducement to repeat the journey.

The St. Lawrence Water Boulevard to Europe is used yearly by hundreds of thousands of travellers in Canadian Pacific Steamships, well worthy of their "Empress" and "Duchess" nameinclusters.

Augment Fund For Wellington Park Entrance

Raynor Construction Laying New Hot Mix on Wellington Road

(Special to Ontario Intelligencer)

Picton, May 14.—The committee in charge of erection of memorial entrance to Wellington Park, are in receipt of a cheque for two hundred dollars from Orlando Noble, of Chicago, another old Wellington boy.

This memorial entrance, which is now being erected, will be dedicated to Wellington's war dead at the celebration to be held there on July 1st.

The Raynor Construction Company began laying hot mix on the Wellington street, Monday. Their plant is located at Picton quarry and trucks took the hot mixture of gravel, tar and asphalt to that village. Eight big trucks are engaged in this work. A steam shovel is used in loading the trucks the pit with gravel which is taken to the crusher nearby. The trucks were formerly loaded by men with shovels. The steam shovel method is faster and more economical. The laying of Wellington street will take several weeks.

Fiery Cross Burned Boys are Fined

Wiarton, May 16.—The result of a prank which did not meet with the approval of Magistrate Masserley, Lloyd Shouldice, 17 years old, and Lorne Rutherford, 18, of Barrow Bay, were fined $10 and costs in the Police Court for burning a fiery cross in front of the home of James Tyndall of the Township of Keppel Friday night last. Tyndall laid the complain and Provincial Officer Widmeyer brought the boys to Wiarton for trial. The accused made no attempt to conceal their guilt, which influenced the Magistrate to fine them with a light fine and a severe warning. Crown Attorney Free born of Walkerton in addressing the court, offered suggestions to the accused and also to the plaintiff, who, the boys alleged, had made threats of assault.

CITY'S NEW GAS PLANT OPERATES AT TOP CAPACITY

Present System One of Most Up-to-Date in Dominion

Belleville now has one of the most modern and economical gas plants in operation in Canada. The Tully Plant System which was used here prior to the present system, required the usage of crude oil for enriching the gas. The present system which was installed last September by Mr. H. Punnett and Mr. L. Hyslop, the two engineers representing the West Gas Improvement Company, with head office at New York, makes it possible to produce the gas without the use of crude oil thereby decreasing the old cost of production.

The two main by-products are coke and tar. These are exported through-out Ontario.

The first step in the manufacture of this gas is the placing of bituminous coal in four specious ovens. These ovens consist of oval shaped silica brick. This is the only brick that will stand the required maximum temperature without cracking. The ovens are kept at a temperature of from 1800 to 2000 degrees Fahrenheit.

This baking process removes the gas from the coal and leaves behind the coke. The gas taken from the ovens is collected in one main and is then put through a condenser. It then passes through the exhaust and from there through a tar extractor. This tar extractor removed all tar from the gas. The gas then passes through the ammonia recovery plant. This ammonia recovery plant consists of a series of brushes. Water is kept in continual circulation by the revolving of these brushes. This process quickly removes the ammonia from the gas.

Uniform Pressure

The gas then passes on to the sulphur removal plant. From there it passes through beds of oxide of iron where the sulphur is removed. The gas is then purified and ready for domestic use.

The gas when ready for domestic use is passed through a recording meter. This meter measures the gas which goes into the gasometer. This gasometer has a capacity of 150,000 cubic feet. From the gasometer the gas passes out through another meter. From this meter it passes through a governor. This governor keeps the gas to a uniform pressure throughout the city. The gas then passes out to the city mains where it is at the customers disposal.

Mr. W. Wilkinson, genial plant foreman, explained the functioning of the entire plant to an Ontario Intelligencer reporter today. The plant is now running smoothly and is able to take care of Belleville's gas supply with ease. The demand for gas has increased during the past year. Mr. W. A. Harden, manager of the Gas Department, stated this morning that he would be pleased to have the citizens of Belleville visit the plant and see it in operation.

LADY BE GOOD! to your car—

MANY thousands of Canadian Women are driving their own cars! The two-car-per-family vogue is good. Why should not Milady drive her own car?

But, ladies, be good to your cars! Remember they are only machines; they cannot tell you what they need, unless some day they stop dead, or get overheated and balk up! Or, maybe, they start to rattle and squeak. This is their only means of telling you that you have neglected them.

If this happens, chances are that you have not got the habit of having your car lubricated every 500 miles. This must be done regularly. If you have your car Alemited—lubricated with Alemite by a genuine Alemite dealer, who will use only the genuine Alemite Lubricants —you will not only eliminate costly breakdowns, but enjoy continuous use of your car in season and out. And your car will perform like a new one even when it is years old.

Always look for the Alemite Sign—Insist on the genuine Alemite Lubricants, refuse all substitutes, and you will be well repaid for your care.

Naval Treaty Comes Under Criticism

OPPOSITION TO NAVAL TREATY IS DEVELOPED

Conservative Members of the British House Condemn Limitations on Tonnage.

LONDON, May 17.—CP.—Strong Conservative opposition to the London Naval Treaty developed today, though it still, in all appearance, was confined to such leaders as Stanley Baldwin, former premier and nominal head of the party. More than one hundred of the Conservative members of ships of the House of Commons of two hundred and sixty have given notice of motion condemning section three of the treaty which fixes limits on the tonnage of cruisers, destroyers and submarines, as contrary to the interests of the Empire. A motion followed speeches by Winston Churchill and Col. L. C. M. S. Amery in condemnation of the treaty.

WOODBINE TRACK IS IN FAIR SHAPE

Woodbine Park, Toronto, May 17 (CP)—Under clear skies and a brisk northwest, the track was improving fast as the Ontario Jockey Club's racing plant at Woodbine Park today, and it was expected the racing strip would be in fairly good shape when the horses go to the post at four p.m. in the classic King's Plate. There were no withdrawals from field of twenty when final declarations were made six hours before post time.

CHILDREN'S AID CONVENTION

Captain T. D. Ruston, Children's Aid Inspector for the county of Hastings, returned last night from the annual meeting of the Children's Aid Societies of Ontario, that was held in Toronto and closed yesterday afternoon. He reported that a most successful conference was held for the past three days. A full report will appear in Monday's issue of the newspaper.

LARGE PRODUCE MARKET

Another good market was held this morning a bright sunshiny day drawing the crowds at an early hour. Featured this morning were the two homely commodities, sausages and rhubarb, both appearing in large quantities. The former sold at ten cents a bunch while the latter retailed at five cents the bunch, and, in some cases, three bunches for ten cents. Eggs remained the same price as last week, selling for twenty-six and twenty-seven cents a dozen, none being offered at twenty-five cents. Butter sold for forty-five cents the one pound roll. Chickens ranged in price from $1.50 each to $2.00 for the best. Potatoes were selling at $2.75 the bag, onions at five cents the bunch and lettuce at ten cents the bunch. Potted plants were again selling this morning at twenty-five cents the box and tomato plants at the same price.

Q. A. S. WINNERS

A postponed softball game between Queen Victoria school and Queen Alexandra yesterday afternoon resulted in a victory for Queen Alexandra after a hard-fought battle. Although M. Rigby, pitching for Queen Victoria did his best, Ann street players succeeded in getting seventeen runs from him, while Queen Victoria was only able to collect twelve runs.

CHIMNEY FIRE

A chimney fire started at the home of Mr. William Wonnis, 61 Benjamin street, shortly before noon today. A fire in the kitchen range is believed to have started the blaze. The fire department was called and the conflagration was soon extinguished.

FALL DISLOCATES NECK

While working near a woodpile at his home in Point Anne last week, Stewart Derocher, had the misfortune to slip and fall, dislocating his neck and receiving some bad bruises. He was rushed to Belleville where an X-ray was taken by Drs. McCreary and Robertson. The injury was reduced and the young man was sent home. He has so far recovered that he was today able to leave his bed. The young man is about 26 years of age.

PIRACY AND BANDITRY RAMPANT IN CHINA

Shanghai, May 17 (CP)— Total insecurity prevailed today for foreigners in China. Piracy and banditry are reported to be increasing in a sensational manner. NEW POET LAUREATE'S A PPOINTMENT RECEIVES MUCH FAVORABLE COMMENT THROUGHOUT BRITAIN

CEMENTMEN WIN FROM PICTON 8-1

Lid Pried off Bay of Quinte Intermediate League Yesterday at Picton

The baseball season in this district was officially opened yesterday when Picton and Point Anne entrants in the Bay of Quinte Intermediate League pried the lid off all the Prince Edward County town with the Cementmen winning the game by a score of 8-1. The Pointers have built up a real team and should have little difficulty in heading the loop. The team is strong in all departments with a strong pitching corps composed of Hoot Gibson, formerly of the Nationals and St. George's in Toronto and Tommy Pointer, the promising southpaw. In addition Harold Burk who pastimed for Deloro last year has joined the squad and with Murney and Earl Green, two members of last year's senior National team, the squad presents almost a senior organization.

Picton were no match for the batting spree that the Pointers enjoyed during the game, while Hoot Gibson working in easy fashion restricted the County boys throughout the piece. Gibson worked six innings and Tommy Foggier finished the game. Both hurlers are in the pink and will be hard to beat when they start. The Pointers scored two runs in the second, four in the fourth, one in the sixth and one in the eighth, while Picton scored their lone tally in the seventh. Church pitching fair ball for the losers but did not receive the support when runners were on the pahs. Colling and Croft handled the game in a satisfactory manner. The Point Anne lineup was Gibson and Pointer, pitchers; Goyer, c; Buck, 1s; E. Green, 2nd; Caulin, ss; Kerr 3rd; Murney Green (f); R. Hutchins, rf; Frank Bennett, lf; subs. Strahan and Sherlock.

PREMIER KING IS ISSUE FERGUSON SAYS AT LONDON

Ontario Government Forced Into Election By Premier's Five Cent Speech

BENNETT ON BUDGET

Ontario Premier Declares King Speech Was Hollow Mockery

LONDON, Ont., May 17.—The Ontario Government will throw its whole weight into the Dominion election campaign in protest against the declaration of Premier Mackenzie King that he would not give a five-cent piece for unemployment to a province governed by a Conservative administration, Premier G. Howard Ferguson declared at the Western Ontario Conservative convention here on Friday.

Charging that the Premier of Canada had degraded his office, Mr. Ferguson said his administration had no other option than to accept his challenge and enter the campaign with all the forces at its command.

Along with the militant declaration of the Ontario Premier came the charge from Hon. R. B. Bennett, Opposition leader that the Government had forsaken the policies it had preached to snatch votes; that it was cloaking its action by waving the flag; that its appeal was based on blatant tariff hypocrisy.

Lowering of Public Morality

"The Prime Minister of Canada," Premier Ferguson declared', said to the public on the floor of the House of Commons that if you vote for me I say you are not entitled to any advantages that may come from the Dominion treasury.' When a prime minister so degrades the position he occupies as to stoop to a lower level of public morality than I have ever seen in this country, or any other country, particularly Anglo-Saxon, as to say he will not give a five-cent piece unless you support him and his party, that is a lowering of public morality that the Canadian people will resent more than they will the tariff issue. I believe that issue is much more important today than any problem before us.

Tammany Methods

The Ontario Premier continued: "Are we to think of Canada in terms of Tammany Hall, or Chicago methods which have ruined those cities?" The Prime Minister, continued, remarked, talks about democracy. "What hollow mockery for a man to talk democracy and then stand up and say that unless you support the Prime Minister repeated it," Premier Ferguson remarked.

"Talk of it," he exclaimed. "When I heard of it I could not believe it. When the leader of the Government at Ottawa makes the statement on the floor of the House of Commons some one called 'Shame,' and then he repeated it — that he would not give a five-cent piece to the Province of British Columbia, Saskatchewan' Ontario or the several provinces of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia by the seas." The Prime Minister of Canada, Premier Ferguson continued, told the people of these provinces that they would not get a five-cent piece from the public treasury because a Conservative provincial government was in office.

"Can anyone conceive of such a prostitution of the high position of Prime Minister of Canada," the Premier demanded.

ATE 150 PILLS

Galt, Ont., May 17 (CP)—Albert Hooper, fourteen, only child of Mrs. May Hooper died today after taking one hundred laxative pills containing strychnine. The boy was reported to have been of a very nervous temperament and was said to have attributed his nerves ay strenuous study for his examinations at the collegiate.

The hands that once polished the brass in a Greenwich Village saloon are now penning poems for a King Sailor, barroom porter, carpenter and schoolmaster, John Masefield, whom King George has just named his poet laureate, has had one of the most colorful and romantic careers in the history of English letters. In acclaiming Masefield's appointment, the British press points out that the new poet laureate has already entertained many aspects of their national life in his verses. But for the first thirty-five years of his life, John Masefield lived in obscure wretchedness and poverty. Until well past his first manhood, Masefield knew only too well what it was to starve and sweat for a few pennies a day. However, most of the rest of the world has long known John Masefield and his work. His being named poet laureate by the King was only the crowning point in a distinguished career.

SUCCESSFUL EUCHRE PARTY WAS HELD

A successful progressive euchre party was held yesterday afternoon in the Conservative Club rooms under the auspices of the Conservative ladies of Coleman Ward. Eighteen tables were utilized and competition for prizes offered was keen. Mrs. Peel won first prize for euchre, Mis Kitty Johnstone second, and Mrs. G. Mosoman, third.

Miss Mattie Grover secured the prize for rummy and Miss McLean the prize for bridge.

At the close of card playing refreshments were served. The function proved to be one of interest and those in charge were delighted at the attendance.

400 IN DISOBEDIENCE PARADE BEGIN MARCH

Bombay, May 17 (CP)—Four hundred civil disobedience volunteers this evening began their march upon the salt works of Wadala. The procession marched one of the largest concentrations of armed police mustered since the beginning of Mahatma Gandhi's campaign of civil resistance.

Six hundred officers, one hundred of them with firearms, were stationed at Jacob Circle and elsewhere on route to the salt depot seven miles from Bombay.

Elaborate preparations for arrests if necessary to thwart the actual raid included the preparation of quarters in the development department building of Worli, around which is a barbed wire barrier through which electric current can be circulated.

There have been 7,300 passenger and 800 commercial license plates issued to date. The driver's licenses total 7,400 and the chauffeur's licenses 1,400. This makes a total of 8,800 driver's licenses and 8,150 license plates.

PREPARE STREETS FOR OILING

Preparations are being made by the Belleville Public Works Department for the oiling of unpaved streets in the city beginning next week. The work which was to have started on Monday, has according to Mr. Charles Mott, city engineer, been postponed until the latter part of next week, due to the recent rain. Mr. Mott explained that the roads have to be absolutely dry before operations can be started. It is the aim of the department to complete this important work early this year so that the citizens of this city benefit from the oiling throughout the whole summer. Last year the oiling was not done until late in the summer and citizens were benefited only for a short time. Many of the streets will receive their oiling before May 24th and it is expected that the entire job will be completed before the month of June.

TRAGIC END OF RODNEY ALYEA

Had Been Troubled For Some Time With Partial Blindness

Carrying out threats that he is alleged to have made previously Rodney O. Ayles, one of Amelianburgh Township's prominent farmers committed suicide by shooting himself at his home last Thursday afternoon. Partially blind for two years, Mr. Alyea had expressed a desire to do away with himself several times but owing to the strict watch maintained by his family, and the fact that all weapons in the home were secreted, he was unable to take his life.

Sixty-eight years of age the victim was born on the 3rd concession of Ameliasburgh and had resided there practically all his life. Until he was stricken with the partial loss of his sight, he operated a large farm. Taking advantage of his wife's absence and the children's non-arrival from school on Thursday, Alyea found the shot-gun which was apparently loaded pressed it to his head and the charge entered his brain. He died instantly.

He was found lying on the floor of the living room a few minutes later by one of his children who raised the alarm. The smoking weapon told his mute tale of tragedy. Alyea left no message to his family giving the reason for his act. His panic-stricken wife arrived half an hour after the shooting. Dr. Thompson, Coroner of Wellington, was immediately called and he announced that no inquest would be held.

Alyea leaves besides his wife, four children, two of them at home. He also leaves several brothers and sisters all living in the district. He was a member of the United Church and took a deep interest in all affairs of the community.

Interment took place at Albury today, Rev. O. E. Ross conducting the services.

ed that he had made one hundred and thirty one home visits during the month, and had issued one work permit. The fires, Buildings and Repairs Committee report, showed that they had been active since the last meeting, various repairs to the school having been made, two hundred feet of hose and the necessary sprinklers bought for the new Collegiate campus, and a 36 foot ladder and a load of fertilizer purchased for Queen Mary School. F. G. Clare sent in an application to this committee for the work of cleaning all the outsides of the windows in the Collegiate, and this was left to the Committee to act on. His price was one hundred and ten dollars.

Mr. F. C. MacLaurin in his monthly report to the Board, which was chiefly routine, stated that the Cadet Inspection this year will be held at ten o'clock on the morning of the 28th of May, and that owing to the fact that the Campus at the Collegiate had been newly seeded, the inspection would be held at the grounds at the corner of Bridge Street east and Bleecker Ave. Captain Johnston of Kingston, Commandant of Military District No. 3 will be the inspecting officer.

Some discussion took place over the closing of the school on June 2nd, as was suggested by a member. It was felt by Mr. MacLaurin and the Board that if the City Council did not declare Monday, May 26 a holiday, June 2nd might also be kept as a holiday as well as June 3rd. This would give the pupils from Friday evening until Wednesday morning as a holiday. This matter was left with the Board, awaiting some decision of the City Council as to what day will be celebrated as a Civic Holiday, Monday the 26th of May, or Saturday the 24th.

Mr. H. F. Ketcheson explained the amounts of insurance carried on the four public schools and the Collegiate and recommended that the insurance on the public schools be increased. There is at present $400,000 approximately on the Collegiate, and $296,000 on the four public schools. This matter was left to the Finance Committee augmented by Mr. Ketcheson and Mr. Richard White, with power to act.

Mr. White moved, and Mr. Ackerman seconded, that the principals of the four public schools be instructed to have an inventory made of the contents of their school so that in case of fire, there would be no trouble as far as adjustments were concerned.

A report was read from L. J. Bishop Fire Marshal for Ontario, with regards to the schools of this city, which follows. The inspection was made on April 18th, 1924.

Collegiate Institute and Vocational Schools

This school has only been built about two years, and is of fire resistive construction. I discovered that there are two small doors on the ground floor situated at the northeast and southeast corners of the building through which one may enter directly into the basement, or to the ground floor. These doors are not equipped with panic bolts.

Technically, these doors might not be termed exit doors, but any door on the ground floor should be classed as an exit door always. I would recommend that these doors be equipped with panic bolts the same as the rest of the doors.

The coal bin is equipped with a number of heavy steel doors. At present it is the custom to leave these doors open at night. I suggested to the Janitor that these doors be closed at night before he leaves the building. He assured me that this suggestion would be complied with. The reason for closing these doors is that should a fire occur in the coal, the heat and smoke would be confined to the bin and not allowed to escape into the boiler room and maybe the rest of the school.

I noticed that the electrical mechanism and batteries which operate the time clocks are situated in the basement and are exposed to any person who desires to tamper with them. The batteries and charger are placed on a wooden bench. I would recommend that the batteries and charger be placed on a slab of slate so that the acid which might be spilled would not eat through, as at present it is able to do into the wood.

This mechanism is very intricate and is very costly. A student with a malicious frame of mind could easily tamper with the mechanism, throwing the clock system out of order.

This electrical equipment should have a cage around it reaching from the floor to the ceiling equipped with a door and lock.

There is a carpenter's bench situated in the basement under which there is a large accumulation of shavings, sawdust, etc., which should be cleaned up at night before the school closes.

In the motor repair shop there were oily rags in a wooden barrel whilst metal cans were standing beside which had separate covers. It appears that some person placed the rags in a wooden barrel as it was much easier to throw them in this than to remove the lids of the metal cans. I advised the instructor to dispose of the wooden barrel.

All workshops should be supplied with cans with automatic self-closing lids for oily rags; these cans should be emptied every night before the school closes.

Metal welding is carried on in this motor repair shop. It is true that only small parts are welded and some of which are welded on a wooden bench. I would recommend that the wall wooden bench be covered with iron. This will not only protect the woodwork against the welding torch but would make it much easier to be cleaned.

There were a number of dirty oily overalls lying on a bench. There is a danger of oily rags causing a fire by spontaneous ignition. Overalls which are soaked in motor repair shops and mechanical work shops should be washed once a week, and when not in use should be hung up in a well ventilated cabinet.

Old oil which is drained out of the engines is poured down the wash sink. This should be discontinued for various reasons. It would be advisable to supply a twenty gallon drum into which the old oil could be deposited, and when filled could be disposed of at the dump, or some other convenient place. I discovered three carbon tetra chloride type of extinguishers which were only half full. A proper check should be kept on all fire extinguishers. I am informed that when machinery is working it is impossible to hear the fire alarm. An extension bell should be placed in the motor repair shop, machinery shop and wood working shop.

The fire door in the woodworking shop does not work properly. This door and fire doors should be checked at least once a month to ascertain if they are functioning properly.

The alarm in the following fire alarm boxes was missing: northeast on second floor, southeast on third floor, northwest on third floor, and northwest on third floor. I was informed by the Principal that the spring behind the push button was too strong and cracked the ordinary glass. Either heavier glass should be used or the spring slightly weakened. Mr. MacLaurin informed me that he would have all the fire alarm system checked on the Saturday after my inspection.

A phone type of fire extinguisher should be installed in the physics and chemical laboratories, and one in the motor repair shop. I would suggest that the engineer be responsible for all fire extinguishers in the building, and to see that they are kept fully charged.

I do not feel that I should close this report on this school without mentioning that I was the whole heartedly assisted by the Principal and assured that everything in his power would be carried out without delay.

Queen Victoria School

The panic bolts on the main exit doors are too high. All exit doors should be equipped with panic bolts. I stood and watched two or three children open these doors and it was by high an some of them could reach. These panic bolts should be lowered so that the small children can operate them.

The furnace room doors should be made fire proof.

Queen Mary School

It was discovered that there was only one panic bolt on the south door. All exit doors should be equipped with panic bolts.

The Janitor has accumulated boxes of books which he maintains he is going to sell. Storing books of this kind in a school is a dangerous practise and should not be allowed.

Only recently a fire occurred in one of the Hamilton schools through the storage of wastepaper and books. It is too great a risk to place in the school this material for the value to be derived from same.

The doors on the coal bin and boiler room should be of fire proof construction. This whole building could be cleaned up in general.

During my tour of inspection of this school, I noticed something which I feel that I should draw the Board's attention to. It is true that I do not concern this department from a fire hazard point of view, but at the same time it appears to me to be a dangerous practise.

When the boys hold their target practise in the basement and the target is placed near the foot of the stairs, there is a door at the head of these stairs, part of it being wood and part of it being glass. Should a person come to this door and look through the window and at the same time a boy might accidentally discharge a wild shot, there would possibly be a serious accident. I would suggest that a steel plate be hung from the ceiling of the basement to protect this doorway.

The Janitor told me his history of being a rifle instructor, etc., but at times it is proven that no matter how careful the instructor is at target practise accidents do happen.

I would like to suggest, if I may, that as the High School has such a beautiful shooting gallery, it might be seriously considered that the Public School boys do their shooting at this gallery instead of at dangerous galleries in the Public Schools, which appears to me not to be perfectly safe.

King George School

A button was installed on the door inside the exit doors with the intention of being able to close one door. This button should be removed, and nothing whatsoever should be installed to prevent any exit door from being allowed to open with ease.

The doors on the furnace room and coal bin should be made fire proof.

Under the stairways in the basement there are holes. It is true that the janitor is through enough to allow material to accumulate here, but it would be advisable to have these holes either bricked or cemented up. There should not be any place under a stairway, particularly in schools, where an accumulation of rubbish may occur.

Queen Victoria School

The fan room is partly under the stairs, and has partly a wooden ceiling. This should be of fire proof construction and the door made fire proof. There are holes in the ceiling of the coal bin. These holes should be repaired.

Queen Alexandra School

The doors of the coal bin and furnace room should be fire proof. The panic bolts on the exit doors in this school are also too high.

General Remarks

All of the principals proved to me that they were willing and in fact anxious to do all in their power to safe guard their pupils against fire.

Some of the schools are using the approved code system of fire alarm. I would recommend that every school carry out the approved code system, as that should a child move from one school to another he or she is absolutely familiar with the fire drill.

The majority of schools have installed in time an electrical gong which is used for a fire alarm, and in some cases it can be operated from the class rooms, and in some cases I think only from the Principal's office.

Electric gongs for a fire should be an entirely separate gong entirely apart from any other system, and should be used for fire only, under close supervision to be sure that it is always in good condition. And experience has been that the manual type of fire gong is superior to the electrical gong in the type of schools such as public schools in Belleville. These manual gongs should be installed so as they can be operated on each floor including the basement with a sign indicating the code, and for fire only. I cannot too highly recommend that the Board install without delay manual gongs in the Public Schools to be used for fire only.

Every school should be equipped with at least two and a half gal. soda and type extinguishers on each floor including the basement.

The Fire Chief accompanied me through these schools, and I wish to say should the Board need advice or instruction that Fire Chief Lynch is only too pleased to do all in his power to see that the Board is satisfied.

Yours truly,

L. J. Bishop,

Inspector.

The School Management Committee also presented their report as to the re-hiring of teachers for the ensuing year. This report does not include the teachers in the Belleville Vocational School, and the increases noted are in accordance with the salary schedule agreed upon last year.

She Was Troubled With Pains Across The Back

New Brunswick Lady Relieved By Taking Dodd's Kidney Pills

Mrs. Edward Kincade Speaks Highly of Canada's Leading Kidney Remedy

St. John, N B., May 17 (Special)—It was advised to use Dodd's Kidney Pills for my kidney trouble," writes Mrs. E. Kincade, 83 Durham St., St. John, N.B., "I was troubled with pains across the back, and after taking Dodd's Kidney Pills I found great relief. I had heard my friends speak about them. They are a good pill."

Dodd's Kidney Pills hold their popularity not because of the promises they make, but because of the good they do.

Dodd's Kidney Pills are purely and simply a Kidney remedy. They strengthen the kidneys so they can do their full work of straining the impurities out of the blood.

Pure blood coursing through the body carries to the different organs the nourishment they need to keep them sound and healthy.

Dodd's Kidney Pills can be obtained from all druggists, or The Dodd's Medicine Co., Ltd. Toronto 2, Ont.

PREACHING FOR CALL

BANNED BY MINISTERS

Toronto, May 16.—By a majority of one Toronto West Presbytery of the United Church voted to discourage the custom of pastors preaching for a call. Ability in discharge pastoral duties and enlist the co-operation of young people were as necessary as preaching the "Royal George," it was suggested by Rev. A. H. Perry

600 WORD QUESTIONNAIRE

Paris, May 17 (CP).—A six-thousand word questionnaire, an outline on the constitution of the "European Federal Union" prepared by Aristide Briand, French foreign minister, will be delivered today to the governments of twenty-six members of the League of Nations. All other nations including Russia will receive copies later, it was announced.

Why suffer needlessly? Douglas Sayrolax Liniment brings quick, sure relief to scald feet, sore corns and warts. Relieves inflammation. Removes proud flesh.

Britain is now using twice as much of the electricity as six years ago.

Modern Crusaders

WHAT a colourful array, and what a formidable one, were the crusaders who fought to free the Holy Land from the Saracens. Mail-clad knights, with plumes nodding from their burnished helmets, rode forth on gaily caparisoned chargers, eager to break a lance with their foemen.

To-day Brantford Roofing leads a crusade against ugliness and the Fire menace. Brantford Asphalt Slates with their vibrant colour harmonies are banishing forever the drabness of old-fashioned roofs.

But they are doing more than giving unsurpassed Beauty to roofs. They are reducing Fire Risk to a negligible quantity. Flying sparks and flaming brands cannot ignite these slates.

Nor can the elements wreak damage upon Brantford Asphalt Slates which are impervious to rain, sleet sun and snow. They will not curl, bulge, shrink or swell. Their strength and beauty remain undiminished year after year.

Arrange TO-DAY to have these handsome, massive slates applied right over your old roof. This may save you hundreds of dollars in repairs to eavings, walls and interior decorations.

Write for your copy of the Booklet "Beauty with Fire Protection", —a comprehensive treatise on the proper use, design, finish and colour for your roof.

THE KILTS NEXT

Whether the threat will spread to Canadian colleges is doubtful but the Dartmouth men are going to expose their knees to the professorial and the business and the citizen eye.

Scouts wear shorts in public and sometimes a golfer will wear them, such a one being called trousers, with the buckle below the knee.

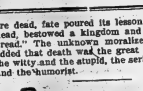
If Dartmouth should win over convention, a revolution in men's nether garments will be at hand.

PAST AND FUTURE MEET

Before the old lower bridge is down, the new structure is being to take form before the eyes of the people. Already the framework which is to hoof the floor of the new structure is already largely in place. Meantime the ironwork of the ancient structure is being taken out piece by piece as the acetylene torch cuts off section after section to permit removal.

Last year a new bridge seemed a far away vision. Today the old bridge is a dream. Things have moved so rapidly that no one has had time to think in all seriousness that the old structure is gone for good. It had stood for some many years and latterly had been given kind word knocks that the public felt in so rapidly and loyally behind the council to make the way easy for the undertaking.

The expedition with which the council attacked the question of a modern highway bridge across the river indicates the 1930 council one long to be remembered.



EPITHAPHS UNCONSCIOUS FUN

When gravestones are very very old and covered with moss or are fallen into the ground and when years have passed over the dead and all relatives have disappeared then epitaphs can be resurrected even for mirth. The London Spectator has a precious list of these which cause more than a smile, their sincerety being so obvious as to provoke anything from a roar to a smug grin. The article in question runs:

"The well-beloved Ripley," as Prof. William Lyon Phelps aptly calls him, directs our thoughts to epitaphs by his sketch of the gravestone in Belturbet, Ireland, reading, "Here lies the body of John Mound, lost at sea and never found." This is about as good an example of the Irish "bull" as can be discovered, and as it was deliberately perpetrated, it strengthens our suspicion that Irish "bulls" are not always unconscious but oftentimes designed to raise a laugh. It may shock some to think that men can crack jokes upon gravestones, but this misplaced humor is a natural reaction to the gloom and terror with which the melancholy tend to surround death, thus ignoring the protests of Jesus, Who said, more than once, it was a sleep. When men have sufficiently strong convictions to break with convention, tombstones become the tablets which record not only their humor but their prejudices and satire, and, in fact, all the emotions or complexes to which they are heirs.

The humor of the Belturbet tombstone reminds us of a curious epitaph at Melrose abbey, upon which one of our local churches is modeled. "If thou wouldst view fair Melrose aright, go visit it by the pale moonlight," advised Sir Walter Scott in "The Lay of the Last Minstrel. But to the sensitive daylight would be preferable for the reading of this example of rough, almost Shakespearean humor: "Here lies the body of William Jones, who all his life collected bones; then death, that grim and bony spester, that universal bone collector, boned old Jones so neat and tidy and here he lies all bonn fide." Wit and a quick perception of simile is found on the famous watchmaker's tomb at Lydford, Devon: "Here lies in a horizontal position the outward case of George Routleigh, watchmaker, whose abilities in that line were an honor to his profession, ingegrity was the mainspring and prudence the regulator of all the actions of his life, humane, generous and liberal, his hand never stopped until he had relieved distress. So nicely regulated were all his motions that he never went wrong except when set going by people who did not know his key, even then he was easily set aright. He had the art of disposing of his time so well that his hours glided in one continual round of pleasure and delight until an unlucky minute put a period to his existence. He departed this life November 14th, 1802, aged 67, wound up in hope of being taken in hand by his maker and of being thoroughly cleansed and repaired and set going in the world to come."

"There are living today we believe, seven kings who have lost their kingdoms, and whose occupations, less kindly and less trying than ruling or misruling a dissatisfied people, are varied: the kaiser chopping wood, Amanullah of Afghanistan driving a plow. About five minutes' walk from Piccadilly, in the Church of St. Anne Westminster is a memorial to an exiled monarch now forgotten by the world. "Near This place," runs the epitaph, "is interred Theodore, king of Corsica, who died in this parish, December 1, 1756, immediately after leaving the king's bench prison by the benefit of the act solvency in consequence of which he registered his kingdom of Corsia, for the benefit of his creditors. "The grave, great teacher to a level brings, heroes and beggars, galley slaves and kings, but Theodore, this moral learned ere dead, fate poured its lesson on his living head, bestowed a kingdom and denied him bread." The unkempt moralizer might have added that death was the great leveler also of the witty and the stupid, the serious individual and the humorist.

DEATH OF GOLD

Edgar Guest

I thought it strange when I was told:
"My boy, you'll catch your death of cold!"
For young and strong I'd scamper out
Not knowing danger lurked about.
With boyish courage I'd disdain
The threat of winter snow or rain

How oft I've heard my mother say:
"My boy, you can't go out that way
Put on your rubbers, wear your coat!
And wrap a muffler round you r throat."
For always at the door she'd be
To cast her watchful eye on me.

And now another mother stands
With little garments in her hands,
And now the same old struggle starts
Before a little girl departs.
Now once again a child is told,
"My dear, you'll catch your death of cold!

"Put on your rubbers! Wear your coat
And button it, don't threat!"
Wherever there is girl or boy.
These phrases mothers all employ,
Those children, too, when they are old
Will cry: "You'll catch your death of cold!"

FIGHTING with an intoxicated man one thousand feet in the air was the exciting experience of an aviator in the vicinity of New York City this week. He was carrying four passengers and one of them, unknown to the pilot, was inebriated. Suddenly the wobbly one made a rush for the controls and tried to take possession of the ship. A crack on the jaw sort of discouraged him and a second crack sort of made him somewhat skrimmded. Then the pilot made a landing and ejected his unruly passenger who proceeded to throw stones at the ship and behave in such an unseemly manner that the police had to be called in.

CONEY ISLAND is getting strictly proper and the old care free, devil-may-care spirit of the popular summer resort for all New York, south of Park Avenue, has seemingly gone to the cleaners. The order has gone forth that one-piece bathing suits will not be regarded with favor this season and a skirt will be necessary before the girls may venture near the water. The custom of using automobiles for dressing rooms will also be taboo, and picknickers who bring their lunch must take away their refuse. Beginning next Saturday 150 extra patrolmen will be assigned to Coney Island station and the new regulations will be strictly enforced. It would seem that the old Coney where everything went but the clock has gone flooey. Never mind girls come to Belleville, one-piecey suits will go here.

PEGU, ONCE PROUD CAPITAL OF PEGU Province. "Somewhere East of Suez," is in ruins from fire and earthquake and more than one thousand persons are dead. Spectacular features of the destruction of Pegu included a shower of jewels which littered the streets as the result of the jeweled pagodas temples of the Buddhists being shaken down. A weathervane which surmounts the chief temple valued at $1,250,000, crashed to the ground. The priests deposited their store of precious stones with the British authorities for safekeeping while bands of looters roamed the littered and earthquake streets, harried by British officers. A moving picture theatre collapsed and hundreds were killed, many people were drowned when they became panic stricken and jumped into a creek. Water became so scarce that it was sold for a shilling a pint and an epidemic of disease was feared. Rescue workers wore masks and had difficulty during away the dogs which scavengered among the corpses. All of which reminds us that life moves in a smooth and satisfying way here in the Bay of Quinte district and while there may be a dearth of excitement such as may be experienced in foreign parts there is a wealth of real comfort.

CHAMPIONSHIP WITH 65 PER MIN. DECIDED AT B.C.I.

Typewriting Contest For Intermediates Won by Nora Trusiech

MISS WEST WINS

Kenneth Rawlins Wrote 41 Words Per Minute For Jr. Championship

Sixty-five words per minute for fifteen consecutive minutes was the record set by Miss Jennie Vandervoort, senior commercial pupil at the Belleville Collegiate Institute, last night. This remarkable achievement gave Miss Vandervoort the senior champion ship of the school and the honour of equalling the highest record set at the collegiate several years ago. Miss Nora Trusiech win the championship for the intermediate class. Miss Dorothy West carried off the honours in the special commercial form, and Mr. Kenneth Rawlins by typewriting 41 words per minute, established a record for a junior student and carried off the junior championship. The successful pupils were presented with medals and certificates at the conclusion of the evening by Mr. Archibald, who referred to the splendid success of Commercial Week, an annual affair staged by the commercial forms of the school. Mr. Archibald, on behalf of the students also extended a vote of thanks to Miss Brown and Miss Smith, commercial teachers, Miss Merry, Miss Everson and Mr. Orr, who by their efforts helped to make the evening such a success.

An entertaining program was given by the students after the completion of the speed tests. Mr. Isaac Tobe acted capably in the capacity of chairman and introduced each number. Miss Rose Wilson was pianist for the evening. Stunts were put on by each of the commercial forms, and each probably executed. Of special mention was a short sketch written by Miss Mary Goldberg, entitled, "Delegates" and staged by the pupils of Form 1A. The choruses and song hits in this number were cleverly done, the solo parts taken by Miss Ada Baker, Miss Dolly Mason and Miss Mary Goldberg. Two reading the first by Miss Nellie Mackenzie, and the second by Miss Bernice Arbuckle were well received. Piano solos were given by Miss Jennie Vandervoort and Miss Betty Wilkinson, and Miss Dorothy West, and a violin solo by Mr. Robert Morris.

At the end of the program, Mr. Isaac Tobe, chairman, presented Miss U. E. Brown, head of the commercial forms, with a beautiful basket of roses, on behalf of the commercial students in appreciation of her unfailing efforts in the interests of her commercial pupils. Miss Brown thanked the students in a few suitable words, and one of the most successful and entertaining evenings in the annals of the Belleville Collegiate Institute was brought to a close by the Commercial Yell and "God Save the King".

LETTERS to the Editor

PROPER ZONING

132 Bleecker Avenue,
Belleville, Ont.
May 9, 1930

Editor The Ontario Intelligencer,
Belleville, Ont.

Dear Sir:

It is with considerable surprise that I have heard of the decision of the City Council to disregard the petition signed by householders on Bleecker Avenue, between Bridge and Dundas Streets to evil an application of residents on Dundas Street, and permit the establishment of a cleaning and pressing plant in that vicinity.

I understand that the man who proposes to operate this establishment stated in the first place that the residents did not have any objections and also that the investigating committee reported that the residents would not have any objection if certain precautions were taken. As the one most closely affected, I may state that I was not consulted by either party and as far as I am concerned, such statements, if made, were absolutely incorrect; as in fact is proved by the text of the above mentioned petition.

Surely it is time that this city was protected on that account from purchasing property for residential purposes might be properly protected in the investment and not have it entirely at the mercy of the men who are entrusted with the government and rearrangement of our city. I cannot help wondering if the aldermen who voted in favour of permitting this establishment would have done so if it had been proposed to operate it within a short distance of their own residences.

I am, Sir,
Yours very truly,
(Sgd.) A. P. WESLEY.

CRASHED THRU PLATE OF GLASS

Wm. Eastern Took Week Spell, Falling Through Glass Suffered Cuts

Slightly faltering through a fainting spell as he was leaving the Rile Cafe on Front Street, William Eastern, R.R. 2 Belleville, fell through the plate glass panel of the front door and sustained several nasty cuts about the neck and hands. Constables Evans and Insard went to the scene and took the man to the surgery of Dr. Cronk, where his wounds were dressed. Before leaving the cafe the man stated he would pay for the damage sustained. Eastern and three other young men were having a lunch at an early hour this morning and completing their meal, paid the bill and were leaving the restaurant. Nearing the front door, Eastern's knees were seen to weave and buckle and he fell headlong through the plate glass door before his companions could render assistance. His right knee pierced the glass and also the right side of his neck. The man lost considerable blood before arriving at the surgery and that the cut been deeper the result would have been more serious.

Pupils in a Dublin school bet to two rods of turf each a day to host the school.

Today's Poem

THE DAWN

Upon a night the Penance
Uttered the strange decree,
That every man should love his foe,
And bless his enemy.

They built great ships to guard the seas;
Nor heeded what he said,
And swept the gently moving tides
With giant lamps instead.

They made them wings to wheel and dart;
An battle in the skies,
But even as their weapons grew,
So grew their enemies!

So fought they as the children fight
With flimsy toys of tin
Now they have Lead as children tire
Who fight but nothing win.

There came a gentle unseen breeze,
A gathering breath of peace.
And song the sound of harnessing
And all the world was cease.

Fashionably Speaking

By Lucille

DEAR READERS:

If you want to enjoy your holidays this year it is most important that you give the clothes problem your earnest attention and have it thoroughly work ed out before you start off, clubbing in hand. If you have travelled a great deal you have found this out for yourself and if you are just starting out on the vacation field we hope you will take our word for it.

Of course the great nuisance in travelling can safely be named "superfluous baggage." It is aravishing silly to load yourself down with a lot of unnecessary articles which in most cases you never use, and which can be done without. To safely solve this part of the problem then, and insure against too much baggage, decide first where your vacation is going to be spent, in the city, in the mountains, at the seashore or in the country—after then carefully select the type of clothes suitable for that kind of holiday. If you are going on a motor or boat trip you will not want to be bothered with much. She should therefore select a few clothes and each dress should be a unit in her complete ensemble. One coat only should be selected for this type of holiday. It should be medium weight preferably of tweed, and simply made in a colour to harmonize with her frocks. If you are travelling you must have a suit, and the wise traveller selects it of a dark colour, keeping in mind how easily soiled a light coloured suit becomes. The material should be chosen carefully because a wrinkly suit is a terrible looking affair. Soft material which will not easily wrinkle will be found to be a blessing. Two blouses which will launder easily are also a good selection and a necessity. Here too, do not choose materials such as linen or batiste with wrinkle easily, or white, which soils easily. Shantung is light, pretty, not easily soiled and hard to wrinkle. Two tweed dresses, one light and the other of dark material, and two sweaters, a pullover and a cardigan will complete your list of practical clothes and we wager you will get along very comfortably.

Following is a list of clothes which we advise you to clip out and keep on hand until vacation time. You will find it to be of great use and save you much worry and excess baggage.

For Travelling:

Two tailored dresses; 1 tailored coat and hat to be worn with the two dresses; comfortable shoes; pull-on gloves; tailored handbag; a warm coat.

For Daytime:

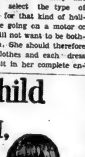
One informal dress of silk; 1 smart semi-formal dress of crepe or georgette; 1 georgette or chiffon dress for afternoon or dressy daytime wear; coat, hat, and shoes for wear with the dresses; 2 pairs of dress gloves; an appropriate handbag.

For Evening

One evening dress; 1 dinner dress or informal evening dress; 1 evening wrap; 1 pair of slippers; an evening bag and jewelry accessories.

For a two weeks' vacation in the country the following clothes and suggested:

For Morning and Sports Wear:



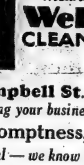
Two simple silk dresses; 1 slip-over sweater or cardigan costume; 1 wool coat and sports hat, to be worn with them; 1 cotton or linen dress for tennis or very warm weather; walking or golf shoes; sports or silk stockings.

Fashionably yours,

LUCILLE.

When a Child is FEVERISH, Cross, Upset

Colic, gas, sour belching, frequent vomiting, feverishness, in babies and children, generally show food is sour ing in the little digestive trace.



When these symptoms appear, give flshy a teaspoonful of Phillips Milk of Magnesia. Add it to the first bottle of food in the morning. Older children should be given a tablespoonful in a glass of water. This will comfort the child—make his stomach and bowels easy. In five minutes he is comfortable, happy. It will sweep the bowels free of all sour, indigestible food. It opens the bowels in constipation, ends children's ailments. Children take it readily because it is palatable, pleasant-tasting.

Learn the many uses for mother and child. Write for the interesting book, "Useful Information." Address The Chas. H. Phillips Chemical Co., Windsor, Ont. It will be sent FREE.

In buying, be sure to get genuine Phillips Milk of Magnesia. Doctors have prescribed it for over 50 years.

TRURO MAN BUILDS HIS OWN AEROPLANE

Truro, May 17.—What is believed to be the first aeroplane ever built in the Maritimes is being constructed at his home here by Charles Craig, employee in the C. N. R. freight shed. Having had some experience in this line in the United States he started the job last summer during his spare time. With entire bid fitting to put some "hope" on the canvas wing covering, he says the ship will be ready to be assembled and taken out for trial. Another problem to be solved is the erection of a suitable hangar. A fairly large structure must be built before the plane can be assembled.

Perhaps You've Heard

A book that sounds very interesting to us, though we haven't seen it, is "Elsie Dinsmore on the Loose," written by Josie Turner and illustrated by Eldon Kelly. Perhaps you were an addict, when the Elsie books were all the rage; at any rate you know them by reputation. They offer great possibilities for gentle and clever spoofing.

Miss Belloc Lowndes, whose "Cresida—No Mystery" has just been published, is the sister of Hilaire Belloc and great granddaughter of Joseph Priestley, the great English scientist. She was born in Paris and lived there until she was twenty. It was not until she was ten years old that she learned to speak English. She first began writing when she was sixteen.

That amazing book "The Specialist," by Charles "Chic" Sale has broken all known records in the publishing business for very nearly one million copies have been sold. For only a short time since its appearance has it ever faltered from first place in the list of best sellers, and for a brief period rival publishers ceased gnashing their teeth, and austere authors who have reflected with chagrin upon the possibilities of the fickle public deserting them began to breathe more easily. But not for long, however, for Chic Sale has published another book this month. It is called "Pa Tell You Why" and one hundred thousand copies were ordered before publication!

Children CRY for it

It may be the little stomach; it may be the bowels are sluggish. No matter what coats a child's tongue, its a safe and sensible precaution to give a few drops of Castoria. This gentle regulation of the little system soon sets things to rights. A pure vegetable preparation that can't harm a wee infant, but brings quick comfort —even when it is colic, diarrhea, or similar disturbance.

And don't forsake Castoria as the child grows older. If you want to raise boys and girls with strong systems that will ward off constipation, stick to good old Castoria; and give nothing stronger when there's any irregularity except on the advice of a doctor. Castoria is sold in every drugstore, and the genuine always bears Chas. H. Fletcher's signature on the wrapper.

RACING SEASON OPENS TODAY AT WOODBINE TRACK

Seventy-First Running of the Plate is to be Feature

WHALE 'OIL CHOICE

TORONTO, May 1.—The opening of the racing season in Canada for 1930 will be ushered in today at the Woodbine when the Spring meeting of the Ontario Jockey Club, featuring the 71st running of the King's Plate will begin. Away back in the middle of the last century, 1930 to be exact, a royal donation was made by the late Queen Victoria, upon the petition of the Toronto Turf Club, through Sir Edmund Head, the then Governor-General. The first running of the plate was at Carlton, now known as West Toronto, and Mr. James White won the plate with Don Juan. On three other occasions this sportsman furnished the winner, when Touchstone, Wild Rose and Nettle won. Back in 1901 the Seagram Stable moved into the picture and for eight successive years the winner of the plate carried the colors of Joseph E. Seagram.

Then there came a break when Eddie White saddled Butterscotch for William Hendrie. White won the Futurity the year previous for Mr. Hendrie with Martimas, a race worth some $30,000. In those days the plate was worth something like $800. After Martimas' victory, Mr. Hendrie, who was a keen sportsman, said to White, "Eddie, this was a great victory and the only thing that would make me happier would be to win the King's Plate". When White came back the following year he and Butterscotch, winner of the plate, to the post it was the crowning achievement of one of Canada's greatest and best sportsmen.

There has always been a great amount of sentiment connected with the running of the King's Plate. It is not the intrinsic value of the plate but the fact that a starter must be the property of a British subject, resident of Ontario, foaled, raised and trained in Ontario. The Ontario Jockey Club adds a purse of $15,000 to the plate and a silver cup, which is presented to the owner of the winning horse. Then there is the 50 guineas, the gift of His Majesty the King.

Irma Moris, aged 4, of Whitakers, N.C., broke her neck while peeling an onion with her teeth. Physicians said she would recover.

The proper proportion of playing-fields for a city is estimated as seven acres of land for every 1,000 of population.

PICTORIAL GOLF INSTRUCTIONS

(By H. B. Martin)

Arms and Body Must Follow Club Head In Pivot

If one is not inclined to sway, the pivot best illustrated by our leading experts will get better results. But one must actually pivot and not use the arms in a make-believe. Some golfers do this and believe that they have actually gone through the pivotal motions. The body must turn with the arms. The left knee swing out to accommodate the turn of the hip and the raising of the left heel.

The head remains stationary while the eye is looking at the teed ball over the left shoulder. After we pivot to the point where the club is over the right shoulder we have reached the top of the swing. Then we begin to unwind, but not any faster than the club will permit. It must be remembered that the clubhead must lead and the unwinding of the body proceed slowly, never getting in advance of the arms or the clubhead.

Recreation Alleys

The Chaco B Ladies' Bowling team played a friendly game with the Peterboro Ladies from Dunlop Recreation Alleys. Their were only two games played Chaco taking both games. For the Chaco girls, Miss M. Pitman was high with 224 and 216, total 440. For the Peterboro girls, Miss M. Hatcher was high with 184 and 226 total 376. After the game the Peterboro girls were entertained by the Chaco Club of Corbyville, at the Club House, where they indulged in dancing, etc. Refreshments were served by the Ladies of the Club. Owing to a mishap caused by motor trouble the men were unable to play the Chaco men's bowling team.

In the men's Junior B Group League the Riots took three points from the Hardware No 1. For the Riots Ridley and Delaney were high with 592.

ATHLETES ARE READY FOR MEET

Clifford Barber Is Accepting Handicap in Three Mile Run

For the past couple of weeks a number of athletically inclined young men have been seriously engaged in the business of training for the various Spring meets soon to take place. The first of these, locally, will be the races sponsored by the Y.M.C.A. on the morning of May 26th and also the Trenton to Belleville Races on June 3rd.

The programme for Monday, May 26th consists of the inter public school relay race for the Deacon Trophy and the three mile open run for the Stroud Cup. The public school relay should furnish plenty of competition since there are six teams eligible to enter this event. On the past two occasions on which the race has been run the boys from the O.S.S. have copped the major honors. Whether they will be able to repeat their two previous performances remains to be seen.

To encourage some of the younger and less experienced runners who otherwise might hesitate to enter the races, Clifford Barber is voluntarily accepting a handicap in the 3 mile run for the Stroud Trophy. A liberal time allowance will be given to all other contestants such as will make it a race for everyone entered. As this event is scheduled to take place at the Exhibition Grounds track, prospective entries should do most of their training over the dirt course rather than on the pavements.

KI-Y LEAGUE ELECT OFFICERS

W Gerow Pres. of Organization, Hard and Soft Ball Will Be Played

At a meeting held in the Y.M.C.A. last night, the Ki-Y League which will sponsor both hard and softball in the city this summer, got away to a start. Officers for the ensuing year were appointed as follows:

President—Mr. Walter Gerow.
Vice-President—Mr. Shapiro.
Secretary—Ralph Morden.
Assistant Secretary—Claude Tice.
Chairman Hard Ball—Walter Gerow
Chairman Soft Ball—George Lee.

Executive to include the above officers and also Mr. M. P. Duff, baseball chairman of the B.A.A.A., Mr. H. Cross of the Kiwanis Club and Mr. J. E. Shortt, Secretary of the Y.M.C.A.

The meeting was not as representative as had been hoped for and as result a second meeting will have to be called at an early date. Meanwhile any groups of boys or clubs wishing to enter teams in either the Ki-Y soft ball or hardball leagues should communicate with the secretary at once. The ages for teams entering the leagues are as follows:

Hardball
12 years and under May 1st.
15 years and under May 1st.
18 years and under May 1st.

Softball
12 years and under May 1st
15 years and under May 1st
18 years and under May 1st.

Mr. Duff representing the newly formed Belleville Amateur Athletic Association made the announcement that this organization is whole-heartedly behind the younger ball players of the city and will back them to the limit. Two catchers outfits are assured for the use of the hardball players in this league which automatically now comes one of the chief obstacles to the promotion of the hardball game for the younger boys.

Both hard and softball players are urged to get their entries in at the earliest possible date since nothing can be done in playing. The sooner all teams are entered the sooner will the Umpires call "Play ball". Do your part boys.

BEGGAR IN CHICAGO HELD FOR ROBBERY

Chicago May 17.—"Big Charley" wanted for 18 years in connection with a $722,000 safe-cracking in Canada, was held at the Detective Bureau for the authorities at New Westminster, B.C.

Charley", alias John W. Hackis, alias J. P. Montague, alias William St. Clair, hold-up man, burglar and yegg, is declared to have been a member of the bands gang which raided the Bank of Montreal branch at New Westminster in the summer of 1912. Despite a convincing police record, Charley denied emphatically that he was a versatile criminal. He said:

"The charges are ridiculous. Why, son, I'm old enough to be your grandfather. Do I look like a 'Pete' man? They don't want me in Canada, either. That cop arrested me yesterday just because we had an argument. Do I look tough? Of course not, and you have to be tough to do all the things they say I did."

NOTICE

RE GARBAGE RECEPTACLES
NOTICE is hereby given that all garbage receptacles must be covered and citizens are requested to co-operate with the Board of Health in keeping the City in a sanitary condition by observing the following:—

On streets where garbage collection is made early in the morning receptacles are not to be placed out until after the night before; on streets where collection is made about 8 o'clock a.m. receptacles are not to be placed out until the morning of collection and as soon as receptacles are emptied they must be removed from the street.

Failure to comply with the above will be subject to summons to court.

By order,
BOARD OF HEALTH.

It's Not So Hard

It's not so hard to accumulate $10,000 either—if you go about it in the right way.

Many people have adopted a certain Canada Life plan because it makes the saving of money attractive, systematic and profitable. By this plan you can arrange that any sum of money you would like to have, will be delivered to you in cash, at any age you desire. You can be certain that $5,000; $5,000; $10,000 or more will be paid to you when you reach the age of retirement—from 60 to 65—or to anyone you may name if you should die before your retirement fund is completed.

UNLAWFUL TO SELL USE FIREWORKS IN TOWN OF TRENTON

(Special by Staff Reporter)

Trenton, May 17.—At this time of the year it would not be amiss to draw the attention of citizens to the bylaw passed by the Trenton Town Council several years ago, prohibiting both the sale of and the use of fireworks in Trenton. It is unlawful to sell them, and it is also unlawful to set them off in this town. This was brought about after a series of fires had been traced to matches and firecrackers used by children. The police will be on the lookout for any offender against this bylaw, and if caught, they will be dealt with severely.

ADDRESSES CLUB ON HINTERLAND

Mr. T. Jarret, of Quinte Sun Heard by Rotary on "Canada's Back Door"

(Special by Staff Reporter)

Trenton, May 17.—Mr. Thomas Jarrett, publisher of The Quinte Sun, at Trenton, was the speaker of the evening at the weekly Rotarian luncheon held last evening at the Clifford House. Mr. Jarrett, who has travelled extensively through Northern Ontario, chose as his subject, "The Opening of Canada's Back Door," or the new route to Europe via Hudson's Bay.

The speaker told of the conditions of the country, its great possibilities and the opportunity which Canada is now grasping after a lapse of many years. Mr. Jarrett made a trip over the Hudson's Bay railway in 1914 when the steel was within one hundred miles of Port Nelson. With the outbreak of the War, however, work was stopped, and since then the northern end of the line has been changed to Fort Churchill, some few miles from the original Hudson's Bay port. Mr. Jarrett's talk was extremely interesting, and a large number of the Trenton Rotarians were present to hear him. President Ralph Bonter occupied the chair, and a fine musical programme was arranged for the evening.

LATE MRS. PHILIP EMPEY LAID TO REST

(Special by Staff Reporter)

Trenton, May 17.—The funeral of the late Mrs. Philip Empey, who passed away Wednesday afternoon in Kingston Hospital, was held this morning from the residence of her sister, Mrs. J. C. Doran, Victoria St., to St. Peter in Chains Catholic Church, where solemn requiem Mass was said by Rev. Father Whalen. The large number of flowers and the many friends who attended the funeral showed the high esteem in which Mrs. Empey was held by all who knew her. Interment was made in the Catholic Cemetery here.

William House Makes Possible

(Special by Staff Reporter)

Trenton, May 17.—Shooting in the Strathcona Cup competitions last week at Trenton, William House, a member of the High School Cadet Corps, made the excellent score of 75 out of a possible 75 on the 20 yards range. Another cadet, Frank Langdon, scored 73 out of a possible 75. These lads expect to go a long way in the finals for the Strathcona Cup, and if they keep up the good work Trenton will be well represented there.

CRACKERS CAUSE ANNOYANCE HERE

Police Have Complaints of Filthy Language on Street

The 24th of May holiday is associated with firecrackers and bombs and the police have had complaints of young boys discharging these bombs on the principal streets of the city. The discharging of firecrackers on the streets is prohibited by law and it would be well for all to take heed as the police will not allow the practice. This year repeating bombs have made their appearance and they have loud explosions which follow each other in rapid succession.

Complaints have also been received about the use of foul and filthy language in front of billiard parlors in the city. Last night a young man in a local room was swearing at the top of his voice when a police officer happened by. A report was made out, the boy's name being handed in and if more reports come to hand the police will take stern action.

MOTORS GUILTY

Some twenty motorists pleaded guilty in Traffic Court this morning appearing to various charges under the Traffic by-law. The majority were speeding and parking an unreasonable time on the street. The fines varied and all were paid. Since the city traffic officer assumed his new duties the movement of traffic has been regulated although there are still a few reckless ones that are in a hurry. Fast driving within the city limits will only have one end and that is the traffic court.

CRANKED CAR IN GEAR RUN OVER

Trenton Man Injured in Belleville Today at Church and Foundry Corner

While cranking his Chevrolet car, which was in gear, Grant Walker, Trenton, was run over by the motor car at the corner of Church and Foundry street early today. Both wheels passed over his body and his back was injured. Sergt. Booth of the Belleville Police went to the scene but the man would not go to the hospital as he did not consider himself suffering injured. The injuries sustained were accidental as Dixon did not know he had left the car in gear.

PRAYERS FOR PEACE

LONDON, May 17.—The Archbishop of Canterbury, Primate of England, has issued an appeal for the prayers of the people on behalf of India, that violence may be restrained, misunderstanding removed, fears allayed, good will restored, and that East and West may be drawn together in common service for the welfare of the peoples of India."

I have only one request to make of the reader. That is: In case you call one o fthese men up or write him, don't get no reply, do not give up, but get after the other fellow, until you find out for yourself that the above are all facts.

CHAPTER XXII

Can Birds Smell?

This is a thought that all bird lovers will soon have to face with some or later, and though we may not be able to steal bases like Ty Cobb, yet if we study the game and watch the fowls, balls of interest are sure to fly our way. There are very few people living in the country that haven't seen crows mak: some queer manoeuvres when they are hunting food.

One hot ully day, many years ago, as brother and I were nearing the house for dinner, one of Indis old black murderers went quietly flying across the road about two hundred feet east of my house. When about three rods in the field he gave a very sudden right-about-face curve, and hovered for about a second, then started stroking the air back to the fence. Dropping on the top rail he did not even take time to look around, but instantly jumped down among the thick growth of goldenrod, which was nearly as high as the fence. That instant in years feet started throwing dust, and in less time that it is taking me to write it I had the gun and was pushing two loads of number six in the barrels as I ran to meet him. I got there just in time to draw one long breath, and as he came flapping up out of the weeds he uttered a gurgling "Caw!" at my red face which was smiling all along the gun barrels, and he body dropped beside the road, but a great portion of his feathers floated away on the air. As we picked him up, four unhatched song sparrows spued out of his mouth.

On investigation we found an old stump lying on its side in the fence corner; two projecting rods and its top held the middle about six inches off the ground; and right under there nestled away in the dry, and perfectly out of sight, was this empty song sparrow's nest.

As the old birds were chirping around near u a real loud argument took place between brother and me as to how the crow located the nest. Brother's first question was, "Jack, didn't you know that birds could smell?" As I laughed he said, "What did you think their nostrils were made for?"

LOST BALL FOUND FILLED WITH QUACK

The penetrating effect of "quack grass", that noxious growth which is the bane of any gardener's existence, was reflected in a discovery by Harry Ayling, Burnham Street, yesterday. An ordinary rubber ball lost by some children some years ago was a mass of "quack grass" several of the blades having pierced their way through the rubber ball which has been buried apparently for some years.

TO BROADCAST EPIC OF GIANT BRITISH SHIP

Canadian National Reserve All Radio Flights

Montreal, May 17.—The story of the epic trip of the R-100, giant British dirigible, from Britain to Canada, will be heard in the most remote corners of Canada as well as outside of the borders of the Dominion, through the medium of Canadian National Railways and associated radio stations located in twenty cities. It was announced today by E. A. Weir, director of radio for the Canadian National System, who has the arrangements in hand at the request of the British air Ministry. When the R—100 crosses the Atlantic and comes within reach of Canadian Broadcasting Stations her story will begin. As she approaches St. Hubert Airport near Montreal, a huge mooring mast has been erected for her reception, the tale of her progress will be told by two government announcers stationed in the top chamber of the mooring mast. Their voices will be carried over to Montreal where a special switchboard the Bell Telephone Co. they will be relayed to the radio broadcasting stations throughout Canada.

The carrier current wires of the Canadian National Telegraphs will carry the graphic story into twenty cities, stretching from the Atlantic to the Pacific coast, where Canadian National and associated radio stations will spread the message to the millions of listeners, vitally interested in the success of the trip but unable to join the many thousands who will be at St. Hubert Air Port to greet the monster dirigible.

When plans for the visit of the R-100 were made, the British Air Ministry asked E. A. Weir, director of Canadian Railways radio, to arrange for a nationwide broadcast of the story of her journey and her arrival, as it was considered that the Canadian National radio organization was the only one in the Dominion, with its chain of owned and associated stations, capable of arranging such a project. The plans were therefore started to be in the different stations on the Canadian National chain, and these stations will receive the story direct from the airport through the medium of the Bell Telephone and Canadian National carrier current wire systems.

During the broadcast, French speaking listeners will not be overlooked, plans having been made for a description of the arrival to be broadcast in the French language.

The list of cities from which Canadian National and associated stations will broadcast the story of the R-100 follows: Halifax, Saint John, Fredericton, Moncton; Quebec, Montreal (CNRM and CKAC) Ottawa, Toronto, Hamilton, Chatham, London, Windsor, Regina, Yorkton, Saskatoon, Calgary, Red Deer, Edmonton and Vancouver, B.C.

MISCELLANEOUS SHOWER

A number of friends and neighbours gathered at the home of Mrs. Ed Clark, Gordon Street, to do honour to Mr. and Mrs. Allan Moore (nee Ethel Morris). The young couple were the recipients of many beautiful and useful gifts. The evening was spent in games and dancing after which a dainty lunch was served.

It is Amazing How Many Grownup People Shun Reality in Order to Avoid a Minute's Worry

What psychologists call the pleasure-pain principle is a tremendous factor in controlling our lives.

It's an instinct, of course.

We instinctively do the things that ge believe will give pleasure, while we shun those which promise pain.

The boy who is spanked for stealing an apple, learns by a simple application of cause and effect this he is likely to suffer an even more severe infliction of pain if he steals in the future.

The same boy who is praised—given pleasure for performing a worthy deed—learns also that it pays to do nice things and behave in accordance with the standards the society has set down.

Pleasure and pain seem at first to be consciously noted.

After a time they operate automatically and unconsciously.

It is much like walking.

First, as babies, we walk by conscious and deliberate effort. Later, walking becomes automatic and unconscious.

Throughout life the pleasure-pain principle operates as a fundamental motivating factor.

The normal adult, without the ready protection of his parents, stands quite alone, facing the world of cold, hard reality.

His ego leads him to try and conquer by earning a living, by developing his capacities.

Wherever he succeeds in conquering he is glad and the pleasure feeling activates him to try to conquer further.

But when he fails the pain principle is operative.

Then he halts and gets discouraged. Then he wants to flee or taut himself up from the world.

But there is just the time to try and counteract the pain principle with pleasure.

That is exactly when we should stir ourselves into some form of activity that we absolutely know will give pleasure.

Then pleasure neutralizes pain.

Then we feel that the world isn't such a bad place after all and we grit our teeth and endure.

It is astonishing how many persons shun reality, avoid social contacts and crawl into their shells, as it were, because from childhood up circumstances have been such that pain experiences predominated over pleasurable ones.

Many, many failures are due to no other cause but this.

Yet when such an individual is made to see and understand the mental mechanisms which are responsible for his handicap he at once takes heart and becomes bolder in trying again.

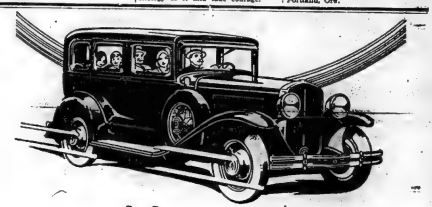
For it is the mystery surrounding ourselves that is so upsetting and disheartening.

If we know why something has resulted in this or that rather than in something else we not only have a satisfying explanation but it likewise puts us in possession of knowledge enabling us to avoid similar pitfalls in the future.

If you are one of those who have felt from reality because it has been too painful try and think of the psychology of it and take courage.

MAN IN ROWBOAT LIKELY DROWNED

Was Taking Liquor Across River From Ivy Lea to U. S Shore



Gananoque, May 17.—No information has so far been received of the whereabouts of Howard Hunsley, of Syracuse, N.Y., whose skiff was found at Ivy Lea a few days ago with three cases of beer, eight bottles of Canadian whiskey, and two bottles of wine in it. An investigation found that he had purchased it at the Government vendors shop here and had given Corn wall as his residence. This is a small island a short distance south east of here and uninhabited, and when visited by the police there was no evidence of a camp or that any person had been on the island.

Huntley is a returned American sold ier and is said to have been subject to fits and the supposition is that he was taking the liquor to try and get it into the United States, and that he was taken ill on the trip from overexertion in rowing the boat and fell overboard and was drowned.

GUN ACCIDENT FATAL

Kingston, May 16.—Lawrence Hudson, 19 years old, who was employed by Stanley Diller, Newboro, was instantly killed when his gun accidently discharged Sunday, according to information which reached here.

Two 16-year-old boys, motherless, confessed to murdering their benefactors over fancied grievances near Portland, Ont.

Motorists have invested more than $26,000,000 in Marquette...

TENS of thousands of motorists have termed Marquette a great performer. So much is the demand for Marquette, indeed, that no less than $26,000,000 has been invested in this exceptional car during the few months it has been on the market.

The moment you take the wheel you will realize that Marquette more than deserves the steadily increasing success it is everywhere winning. The flash of its acceleration . . . the soundness of its power . . . the ease with which it is driven . . . and its swift obedience to every demand . . . all stamp it as a car far superior to any yet offered at so moderate a price.

Resilient springs of unusual length, and Lovejoy shock absorbers (front and rear) assure riding comfort and roadability that cannot be duplicated in Marquette's field.

For Marquette is built by McLaughlin-Buick, and buyers of Marquette share in the manufacturing economies made possible by McLaughlin's volume production. Drive Marquette. We shall be glad to arrange a demonstration. The General Motors Owner Service Policy—most complete in the industry—at your disposal. PETERBORO RACE TRACK IS MECCA FOR SPEEDSTERS

Drivers Training Steeds For the Summer Campaign

Peterboro, May 16—Nearly forty horses are working out daily on the Exhibition Park track. Many of them are stabled on the grounds in the build ing at the northwest corner of the Park. These are for the most part horses from out of town, including Lou Bennett's string from Port Hope and seven belonging to Dick Welsh of Hastings. Other applications for stalls during the last few days will probably necessitate opening the horse barn over on the east half of the Park.

Tuesday and Friday are the big days every week. Almost at any hour on any day you will find some of the horses in action, but Tuesday and Friday bring out the whole galaxy of local harness horses for workouts that are altogether different from the mere jogging that is the rest of the week.

No Matched Races

If you are an early riser you will find some of the drivers out before you, but it is usually seven or eight o'clock before the man activities open up. And from then until four in the afternoon the track has the appearance of a race week. However, the horsemen will tell you that there is never the semblance of a race not even a half-mile brush. Some of them out loose now and then with a burst of speed, but it all is safe-stuff without a clash for the occasional rail-bird.

The Exhibition Park track is in first class condition, and has been in use since April 10th. It is one of the best tracks in eastern Ontario, exceptionally well drained, hard but at the same time easy on the horses.

The Hastings Stable

Many of the names you hear about the west end barn are familiar to the followers of the harness game in this section of the midland district. Dick Welsh's Hastings stable is represented by seven including: "Red Peter," "Lou Todd," "Prince May," and "Prince Belwin." Doc Kane is in charge of this string. This group also includes a green Brown pacer by Bucko; a three-year-old pacer by "Herman Winger," and a green trotter by "Guy Neewman" which was developed by the late Dr. Fred Robinson. There is also a two-year-old by "Prince Belwin" at the Welsh farm at Hastings, together with brood mares and year lings.

Lou Bennett of Port Hope was up this afternoon for the Tuesday track work.

His stable is composed of "Peter Direct," "Nida Grattion," Miss Maya," and "Hollywood Hanna." His son Bill Bennett is in charge of these four.

The Port Hope and Hastings horses come to Peterborough for their Spring work for the simple reason that the track is one of the best available and the central accommodations are very satisfactory.

Eddie Jones' String

Of the Peterborough horses Eddie Jones has five, all of them well known through the district, as follows: "Jack Abbe," "Eleanor May," "Dr. Byron," "Alfred Elk," "Gypsy Willes," and also a yearling filly by "Amardale" out of Belle Mahone.

"By more you look them over in their workouts, both as to number and condition, the more the uninitiated spectator wonders why some one does not put on at least one afternoon's card. It could be easily filled, and apparently most of the horses are just about ready to go to Hell now; that is those that ever will go, for some of them are only prospects that may never hang up a mark on any man's track.

Johnston-Fife Horses

The Johnston-Fife stable, the Windsor Hotel horses, produced the smart "Keendale" last year, and has an entry for the same Canadian Futurity again this year. The Johnston-Fife string includes Keendale, "Macdale," "Willowdale," "The Chipmunk," "Peerless Grattan," and "Amardale," also Bud Tucker's "Vanora Todd."

Charlie Fife told The Examiner yesterday that "Keendale" was in good shape. He said there was no truth in the rumor that she has been off condition since the Lindsay Fair had fall.

"The Chipmunk" is regarded as the pride of the track stable, so they say, and with this three-year-old share Art. Johnston and Charlie Fife hope to retain the Canadian title they won with "Keendale" last year.

A New Pacing Horse

Bill Sherin of this city has seven horses working out on the track. Four of them may be listed as green candidates, the other three are "Murray Direct," Herman Grattion," and "Jerry Pointer," this last one, having been bought in Picton.

Jim Sutherland has "Minnie Patchen" and one other untried horse; and Charlie Schooley is represented by "Lou Grattion."

John Donnelly has two on the track "Jimmy" by Jim Todd and "Happy Jack" by "Amardale."

Count them all up you find the total all close to forty. And there are more to come.

First Races June 3rd

Some of the horses may be out for the May 24th holiday, but the first general exodus will be to Belleville on June 3rd, the King's birthday. It is also understood that Belleville is holding an Old Boys' Reunion around the first of August.

It has been suggested that an interesting card could be provided during the Rotary Club's carnival week here, and another idea was a couple of nights' racing with the track illuminated so brightly that the horses could be clearly seen all the way around. This is being attempted in Stratford, but the estimated cost of $400 appears to be a local obstacle discouraging to those who have been giving the suggestion the once over.

"The Chipmunk"

Stirling

Mr. Seymour Waller, of Oshawa, is seriously ill. He is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Waller of town.

St. Paul's W. M. S. met in the church parlors on Tuesday afternoon with some thirty-six members present. The President, Miss Lucy Williams, was in the chair.

After the opening hymn, Mrs. Lawrence Malone read the Scripture lesson and Mrs. Livingston and Mrs. Girdwood led in prayer. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and adopted, followed by the roll call responded to by verses of scripture containing the word, "Stranger" as the program was gotten up by the Strangers' Secretary, Mrs. Hawker. The reports of the various secretaries were then given, after which Miss Libbie Kingston read a most interesting letter from her sister, Mrs. Geo. Simmons in China, describing a Chinese wedding. Mrs. G. Lansing sang the "Old Rugged Cross" very sweetly, then Mrs. E. W. Rowland gave a brief summary of the Conference Branch meeting held in Bowmanville last week. She stressed the inspiration derived from these meetings the first meeting being given up largely to intercession, both in groups and also all together. The President's address, "My Missions" was most wonderful. Mrs. Rowland spoke on the work of Mission Bands and Baby Bands, of which she is Conference Branch Secretary.

After a short hymn, Miss Williams closed with prayer.

Miss Libbie Kingston presented a crib quilt to the Mission Band by some members on Church Sivet.

St. Andrew's Guild

St. Andrew's Guild was in charge of the Trail Rangers on Monday night Donald Rodgers read the Scripture lesson and Rev. A. U. Reid led in prayer and D. Johnston, Ray Williams and Roy Juby gave a few minutes' talk on Medical, Dental and the Ministry professions which were very interesting. Music was interspersed by Lorne Anderson, Harold Baker and others.

BYRD'S DRIVER TALKS TRAITS OF DOG FRIENDS

New York, May 17 (CP)—Just like human beings husky dogs are," beamed Arthur T. Walden, chief dog driver of the Byrd expedition, during his short stay here with some 25 huskies, which accompanied him to the frozen Hampshire farm near Wonalancet in the White Mountains.

There were Kusko Kwim and Tao, Shagwa and Kruluk and Scarmmuche, eager, keen and loyal dogs which made human exploits possible in this frozen world.

Walden, weather-burned and ruddy, proudly presented his huskies.

"This," he said, "is Kusko Kwim. He's king now. Kusko, where is Chief cook, old boy?"

Kusko stretched his little body, lifted his proud head and looked at his master.

"This is Scarmmouche," he said, giving up to a big husky with a badly scratched nose. Wants to fight all the time like an Irishman.

"Just look at that nose. But he's a good dog if you know how to handle him. He's a good worker.

"Some you have to be rough with, and some you have to handle with gloves. Some you must be gentle with and some you must reason with and some you must let alone."

And Shagwa—if you know what's best for you, you'll leave Shagwa alone said Walden. Trust him' but don't cuss him. Shagwa won't go wrong.

Kruluk is a Siberian "dog. Kruluk means "snow people," and is a rattlehead. Kruluk dreams all day of green pastures and rabbits. Must be firm with Kruluk. No shenanigans.

"Then there's Tao, pretty gold and gray. Never win her with seriousness. Just play with her and kid her along. She'll work when the time comes.

"Those black shiny dogs are Sky and Tickle. They're smart dogs. They were part of the team that went over the mountains down to the icy Antarticle.

"That pup with the black patches around his eyes is Huble, four months old. Dick Byrd, Jr., the commander's son, will get him.

"And now, here are the youngest." He picked up a dog kennel, and dump ed a ball dozen whining, gray and black and white pups, close to a piece of turf, on the deck. They were born 200 miles north of New Zealand, and have never touched paw to dry land. Wait 'till they see those New Hampshire hills, and wait 'till their mother, Lilly, begins chasing rabbits for them.

"That light gray one is already a favorite for Kusko's successor. There she goes, down the deck, fuzzy and pell-mell, the whole chunk of beef in her mouth."

"See that?" said Walden, chuckling. "Just like people."

Speaking of Chinook, Walden's countenance visibly grew sober and sad. Chinook, he was sure, fell from no ice barrier, into no crevasse. Chinook was through and he knew it when his master went off with the pack without him. Old age coming on, he knew he couldn't pull any longer at the head of the pack. Going off alone, when he got tired, he lied down on the ice to die. Huskies are like that.

Walden has managed dogs with skill and dexterity since 1926. He drove dogs in the Klondike when they were a necessity there, two years before the gold rush.

The difference, he says, between an Eskimo dog, a husky dog and a malamute is the difference between a bur ro, a jackass and a donkey.

Walden is going to settle down where there's timber country, animal life and land—not ice under his feet. He's through with driving huskies in the frozen south, he said. He will be the worst farmer on the best farm in New Hampshire.

by

Peter B. Kyne

Beginning a stirring new romance of the cow country, in which a D'Artagnan of the plains goes to war for his king.

CHAPTER I

His Majesty owned ranches in New Mexico, Arizona, Nevada, California and Oregon and was not at all certain how many cows, horses and mules he owned, but roughly estimated the number at about two hundred thousand. His headquarters were in San Francisco, where he had a packing plant, and to a considerable extent dominated the wholesale meat trade. Consequently, since in the West the leaders in any industry are known as kings, old Bradley Bardin was known as the Cattle King and a small army of retainers always referred to him as His Majesty at ask y fav'n. To His Majesty, a tribute double to his ability to rule his vast empire, wisely justly and profitably.

Of all his ranches, the New Mexico ranch was the largest —approximately a million acres—hence, in a moment of that whimsical irony which so frequently tinges Western humor, he had elected to call it El Ranchito—the Little Ranch. And El Ranchito the king loved best of all, perhaps because it required more expert management to wring a profit from it, and hence was productive of slightly more worry than the others. Perhaps, too, His Majesty loved it because it was grand by, ruggedly, brutally beautiful, with its green hidden valleys, its desert mesas, its multicolored, fantastically eroded sandstone peaks and lava scarps sunrise and sunset tinged with glory.

There is bound to be a strain of repressed poetry in the soul of an empire builder, and whenever His Majesty contemplated his feel the cow-hill pull, whenever the city, which he hated but to which of late years he was bound, got on his nerves, El Ranchito always called to him and he always answered. He had built himself there an adobe hacienda, with every modern convenience, and a wide, deep, cool veranda that completely encircled the house.

The beauty, the peace and the silence at El Ranchito were, to His Majesty, as stimulants to clear, constructive thinking. On that veranda, he ironed out the many problems that were forever confronting him; decisions made there were never altered. As he grew older he formed the habit of holding at El Ranchito a yearly conference of all his ranch managers; one by one they came, spent a day or two with him in the veranda and returned to their jobs to think over his praise, his condemnation or his suggestions, but not his orders, for he never gave any. His Majesty cared not how his inferiors managed their domains, provided the figures of his travelling auditor proved satisfactory. If his managers could explain to his satisfaction the reasons for red ink in their annual reports, he was tolerant and forgiving; if they could not do this he dismissed them without mercy and without rancour and searched for a man who could.

This evening His Majesty was considering the management of El Ranchito. Art Graydon, who managed its destinies, His Majesty considered as good a cattleman as the West had ever produced. Graydon knew men; he could manage them and lead them he was honest, industrious, loyal and devoted, but—he was getting old and with the years had developed a tendency to avoid battle, to argue rather than go to the assault, to close his eyes to conditions he would have attacked valiantly a decade ago.

In particular His Majesty was perturbed over a situation existing in a portion of El Ranchito that lapped over into Old Mexico, a grant of some hundred and fifty thousand acres in a valley known as El Cajon Bonito. There was a saddle-colored cowboy there by the name of Miguel Gallegos, a fellow of mixed ancestry. His Majesty suspected that one of those ancestors had been known as Michael Gallagher and he desired to make war upon the man Gallegos without betraying the State Department into the Improglio.

Yes, Art Graydon was too cautious. He talked too much of international complications . . . And there was that ginger-colored wolf, Martin Bruce, of the Triangle B outfit, his neighbor to the west. Brother Bruce His Majesty suspected of collusion with Miguel Gallegos, for some of Martin Bruce's cattle also ranged below the line. His Majesty could not rid himself of a belief that the Triangle B herd was being built up at the expense of the Double R, which was His Majesty's brand, for he had known Martin Bruce for thirty years and had never known anything good of him.

Indeed a young man of El Ranchito," the king decided. 'A young man who does not think too long or too deeply. An ambitious young man with a notion of his future. Yes, I must ask about for some bold brave bucko who can see a hole in a ladder. But I want to discuss Graydon. He's too valuable he's been too long on the payroll and has made too fine a record to be retired now. I'll promote him. He shall have an easier job and a better salary."

He glanced off toward the flaming Santa Lucias and over a knoll a mile away a horseman showed, silhouetted against the sunset. The man bestrode a pinto horse, so the king knew him for a stranger, for on El Ranchito there was not one pinto horse such as this one. Lastly he watched the horse man ride up to a five-foot gate that led into the irrigated horse pasture. A hundred yards from the gate the pinto broke into a canter, then a gallop; he rose to the gate, cleared it neatly, settled to a jog on the farther side and headed straight across the pasture toward the king's castle. Even the eastern boundary of this pasture ran a four-rail fence, which the stranger lapped before jogging up to the gate of the lawn in front of the verandah upon which the king sat in contemplation.

The rider and the king exchanged long penetrating glances. The king was thinking; "What a direct fellow this pilgrim is! Goes straight across country to his objective. Wonder who he is and where he came from. Horse is up to his hocks, so he must be a long-liver."

The king was more interested in that horse than he was in the man who bestrode him. He judged the horse might weigh twelve hundred pounds. In color he was a blend of large patches of white and deep brown, almost a mahogany color, and where the brown and the white met there was a faint tinge of blue. He stood with upraised head, small ears, pricked forward, eyes on the low roof of the hacienda, tail slightly arched. A regal pinto, this with a fine chest straight legs, wide action, a full barrel and powerful haunches.

The king's appraisal of the rider was less lingering, for he was not interested in wandering cowboys, and had sensed, intuitively, that the young man on the pinto horse was calling at El Ranchito for the purpose of locating a riding job, and this was out of the king's department. So His Majesty merely removed the cigar from his lips and waved his arm in a wide circle, to indicate that somewhere to the north of the hacienda the stranger would find headquarters and the riding boss, who might or might not place him on the payroll. The stranger evidently understood, for he answered with a half-perceptible nod, but stood his ground.

"If you hustle right along, son," His Majesty assured the young man, "you'll find the boys just about finishing supper. Some of the boys will show you the corral where you can put your horse. There's hay in the rack there, but if you've come far, say so and somebody'll give you grain for him."

The horseman lifted his hat with Castilian courtliness and bowed low in his saddle. "Gracias, senor", he replied. "Am I by any chance addressing the general manager of El Ranchito, Senor Art Graydon?"

"No, son. I just work for Art." And he smiled a little at his little jest, for indeed the king did labor hard to keep his gord men on the payrool. It was one of the great privileges of his kingship!

"Ah," the stranger murmured, "Mr. Bardley Bardin himself, I had no idea you were in the country. Well, a king can only be concerned with affairs of state and I'm looking for a riding job, as Your Majesty discerns. I'll call upon the Grand Vizier."

"You'll find a gorgeous young son-of-a-gun," the king replied interestedly. "Better let me look you over before you present yourself before the riding boss. He has a grudge against mail-order cow-boys."

His Majesty came down off the verandah, crossed the lawn and looked the stranger over. And the better to aid this appraisal, but acting who under the stimulus of instinctive good manners when addressing a superior, the stranger dismounted and stood to horse, holding his bridle reins.

"White calfskin chaps with deep brown leather borders, silver conchos tied in with buckskin thongs, two fancy pockets and your initials on the belt. Those chaps must have cost you fifty dollars, son. Where's your cartridge belt and pearl-handled pistol?"

"In my bedding roll, on a foot-sore pack horse, tied to a pine tree just over the hill, sir."

He quit on me there, so I left him and hurried on here before your book could even clean up the supper dishes.

"Your boots cost twenty-seven dollars made to order and your pants are made of light English whipcord. Very expensive, but perhaps they'll outlast many pairs of denim overalls. Your flannel shirt and black silk necktie. How long you been on the road, man?

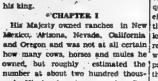
"Two days, sir."

"And you lived today! You are a rather partial to very nobby outfits, cowboy?"

"Hum-m! Centr-fire rig and a raw hide plate. You're from California!"

"Yes, sir. Does Your Majesty like my sombero? I won that in a poker hand, although I doubt it. What's the game from a man whose head was the breeding of that horse?"

"By a pure-bred Arab out of a Steel Dust mare, sir."



"Ought to be all horse."

"He is, sir."

'And what's your name, young man?' 'Permit me, sir," the stranger replied. He drew a small black morocco hide cardcase from the breast pocket and handed the king a card. The latter read:

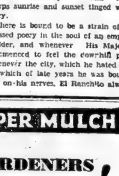
WINDSOR PAPER MULCH



GARDENERS! FARMERS!

An easy method of laying mulch . . . paper, before or after planting.

Bigger, Earlier Weedless Crops With Less Work

All over the world this wonderful new system of paper mulch farming is being enthusiastically adopted, for it brings greatly increased profits and savings of much time and labour to growers . . Results are astonishing when the crop is protected with strips of inexpensive paper mulch laid and anchored between the rows . . The sun's heat and the rainfall are captured and improved in the soil by this protective covering, providing an abundance of warmth and moisture to the plant roots at all times, even during the coldest, driest weather . . The crop is thus stimulated to yield from 5 to 3 times its usual production. Matures several weeks earlier. Grows bigger, better looking, better flavoured produce . . Paper mulch farming eliminates weeding also and mid-season hoeing and cultivation. Brings greater profit and freedom from work to you. Send coupon now for full particulars, or get them from—

The picture above illustrates the difference in the growth of two plants of the same age, grown in the same soil—the one on the left one is protected with Mulch Paper, while the other uses not.

What IS Windsor Paper Mulch?

Windsor paper mulch is a sturdy waterproof paper able to resist hard wear and severe abuse in the field. It is specially impregnated with asphalt to make it waterproof. It is black to enable it to transmit the sun's heat through to the ground.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

UNDERSTANDING WIFE

By N. Florence Leech

Copyright, 1930, International Features Service, Inc

The clock struck a single sharp note which reverberated ominously in the empty living room of the Duncan bungalow. Six thirty!

Leona Duncan turned off the fire in the gas range, and left the kitchen. What could be keeping her husband so late? North Crest was far removed from the business section of this city but Tom was usually home before this time. She had heard him boast that only an emergency could keep him away from his hot dinner, and the long, happy evening which followed with her and Tommy, Junior.

Leona began pacing the living room floor. Her body was tense, and occasionally she dabbed at her tear-filled eyes with a bedraggled handkerchief. If only Ethel Burke had minded her own business.

"Ethel Burke is a cat," she muttered, fiercely. "A mean, cat by cat."

All her life Leona Duncan had feared that some time she might be lonely and in what is commonly referred to as a domestic triangle. But she tried not to worry, for she had read, and believed, those prophetic words from the ancient book of Job: "The thing that I have feared hath come upon me."

She determined not to fear; and until Tom employed Stella Royal as his secretary, there had been no occasion for anxiety.

Stella Royal had been Tom's secretary for three months. Her was small and dark, with big brown eyes, and a serious, determined little mouth. Not a vamp, surely, yet Ethel had excitedly informed Leona that morning that she had seen Tom and a dark haired girl in Tom's coupe on the Sandy River Road five miles beyond North Crest the evening before.

Leona had indignantly insisted that Ethel was mistaken, but in her heart she feared the worst. Mrs. Royal was a widow, a grass widow, and widows are dangerous. Besides, Tom was so unsuspecting. He had been very late getting home, and offered the simple honored excuse: "Unavoidably detained by business."

A sob arose to Leona's throat; then she stiffened to attention and listened eagerly. A car was swinging around the driveway to the garage. She wouldn't ask Tom a single question, she decided. She would let him explain voluntarily; for of course he would explain. He must know of her unworthy suspicions.

But Tom hurried in and kissed her with what seemed a furtively guilty air. "I'm sorry, dear," he said. "The same matter detained me. But after tomorrow wit will be settled, I hope."

"The same Matter", and it would be "settled tomorrow". Did that mean he was going away with the widow? Oh, Tom couldn't do such a thing; she must be crazy. But why didn't he offer some explanation?

The evening was a bad dream. They ate the overdone dinner, and Tom played with Tommy, then as it was his turn, put him to bed. He kissed the baby, Leona thought, with lingering fondness. Could he be bidding the child farewell? Her heart was pounding with fear and anger; and soon, complaining of a headache, she retired. Leona was truly sick—sick with that most insidious of all poisons, jealousy. Could she have reared and taunted, wept and stormed, she would have suffered less. But her bitterness, restrained, increased within her as the hours passed.

"I may be late again tha evening," Tom said, as he kissed her goodby next morning. She watched him go, his figure grotesquely distorted by the tears in her eyes.

A domestic triangle! At last this terrible thing had happened to her. She should she calmly sit by and let another woman run off with her husband? No, a thousand times no! Hurriedly she dressed for the street. She left Tommy with a neighbor.

"I'm going to the dentist," she explained.

It was mid afternoon when the slow trolley deposited her down town, but she had decided not to intrude on Tom until four o'clock. She tried on dresses, suits, hats; hideous garments, all of them. She looked like a hag! Finally, she fearfully, reluctantly, entered Tom's office. Only Fred, the office boy was visible.

"Mr. Duncan left just a little while ago," he explained, as he leisurely sealed and stamped a pile of circular letters.

"Mrs. Royal went with him."

Gone! She was too late. Like a swimmer battling heavy seas Leona made her way home. She was stunned—too numbed by the shock to feel. But Tommy must be fed. She was preparing his spinach and apple sauce when she was startled by a familiar sound of wheels on the driveway. She stared, incredulously, as Tom entered.

"Dinner ready? I'm starved! I'll even eat Junior's spinach."

"You said—you said—" she gasped.

"Sure," he laughed. "I said I'd be late, but I'm not." Then: "There's something I want to get off my chest," he stated. "Listen, hon."

And Leona, tell-tale eyes hidden, shaking fingers pretending to pare potatoes, listened.

"My stenographer, Mrs. Royal, she's a widow, you know," he began. Thus satisfy launched, he continued: "Mrs. Royal's two children, aged four and six, were living temporarily at a farm out beyond North Crest, where she could go to see them every week end.

"She's crazy about her kids, you know."

"U-m," Leona answered.

The children, it seemed, were ill with mumps, and Mrs. Jones had phoned their mother. She was terribly worried, and Tom had taken her out to the farm direct from the office on Monday and Tuesday evenings.

"Got her there an hour sooner than the trolley," Tom explained.

"O-h," answered Leona.

"This evening I took her out early and told her to stay until Monday. By then they'll be better," he ended. "I didn't tell you yesterday for fear you might not want me to go today," he added, naively. "But, of course, you understand."

Leona rose and began putting the potatoes to cook. Joyous relief and gratitude all but choked her, but oh, Tom must never know of her unworthy suspicions.

"I'll take her a glass of jelly if you will drive me out this evening," she said, tremulously. "Poor girl, think of being alone with no husband to help her."

"Gee, Leona, not every fellow has such an understanding wife," Tom exclaimed, happily.

Leona smiled a remote, strange smile. She was thinking that she would never again fear the so called domestic triangle. She had discovered that the triangle has a fourth side, and that side is understanding.

THE END

PARIS GOURMETS MOURN WRECK

Paris, May 17.—The year 1930 will have a ring of mourning around it in Parisian gourmet circles for years to come. The passion for rebuilding, he has found, has sounded the knell of one of the small "secret" restaurants whose clients' minds ran more to super-excellent food than to mirror and walls and bright lights.

Proprietors of these eating places, depending upon low rentals and small overhead to serve the best food in the reasonable cost, have glanced at the rental provisions of the new leases presented them and silently folded their tents. Their clients, finding their favorite restaurants suddenly transformed into brightly-painted, modernistic food palaces with skyrocketed prices, have been forced literally to pound the pavements to find a new home of good food within the limits of a small pocketbook.

Some famous chefs decisive that the decline of the serious side of restaurant ing is due to a real decline in the taste of the public. As the days of the leisurely two-hour lunch are numbered by modern business demands, they say, so are numbered the days of fine sauches, carefully prepared entrees and poem-like sweets. One of the most famous cooks of all France, who hang an exclusive little restaurant where kings and the great of the earth had been charmed with his exquisite dishes, recently found himself so far in debt that he had to close and scramble around for the wherewithal to pay his creditors. He found that his clients wanted plain steaks and chops instead of "artistic surprise" and "delice de sole dieppoise", and he wasn't prepared to give them what they wanted.

Another famous restaurant, dating back half a century, was forced to give way for the erection of another building. When it was erected, slick and shiny quarters were provided for the restaurant. The rental was $2,200 a year instead of the former $1,200. Prices went up and the clients went away. Chain restaurants, and the larger establishments with little overhead in proportion to the business done, are getting the trade. The gourmet waits that the big restaurant simply can't produce meals like mother used to cook.

The exception to the tale of sorrow is the left bank of the Seine, where the "auberge" or country tavern type of eating place has caught on. The general idea is to simulate, more or less, the kitchen or some Normandy inn, and the bizarre surroundings generally draw a fair clientele. Rents are

NEW ZEALAND'S TRADE RAPIDLY GROWING NOW

New York, May 17.—A revolutionary theory in physics, in which old age disappears from time, has been proposed here by Dr. Gilbert N. Lewis, of the University of California. More daring than relativity, which does not scrap past and future; this theory may challenge some of Einstein's work. In it time flows either backward or forward interchangeably, and Dr. Lewis explained its existence in physics and chemistry. The theory was expounded in a paper at a dinner of the Society of Arts and Sciences, read in his absence which presented its two 1930 gold medals for outstanding achievements in science respectively to him and to Dr. J. McKeen Cattell, New York psychologist.

The everyday idea Dr. Lewis called "one-way" time. The special kind he named "two-way" or symmetrical. Illustrating "two-way" time he said with existing data an astronomer can predict an eclipse 1000 years hence or calculate one 1000 years ago with equal accuracy. Or a moving picture of the motion of the solar system could run backward and yet obey Newtonian laws as satisfactorily as in forward motion.

"Would you believe," said Dr. Lewis "that events now transpiring are among the factors which decided Caesar to cross the rubicon? I do not know that I believe it either, but I know that I believe it either, but I be made in physics and chemistry. In these sciences if we think of the present as pushed into existence by the past, we must in equal measure think of it as pulled into existence by the future.

"Now for the evidence. A few years ago all physicists and chemists would have agreed that the evidence was overwhelmingly against the point of view I am proposing. For generations people believed that the second law of thermo-dynamics implies a gradual running down of the universe to a permanent changeless end. Nevertheless there have been many who have realized that just as a pack of cards, completely shuffled will eventually return to its original arrangement, so any physico-chemical system, when left to itself in its initial state, must return to that state. I do not say that the whole universe and every part in it will some time return exactly to the condition of the present moment, but I do say that if anyone has the temerity or ingenuity to apply to the whole universe the laws now adopted in the little republic of physics, this is the conclusion.

"Another argument that would formerly have been used against the symmetry of time would have been drawn from the old-fashioned theory of emission of light. It used to be supposed that a source of light sent out its energy in all directions in such a manner that it would be inflicted to think of the process reversed in time. However, since the advent of the Quantum theory we know that this is a false picture. The theory conceives light as made of tiny bundles called quanta. They have different lengths. They work like coins in slot machines of penny, nickel and dollar sizes. A "penny" quanta will not work a dollar machine, nor a "dollar" quanta set off the chemical reaction required by the penny size.

"The energy from an emitting atom," Dr. Lewis said, "does not spread throughout space, but goes in one entirety to one other atom, and this is a process symmetrical with respect to past and future." It remains to be decided, said Dr. Lewis, whether this time symmetry principle is to be accepted as a fundamental law of the physics, and if the answer is yes, then to learn whether it "can be harmonized with the older and broader laws of common sense" ideas of time.

HALIFAX TO VOTE ON BEER PARLORS

Halifax, N.S., May 17.—The city council decided to hold a plebiscite under the provision of the Nova Scotia Liquor Control Act to determine whether the Government parlors for the sale of beer and wine by the glass shall be established here, and whether the sale of beers and wines by hotels at meals shall be permitted. No date was set.

They do not, however, solve the problem of the tired and hungry business man in the centre of Paris, who mourns the disappearance of his favorite food shop.

Make Paving Budgets Produce More MILEAGE

Your community can afford just so much for paving. How much NEW MILEAGE results each year depends on the material used.

Concrete, by practically eliminating upkeep, makes budgets produce more NEW MILEAGE. Sums usually spent for maintenance, refinishing, replacements, are released for the major appropriation purpose.

Advocate concrete in your community for productive and economical road-budgeting, for safer driving, for reduced wear and tear on tires and cars, for lessened gas consumption and as an attraction to profitable tourist traffic.

"I was so weak I could hardly stand."

MANY women feel exactly like this, without realizing that probably the reason for their condition is anaemia, or lack of blood. Weakness, pallor, shortness of breath, palpitation of the heart, are all characteristic symptoms.

To have suffered from anaemia for seven years and to be relieved by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills after everything else had failed is the experience of Mrs. John Bain, 423 Avenue Road, Toronto.

"I was in the hospital for five months and had two blood transfusions," she wrote. "I came home from the hospital discouraged. I had absolutely no color; I was so weak I could hardly stand, and almost continually I was seized with dizzy spells. I am certainly glad I found Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, for they worked wonders. I can now do all my own work, and am gaining in weight steadily."

Dr. Williams Pink Pills are sold by all druggists or by mail, postpaid, at 50c a box, from the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

FORMER RAWDON BRIDE HONORED BY OLD FRIENDS

Annual Mother's Day Service Was Well Attended

Rawdon, May 16.(By Mail)—Master Herbert Smith received a beautiful fawn camera the gift by the Eastman Co., who are giving cameras to those attaining twelve years of age during 1930 in celebration of their fiftieth anniversary. The dealer Mr. Herb Hadley received six for distribution and on the appointed day there were more applicants than cameras, we congratulate Herbert on his prize.

The public school pupils received their flower and vegetable seeds, also grain on Wednesday, May 7th for the School Fair and the balance of the week they were busy getting them planted.

On Sunday morning a very large number attended the Mother's Day service at Mount Pleasant and several visitors were welcomed home for this event. The superintendent Mr. James Sharp led in the worship service and Miss Myrtle McKeown presided at the piano. The offering was taken by Messrs. Raymond McConnell and George Young, which goes to the Ontario Religious Education Council. Miss Dorothy Ryan told a beautiful story entitled, "The Search for the Beautiful," depicting a young man searching in foreign lands for a beautiful painting and then finding his mother sitting in her lovely garden at home was the best material for his picture. A lovely pageant, "What makes the difference?" was given by Mr. and Mrs. John Holmes as mother and father and Mac Sharp, Gladys Sharp, Vera McAdam, Edna Thrasher, Herbert Smith and Clifford Holmes as their family. They very fittingly portrayed the influence of a christian home. The pastor Rev. Joblin gave a short talk paying a tribute of devotion gratitude and love to the mothers of men. A pretty duet, "Tell Mother I'll There," was rendered by Messrs. John Coggins and Kenneth Holmes.

Mr. and Mrs. Garnet Bailey and Barbara of Toronto were Sunday guests of M. and Mrs. A. H. Bailey.

On Wednesday, May 7th a very pretty wedding ceremony took place at the parsonage of Rev. Paul Leahman and Mrs. Leahman, Toledo, Ohio when Miss Dorothy Sharp eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Sharp, Mount Pleasant, became the bride of Mr. Chas. Krog, son of Mr. E. Krog of Minnesotta. The bride looked charming in a gown of white silk net, traced with roses, patterned in hoop style, and she wore white kid shoes and hose and a picture hat of lace and straw in a shade of green to match the leaves of the roses in her frock. After the ceremony she donned a navy trioline coat with fur of grey squirrel and grey kid gloves. The witnesses were Miss Helen E. McKeown, who was prettily gowned in an orchid flowered chiffon with a lacey hat to match, and Mr. John Tracey, All of the young people reside at Royal Oak, Michigan. After a dainty wedding breakfast the happy couple spent the day in Toledo and on Thursday they left by motor to Mount Pleasant, to spend their honeymoon with the bride's parents. On their return they will reside in an apartment at 211 Batavia St., Royal Oak. The bride is a supervisor of the Michigan Bell Telephone Co.

The following was copied from the Royal Oak Times:

"Miss Loretta Weir, 704 Frederick St., Royal Oak, Michigan, entertained the girls of the Michigan Bell Telephone company at a surprise miscellaneous shower, honouring Miss Dorothy Sharp, who is to be married.

"Miss Sharp was also tendered another miscellaneous shower by the friends and relatives of her and the groom. After a social evening of cards and games, a buck wedding was staged and then the bride was asked to sit on the floor and a large umbrella was held over her and from it was attached hearts with a ribbon from the name of the donor to the parcel. She received lovely gifts of electrical appliances, silver, china, etc., besides a basket of kitchen accessories, given by a group of girls. In this basket was every conceivable item needed for a kitchen including mouse traps, moth balls, dish rags, pot scrapers, etc. At the close a cafeteria lunch was served."

On Tuesday evening, May 13th a large number of friends of the bride at Mount Pleasant where she resided until a few years ago, including many schoolmates and a number of relatives gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas McKeown (who very kindly offered their home for this pleasant event) to pay her tribute before she returned to her new home in the States. While here Doro thy was very popular and at all times she was very willing to help with community enterprises and although she has not been with us just recently, still her many friends here are interested in her welfare and wish her all happiness on her matrimonial voyage.

During the evening the happy couple were given a reserve seat and the pastor Rev. F. J. Joblin acted as Master of Ceremonies. Two choruses Maple Leaf Forever and O Canada were sung.

Mrs. Thomas McKeown gave a sketch dealing with "A girl's interesting snapshots of her." Miss Luella Sharp rendered a piano solo, Mrs. Percy MacMullen recited a humorous piece regarding "man and woman." Miss Edna Sharp sang "I wish I had some one to love me." Misses Francis McKeown and Edna Thrasher rendered a piano duet. Miss Mildred Smith then read the following address and Miss Myrtle McKeown presented Dorothy with a purse of money. Dorothy in a neat speech thanked those present for their gifts and kindness in coming on behalf of herself and husband and invited all to visit her at Royal Oak. Following this all sang "For they are jolly good fellows" and "Auld Lang Syne."

The following address was read:

Dear Dorothy and Chris—

We have dropped in tonight to wish you bon voyage across that well-traversed ocean, the sea of matrimony, upon which you have embarked. We trust that the skipper you have signed up with is staunch and true and we can vouch for the sterling qualities of his worthy mate, whom we have known since childhood.

As you know the ocean will not always be calm, for storms will gather and rocks loom ahead but if you put your trust in the Great Pilot, He will guide you to safe anchorage and your barque will rest at last on the beautiful shore, where no storms ever will come.

We are sorry that you are going to live under the stars and stripes instead of the good old Union Jack, but no doubt you will often be able to come back to good old Canada. We ask you to accept this small token which but partially expresses our regard for you.

Signed on behalf of your friends and neighbours, Mrs. Thomas McKeown and Miss Mildred Smith.

At the close of the programme the ladies served refreshments.

Those from other points who attended were: Mr. Joe McCullough of Peterborough, Mr. Reginald McKeown of Allan's Mills, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Reid, Kingston, Mr. and Mrs. George Montgomery of Hoard's, Mr. Wm. Broadworth and Ernest of Bethel.

Mr. and Mrs. Krog returned to Royal Oak on Thursday, May 15th.

MERGING BELLEVILLE AND TRENTON FORESEEN WITH AERIAL CAMP

Govt. Training Camp New Epoch in Aeronautics History

(Toronto Star Weekly)

The meeting of the city of Belleville and the town of Trenton into one municipality is foreseen as a possible sequel to the decision of the department of national defence to build the shores of the Bay of Quinte between the two places. Already the interesting ten miles of the township of Sidney are being rapidly settled by new residents and business houses.

Former Belleville people who return for the Old Home Week which opens August 2 will see many changes in the district.

The government training camp for the Canadian air force will be no novelty for Hastings County since during the war both Canadian and United States air cadets trained during the summer months at Camp Mohawk, east of here.

Belleville also has had even earlier connections with aeronautics for back in 1914 an aircraft was built here by W. C. Mikel, K.C., public magistrate in co-operation with the Polley Bros. of Buffalo.

Sulpicians First White Residents

The new Camp Borden being built on historic ground.

The first white man to visit this section was Samuel de Champlain in 1615 when he discovered the Bay of Quinte, the River Moira and the River Trent. On this occasion Champlain with his Indian allies paddled up the bay. Thence he went up the river Trent to assemble his Huron Indian allies, preparatory to making an attack upon the Iroquois Indians, who then inhabited or roamed over what is now New York state. Champlain with his Indians, paddled across Lake Ontario, attacked the Iroquois, was defeated, returned to the bay, ascended the River Moira and remained there hunting during the fall.

The first white residents in this territory were two French Sulpician priests, Father Pension and Father Trouve, who arrived in 1666. They were in charge of what was then known as the Kante Mission, which included what is now Prince Edward, Hastings, Northumberland and a large portion of the territory lying to the north and west. These priests only remained here a couple of years when the mission ceased.

Built First Brick House

The next settlers were a band of about fifty U.E. Loyalists who settled along the shores of the bay in 1787 after drawing lots for their farms. They included Capt. John Walden Myers, Capt. Simpleton, the Bleekers, Capt. Mikels, the Peterson, the Chisholms and the McNabbs. A settlement was formed at the mouth of the river Moira, first called Thurlow village later Meyers' Creek and in 1816 Belleville.

The Bay of Quinte was a favorite trade route in the early days owing to its placid waters. Boats going westerly passed over the Carrying Place at the west end of the bay into the lake to continue their journey.

The first industry started in this vicinity was a dam and saw mill erected on the Moira river by Capt. John Walden Meyers in 1790. In 1794 Meyers built the first brick house in Upper Canada. He was also instrumental in organizing the first Masonic lodge in the district, at what is now Belleville, in 1802. This old lodge is still in operation and bears the name "Moira." so called after the river which flows through the city of Belleville. This took its name from the Earl of Moira, a British officer during the American revolutionary war, who later became the Marquis of Hastings, after whom the country was named.

HALIFAX PAPER PUBLISHES ITS FINAL ISSUE

Acadian Recorder a Close Link With Confederation Times

Halifax, N. S., May 16—The Acadian Recorder, founded in 1813, suspended publication on May 10 last following the death of C. C. Blackadar, whose family had owned the paper since 1827. Under the title "A Halifax Institution," it makes it valedictory in part as follows: "The passing of such a historic newspaper as the Acadian Recorder with all that its name and history imply, could not be contemplated lightly. The more than a century of its existence has witnessed numerous changes in the publishing craft in Halifax. Many of its contemporaries have ceased to exist; many more have changed their names and styles or their owners. The Recorder alone has been constant as a fixed star, maintaining, without break, the continuity of its name and policy. Once upon a century, its ownership in one family—a distinction which it shares with such great newspapers as the London Times the Springfield Republican and the Montreal Gazette.

"With the exception of the latter which was established in 1752, the Recorder is the oldest newspaper in Canada. It was founded in 1813, and its first number, a modest sheet of four pages, was issued on Saturday, January 16th, 1813. Its founder was Anthony Henry Holland, the namesake and, as Murdoch the historian surmises, the godson of Anthony Henry, King's Printer, who for 40 years was one of the partners in the publication of the 'Halifax Gazette,' which, founded in 1752, was the first newspaper published in British North America and is still issued under the name of the Royal Gazette, by the government of Nova Scotia. The Recorder has been in the possession of the Blackadar family since 1827, a succession which was broken only a month ago, when C. C. Blackadar passed to his reward after more than half a century of daily activity in its service.

"The history of the Recorder is virtually the history of Nova Scotia during the century that is gone. It has linked the days of the far-off past with the present. Its files (which have been entrusted to the government of Nova Scotia in perpetuity) are a veritable treasure-house of the life and times of a by gone age. Especially is this true with respect to Halifax, for the Recorder always has been essentially a Halifax institution. While it has kept pace with the modern demand for an expanding news service, its primary and distinctive feature has been the faithful and reliable record which it conveyed to successive generations of readers of the current happenings in the city of its birth; the joys and sorrows, the sports and amusements, the daily walk and conversation of the people and all the manifold activities in politics, business and religion of the community in which it lived, moved and had its being.'

"The Recorder may be said to have been the very embodiment of the Halifax tradition and of the Haligonian spirit. It gave first place to the celebration of patriotic anniversaries to the Natal Day of Halifax on June 21st, a day which is held in veneration and unfailingly celebrated, as marking the triumphs of the first British town in the Dominion.

"The Recorder has been associated with great names and great events in the history of Halifax and, in a lesser degree, of Nova Scotia. It was in its columns that the famed letters of 'Agricola' gave the first real impetus to agriculture in our Province. Likewise, the youthful Provo Wallis of the 'Shannon' sailed into Halifax harbor on that Sunday in June 1813, with the 'Chesapeake' as a prize of war, the Recorder was here to tell the heroic story of that memorable duel in the waters of Boston Bay. Two years later it spread the glorious tidings of Wellington's victory at Waterloo.

"It was its privilege to record the brilliant exploits of some of Williams of Kars, Inglis at Lucknow and Wetherford and Parker in the Redan. It recorded the sailing from Halifax of the 'Royal William,' the first steamship to make the Atlantic crossing under her own steam, and the arrival of the 'Britannia' the pioneer ship of the great fleet founded by Samuel Cunard. It printed the news of the great feat of the laying the first Atlantic cable and in these later years it has witnessed the achievement of wireless telegraphy, the marvels of radio and the spanning of the Atlantic by airships. And not least, all the movements of political reform, social advancements and religious freedom, the establishment of responsible government and free schools, the wonderful developments in transportation by rail, motor car and steamship, the transformation of Halifax from a mere military town and trading port into a modern city with a great ocean port—all these things the Recorder has seen and in many of them it had no mean part.

"There is no need to expand the record, nor is this the time to appraise finally the worth of the service of the Recorder as a public journal. If it were the occasion of writing an epitaph it might be said with all modesty and propriety, that for more than 100 years the Acadian Recorder has borne an honorable name and an enviable reputation as an organ of public opinion. It has pursued a straight forward course it its relations to public affairs, none making it afraid. It has kept the faith. It has fought a good fight. It has exemplified integrity in business, it has expended, without variableness or shadow of turning, the principles of sound government and it has exalted those ideals and virtues which are the sure foundation and shield of honor and probity in public as in private conduct."

C. N. R.'s Inventor of Telephone Once Had Job Fixing Door Bells

Toronto, Ont., May 16—Sixteen years ago, a young fellow walked the streets of Loganville, Pa. As he walked he cast an eager eye towards each door of the residence lining the street. He was searching for work—principally that of repairing electric door-bells. Occasionally, he climbed onto a porch and rang. If the bell failed to ring he knocked. When the householder came to the door he politely handed her a card. "Bell out of order—please knock," invited the card. On the other side, it read: "When your bell gets out of order call the Electric Girl."

There cards, or at least some of them are among the most treasured possessions of the latest recruit of electricity J. G. Burkholder, chief engineer of Canadian National Railways, and originator of the latest method of communication—two-way train telephone.

Burkholder is now, according to his telling, "an old man of 31 summers." He was born in Philadelphia in 1899 and educated in the public and technical schools of that city. He discovered that he possessed a mechanical turn of mind, and striking out for himself, became an electrician's helper.

At 15, Burkholder was in business for himself in Loganville. He repaired bicycles, automobiles, and anything else. He was especially good on electric bells. This palled after a time, and he taught school. Then he went to a large electrical school at Pittsburgh.

At that time, many crucial developments were in the air. Into these stepped young Burkholder. Experiments into new byways of electrical transmission, either telegraph or telephone by means and ends to him, and h emerged with patent scalps hanging from his pelt—patents, which, he admits, brought him the sum of one dollar each since they were for discoveries made while on the payroll of these corporations.

In 1928, he came to Canada to join forces with the C. N. R. as chief engineer of telegraphs. He developed and perfected the world's first two-way train telephone installation; a job which entailed the carrying out of multiplicity of experiments and tests under all kinds of conditions. Without charts or engineering data from which to work, he tackled the problem of producing a two-way train telephone circuit, broadcasting the voice from a telephone booth on a moving train to carry current wires which parallel the track, from where it is picked up at stations along the line and transmitted to points where it can be placed on land wires of the telephone companies to be carried to all parts of the continent and beyond the Atlantic.

Burkholder saw the culmination of many months of hard work recently when his newest triumph performed perfectly before an audience of the most skeptical people in the world—newspapermen. The reporters called points all over the continent, and then listened in on a trans-Atlantic conversation, while the train was speeding at 60 miles an hour.

Buy a Six of Course but be Sure it's a Super-Six

The Essex Challenger is a Super-Six. By its patented principle the ability of the 6-cylinder type is freed to the limit. It is responsible for a performance and smoothness that belong exclusively to the Essex Challenger. That is why we say—and more buyers every day are saying—"not just a Six, but a Super-Six."

The New ESSEX Challenger Gives Sparkling Performance

Essex owes its performance to its completely balanced motor and power line. It has four-ring aluminum pistons, balanced with crankshaft and flywheel; drive shaft balanced with clutch and universals, and the Lanchester Balancer for smooth pickup. More power results, with smoother acceleration, higher speed and low fuel consumption.

New Oil System Adds Long Life

More and cooler oil in all bearings means a cool motor with less wear on moving parts. Roller valve tappets and adjustable front end timing chain aid quiet operation.

Plenty of leg and head room are built into Essex bodies. Front and rear seats are adjustable and bodies are silenced and insulated, with larger windows.

Interior appointments carry the same motif as fenders and lamps. Upholstery is of finest quality. There is a graceful three-spoke steering wheel, and the instrument panel holds starter, electric fuel and oil level gauge as well as motometer.

Roadability and Safety

Longer wheelbase, larger tires and patented spring suspension make Essex the most roadable of cars. High speed with safety is possible because of the positive action of four-wheel brakes.

This is the finest, best performing Essex value ever built. It holds scores of records established during continent-wide Challenger Week. See it and drive it. You will need no other proof that this is not just a six, but a Super-Six.

$25,000 FIRE SWEEPS STIRLING VILLAGE EARLY TODAY

ACKERS GARAGE IS BURNED, LAW OFFICE DAMAGED BY FIRE

Occupants of Apartments Flee In Night Clothes—Miss L. Smith Awakened by Smell of Smoke, Finds Bed Clothes on Fire.

(Special by Staff Reporter)

Stirling, Ont., May 19.—Another disastrous fire, the second within six months, took its toll of property damage early this morning in this village, when the large garage owned by Hiram Ackers was completely destroyed, and the insurance office and law office of H. C. Martin and O. S. Dastedo was badly damaged. The loss will reach to over twenty-five thousand dollars, it is estimated.

Conley Ackers, brother of the owner of the garage, escaped from the residence above the doomed building in his nightclothes as did also Miss L. Smith and her mother, Mrs. Catherine Smith, who lived in an apartment over the second building. So far advanced were the flames before they were discovered that there was no time to even save any of their personal belongings, and all three were extremely fortunate to escape with their lives.

Garage Doomed

Twenty men worked valiantly from two thirty o'clock this morning until nearly seven, but the garage was doomed from the start. The fire apparently started at the rear of the garage, which is on the south side of the main street, the back wall being right at Hayden Creek. It has gained a strong foothold before someone noticed the flames, which were at that time just starting through the roof. The firemen managed to pull out two cars from the front part of the building but two others farther back were destroyed. Three streams of water played on the garage until it was seen that it could not possibly be saved, and then attention was directed to the nearby buildings.

Smell of Smoke

The apartment above the Martin insurance offices was gutted, every piece of furniture in the place being destroyed. Miss Smith, who was asleep was awakened by the acrid odour of smoke, and on investigating, heard the crackling of flames all around. She hastened back to the bedroom where her mother slept and found the bedclothes in flames and the wall crumbling. Mrs. Smith, who is a semi-invalid, was able to make her way out of the dwelling with the assistance of her daughter, however.

As the firemen worked, several explosions occurred, apparently as drums of oil in the garage burst. So terrific was the heat that after the wall facing on the street fell, a plate glass window in the store of George E. Reynolds cracked. Sparks from the building flew over a quarter of a mile away, and only the sharp watch which was kept saved other buildings. A large shed at the rear of the Bridge House, some distance away, caught fire when sparks fell on the roof, but this was put out before much damage was done.

Mr. Hiram Ackers, owner of the garage was away from home at the time, as well as his family, but he arrived back before the flames had died down.

Three Recent Fires

This is the third time within the past few months that fire has visited Stirling, the Ackers block having been gutted last December, while only a few weeks ago the residence of Mr. Arthur Shore was burned to the ground.

Great credit is due to Stirling's fire chief, Mr. James Lagrow and his staff of men for the fight they put up to keep the fire from spreading. Another who stood out in the work early today was Mr. Frank Sprenthall, town engineer, who started the pumping machine at the village well and kept it running when water was an absolute necessity until seven o'clock this morning.

R.E. CHURCH ASKS AFFILIATION WITH R.E. COMMUNION IN ENGLAND

Emmanuel Church Belleville Favours British Connection

Reformed Episcopal Church in Canada will seek permission from the convocation at Philadelphia on Wednesday of this week to enter relations with the R. E. Church of the United States in order to affiliate with the new united church of the Free Church of England and the Reformed Episcopal Church in England. Bishop Vaughan who has been in Belleville for the past week will bear the wishes of the R. E. Synod of Canada to England where he is northern bishop and will present the case for decision.

Bishop Vaughan has visited its parishes in Canada during a three months' leave which has been granted him. This step was taken because of the fact that Bishop Brewing, who has been head of the church in Canada has decided to enter another communion, that of the United Church in British Columbia. Bishop Vaughan has viewed the situation in Canada and last night at a meeting of the congregation and vestry of Emmanuel Church explained the situation and received the approval of the local parish in the proposal to affiliate with the church in England.

The Synod of the Reformed Episcopal Church in Canada at a meeting called to gather at Emmanuel Church last week decided to seek affiliation with the British Church. Emmanuel congregation had not been consulted owing to lack of time other than the wardens, but the congregation last night passed approval on motion of Messrs. R. H. Ketcheson and Jesse N. Barker.

The Bishop said that he hoped in another year to see Canada again with a bishop of its own. He looked favor on a division of the Anglican and eastern churches in Canada owing to the distances which separate them.

Bishop Vaughan after the vote told the people of Emmanuel that he believed the Canadian church would prosper under British affiliation. He noted the unique fact that the Canadian church have its first bishop in the church in England. Taking Canada into affiliation was in a sense repaying a debt to Canada.

A long-time agreement that culminated in the Free Church of England and the R. E. Church, which existed separately for half a century and have now come together, was given by the Bishop. He also told of the growth of the work in England. His

NO DEPRESSION IN INCOME TAX RETURNS REVEAL

Close to Half Million Dollars in District Collector's Territory

Despite the great business depression since "Black Wednesday" broke the stock markets for the first time last fall, losing fortunes for many in this country, income tax returns for the fiscal year ending March 31st, 1930, show, roughly, an increase of ten per cent. This was made public today by A. A. McCrory income tax collector for this district.

Close to one half million dollars was collected in Mr. McCrory's territory from March 31st., 1929, until March 31st 1930. $463,222.39 was the sum collected in that time, to be fairly close. "And," Mr. McCrory stated to a member of The Ontario Intelligencer staff this morning, "we expect an even greater increase for the coming year." Mr. McCrory is of the opinion that business will pick up in the not very far future and believes that a great deal of the present "depression" is due to mental lethargy.

Returns came in promptly this year it was stated. Besides the increase in value of returns, there was also a greater number of returns made.

LEFT A BIG CAR TOOK SMALL ONE

Police Believe Two Thefts Involved in Campbellford Case

Fair exchange is no robbery, runs the old adage, but it is not application to the theft of a Chevrolet sedan which took place at Campbellford late last night. The sedan, MJD 175, serial number 165002 and engine number 3096678, was parked on the front street for only an hour and when the owner returned the car had disappeared. In its place was standing a Pack sedan, No. W 78778. The matter was reported to the police and upon investigation the Packard sedan was found to be a local garage and the loss of the other car broadcast to the several towns and cities in the district. It is believed by the police at Campbellford that the Packard car had been stolen and in order to prevent a like way as the Packard car had run out of gas, the man had left it in place of the Chevrolet and continued his journey. The police are anxious to apprehend the car thief as apparently he is much wanted by the police as that he is employing to make his get-away.

FLYING OFFICERS IN FORCED LANDING

PETERBORO, Ont., May 19—CP — Flying Officer R. S. Mimms, of Ottawa, miraculously escaped without so much as a scratch when his plane crashed on the local flying field on the Port Hope highway, late yesterday afternoon.

The officer who was flying from Toronto, en route to Camp Borden, in his Siskin army biplane, was obliged to make a forced landing. In doing so he landed on a boggy stretch of land. His machine up-ending on its nose, turned completely over, smashing the propeller and damaging the tail.

NATIVE INDIANS ARREST RIOTING CO UNTRYMEN

Native police busy at work combatting the riots which broke out when Nationalists defied the Salt laws. Note the rebel in the right foreground offering passive resistance to his arrest. Another major cause of disturbances was the arrest of the Mayor of Calcutta and the President of the Congress. Street cars were set on fire and many of the rioters plunged into the canal to avoid arrest.

High Marks at Examinations

Four Out of 16 at Belleville General Hospital Make 100 Per Cent.

Mrs. Gemmell Shaw, masseuse, has just finished teaching massage to this year's graduating class and she is greatly pleased with the result of the nurses' examination papers. Four of them have attained to the highest 100 mark, four to 98, the remaining eight from 90 to 96; this in position and theoretical work is necessary for the masseuse to obtain, before she can do the senior practical work. This latter work must be given to Mrs. Gemmell-Shaw, so that in this way she may be sure of the correct depth, smoothness and finish of a treatment.

Citizens will congratulate not only the nurses and Mrs. Gemmell-Shaw on this high standard, but also The Belleville General Hospital, in having every department of study for the nurse-in-training of the highest order.

There are 146 candidates for the ministry of the United States.

TRAPPING CHAMPION

Miss Julia Magee, of Rocky Ridge, who was adjudged the champion trapper of the United States and Canada during the past season. Miss Magee's best muskrat pelt was voted the finest raw fur of an estimated bag of 34,000,000 in North America. She was given a gold medal and $1,000 in cash.

CONTRACTOR IS THE DEFENDANT

Mrs. John Seeley is Awarded Unstated Sum Out of Court

Non-Jury sittings of the Supreme Court opened before His Honour Mr. Justice Raney at the court house this afternoon. Several civil cases are on the docket and the first one, Ruttan vs the King and third party, Billis proceeded at once. In this case it is alleged that on June 18th, 1929, Cassiff Ruttan and his father, George Ruttan, were driving on Highway No. 14, two miles west of Foxboro on a road under repair, and the car is alleged to have dropped over a seven-foot embankment which was not designated by danger signs. George Ruttan is suing the contractor, Billis, for injuries received, while Cassiff Ruttan claims damages to his car. R. D. Ponton is appearing for the plaintiffs, Chas. A. Payne for the King and D. Fichson Brewer, Toronto, for the defendants.

The action of Walkake vs Sullivan was laid over until the next court while the civil action Philppen vs Philppen will be heard tomorrow. The King and Graham vs Long case was referred to the local master. This action involves a promissory note while a cognizor claims for services has been made.

Mrs. John Seeley of Belleville who sued the Corporation of Belleville for an unstated amount following an accident in which her arm was fractured was settled out of court. The amount awarded was not named. The lawyers vs O'Brien case has been transferred to Peterboro.

CONVICT DRIVER, HE HAD FOUR IN DRIVER'S SEAT

The new amendments to the traffic by-law which makes it an offense to seat more in a front seat of a car so that the driver will be obstructed in the handling of his machine and more than one riding on a bicycle will be strictly enforced by the local police. On Saturday a young man was in traffic court charged with driving a coupe with four in the front seat. He pleaded guilty to the charge and was fined $10.00 and $5.50 costs.

Young motorists, who own flashy coupes and wishing to take the boy friend and his girl out for an airing had better make use of the rumble seat. It has been common practice in this city at least to have three sitting on the seat and one perched partly on the face of one of the sitting passengers. This practice must stop. It is strictly against the traffic regulations to have the front seat crowded so that the car cannot be safely handled by the driver. Another practice has been the riding of two on one bicycle. This practice is common among the younger boys of the city and any instances coming to the notice of the police will be checked by a substantial fine.

MOHAWKS MARK ANNIVERSARY OF HISTORIC EVENT

One Hundred and Forty-Six Years Ago Originals Landed

(By Staff Reporter)

One hundred and forty-six years ago, a small band of Mohawk Indians, loyal to the British flag, pledging their allegiance to the King of England, and attracted by the sloping shores of the Bay of Quinte, landed in a small cove near Deseronto. Yesterday the descendants of these same Indians paid a simple, humble, tribute to the heroic deeds of their forefathers not two hundred yards from the original landing place. Quaint, ceremonious, religious scenes marked the anniversary of the landing of the Mohawks. At Christ Church, Tyendinaga, which overlooks Bay of Quinte, a few miles

ARGYLLS PARADE TO ST. THOMAS'

Craigiah Rev. John Lyons Speaks to Garrison Troops

Resplendent in new uniforms and led by the brass and pipe bands; the Argyll Light Infantry, under command of Col. Eric Keeler, M.C., augmented by many ex-members of the regiment and a number of veterans from Post 99 of the Canadian Legion, paraded for Divine Service to St. Thomas' Church, yesterday. Rev. John Lyons, rector of St. Thomas, conducted the service assisted by Rev. A. L. Geen. This was the first church parade of the regiment and although they have been in training a short time they made a fine impression as they swung along in column of route and elicited many compliments from those lining the sidewalks as the battalion rout marched through the principal streets of the city before being dismissed on the Armouries floor.

Hymns of a martial nature and familiar to those who spent sometime over seas were sung. The order of service was also familiar to all ranks as this form was used exclusively in the Canadian Expeditionary Forces. In the chancel and other parts of the church were hung colors of the old 15th and colors of the overseas battalions which were an inspiration to those who were serving for the first time in uniform.

To the veterans and others brought back memories of other days and the comradeships which have grown mellow through the years. Miss Shalder organist and choirmaster of the church, directed, and the choir rendered a pleasing anthem.

Rev. Lyons addressed the regiment on the British Empire and the place that Canada holds in that galaxy of nations. He discussed briefly the troubles in India and expressed the opinion that all could be cleared away with a better understanding of the British rule and what they were trying to do for the country. The speaker praised the work of the allies in the Great War and the benefits that have accrued and the progress that has been made for perpetual peace with all nations.

THINK BOMBER IS CLUE TO OUTRAGES

CHICAGO, May 19.—CP—In Frank H. Phillips, former bomb expert in the Canadian forces during the great war, police believe they have found the answer to several of the city's recent bomb outrages. Phillips who enlisted in the Canadian forces at Windsor, Ont., in 1914, was trapped last night as he set out to bomb a restaurant.

Swordfish is now regarded as a food delicacy and is sold in Boston, America, at 50 cents a pound.

WILL ATTEND CONCERT

"Saturday Night" of this week has a good picture of Mr. Reginald Gordon Geen with the information that this week he is to put on his second Vogconcert in Guelph. Rev. Mr. Geen and Mrs Geen have gone to attend it. It is one of the great musical events in Canada.

COMPLETE REPAIR WORK.

The Standard Paving Company Limited have nearly completed the work of repairing the curbs on many of the city pavements, started two weeks ago. The streets receiving attention are Charles, Ann, George, Coleman, Cedar and West Bridge. These pavements were laid in 1919 and 1920 and carried a five year guarantee which expired in 1924 and 1925. Therefore the Standard Paving Company were in no way obligated to repair the curbs which have during the last year or so, shown signs of crumbling. The company is however, repairing every piece of curb needing attention at their own expense, even though the guarantee ran out five years ago.

RETURNS TO ST. LOUIS

Mr. Stanley Newton, manager of the Housing Commission, Corporation and member of the St. Louis Merchant Exchange has returned home to St. Louis, Mo., after a visit with his father, ex-Chief John Newton and his sister, Mrs. William L. Cooke. Mr. Newton who is a former well known Belleville boy, is greatly impressed with the city's growth. He is proud to call Belleville his home, which he terms as "One of the most beautiful cities on the continent."

KIWANIS INTER CITY VISIT

A number of the Kiwanis Club left early today, Hamilton, Ontario, will be among the visiting clubs. The luncheon is being held in the La-Salle Hotel and members from Picton joined the local contingent.

But Johnny marched through the hall, oblivious of the stares and smiles that greeted his appearance.

"Say, mister, this is where the dog show is, ain't it?"

The man addressed looked down at Johnny. A flicker of amusement lit his face.

"Yes it is, sonny, why?"

"Well, I want to enter my dorg!" stated Johnny simply. "He's the best dog a feller ever had and—and I want to put him in for a prize."

The man smiled again. A glistening little locket Spaniel was going through his paces before the judges.

the driver Horace Oliphant was not in the conveyance at the time. While Mr. Oliphant Jr., was delivering a basket of bread, the animal suddenly plunged down the street, presumably having been alarmed by a scrap of newspaper. The horse came to a stop in front of another customer's home around the corner. The vendor had practically completed his morning rounds and there was only a small quantity of bread in the wagon. The harness was torn off the animal's back while the rig was damaged when hurled against the curb

THOROUGHBRED
By Jasper B. Sinclair

He was just a street dog, mangy and unkempt. His master was just a newsboy, clad in overalls and tattered sweater.

But Prince looked up into Johnny Ryan's eyes with all the adoration that a dog can show. A wagging tail signified his utter disregard of ragged clothes and a dirty face.

Johnny walked confidently into the big hall with Prince close at his heels. Somehow, he had slipped by the attendant at the door.

Officials of the Pacific Kennel Show eyed the pair disdainfully. Immaculately dressed patrons shrugged in disapproval at the odd combination.

"Say, mister, this is where the dog show is, ain't it?"

The man addressed looked down at Johnny. A flicker of amusement lit his face.

The man smiled again. A glistening little locket Spaniel was going through his paces before the judges.

He glanced at the dog, in the ring, then back at the mangy dog that clung to Johnny's heels.

"I'm sorry, but I don't think we can——"

"Sure you can! Why not?" Johnny was only ten, but his eyes belied defiance.

"He's a better dog than any of these house pets! He's the best rat hunter in the whole city, and—and he's got a heart as big as any of them. Ain't yuh, Prince?"

The dog wagged his tail approvingly.

The grin vanished from the man's face. He caught the boy's pleading tone and his sincerity.

Then he shrugged. The Pacific Kennel was the classiest show on the coast. A dog had to be a blue-blooded thoroughbred to enter.

Here was something different, how ever. It was a novel idea, but—perhaps they could stretch a point. "Won't do a bit of harm, anyway," he thought.

"Well, what do yuh say?" demanded Johnny, impatiently.

"Every bing's all right, son," replied the man. "By the way, what's your name?"

"Johnny Ryan."

"All right, Mr. Ryan. Your dog will go on next."

"Gee, that's great! I know yuh were a good sport, mister!"

"Yes, I guess I am," said the man. The spat had left the ring.

"Just walk back and forth over there, Mr. Ryan, with your—er, dog," explained the man.

Eagerly Johnny led his dog forward. "Here, Prince!" he exclaimed one at the judges, eyeing the mangy dog disapprovingly.

"Very quite all right," replied Johnny's friend, with a broad wink. "Just look this dog over....observe all his fine points....look at the way he walks!"

Gravely the judges gave their attention to Johnny and his dog, as Johnny walked in front of them. Johnny held his head high. Even Prince caught his master's glee, wagging his tail at the attention he was receiving.

It was a novel experience in Prince's career. He who has been used to scurrying up alleys and cowering in dark corners. Wasn't such a bad world after all! But then he knew Johnny had something to do with it. Life had been better since that rainy night Johnny had taken him and brought him home.

While the pair paraded around and back, the judges went into a "huddle" with the man to whom Johnny had spoken. A whispered consultation followed. Then the judges shook his head. More whispering. Finally a nod of approval from the disagreeing one.

Men and women in evening clothes drew nearer to view the unusual spectacle. A boy in overalls and tattered sweater and a mangy dog holding the spotlight against the classiest field of thoroughbreds in all dogdom.

It was something new in the annals of the Pacific Kennel show. They applauded, for after all, a dog is a dog, and there was no mistaking the love and devotion that shone in the eyes of the mongrel....Johnny's heart swelled with pride.

"See! Didn't I tell yuh, Prince?" he whispered.

Prince responded with a wag of his tail. If his master was happy, he was happy too.

Presently the group of judges broke up. The man whom Johnny had first spoken to walked up to him.

"That'll be all, Mr. Ryan," he declared soberly.

"Yeah? All right!"

Then the man faced the audience.

"And now, ladies and gentlemen, after considerable discussion, the judges of this show have decided upon a special award. After viewing Mr. Ryan's dog and checking all his fine points, we have unanimously agreed that Prince shall be awarded this trophy on behalf of the Pacific Kennel Show...."

The crowd applauded and cheered as the man held up the cup before Johnny's astonished eyes.

"On behalf of the Pacific Kennel Show," repeated the man, "for being ....the best loved dog in the show!"

TWO INJURED AS CAR TURNS OVER
Chicago Party Ditched as Car Control is Lost Near Napanee

When Mrs. Jacob L. Lubin of Chicago, lost control of a car she was driving two miles west of Napanee, the motor plunged over the ditch and both she and her husband were badly shaken up, suffering from minor bruises and lacerations. It appears that Mrs. Lubin who was proceeding east turned out to pass another vehicle going in the same direction last night at six o'clock and the auto after careening across the road, struck a pole and turned partly over. The car was badly damaged, all the glass having been broken and fenders and running board shattered. The occupants were taken to Napanee for examination and treatment while the car was towed in for repairs. Mr. and Mrs. Lubin will remain in Napanee for a few days. It is understood that no charges will be laid as there was no negligence shown on the part of the driver.

Should Have Wide Outlook
Members of W.C.T.U. Hear Mrs. Hagerman on Citizenship

The monthly meeting of the W.C.T.U. was held in the Y.M.C.A. Mrs. Ellen Farnsworth presided and opened the meeting with the use of hymn "All Round the World the Ribbon White Shall Go", followed with prayer.

Mrs. Pearsall had charge of the devotional period and conducted an exercise showing the attitude of the Bible toward intemperance. Mrs. Gartley gave a Scripture lesson and offered prayer.

Mrs. Farnsworth spoke for a few minutes on the importance of the W.C.T.U. work and the need for continued effort and earnest prayer.

The minutes of the April meeting were read and approved and the Treasurer's report given. Delegates to the County Convention to be held in Madoc on the 21st and 22nd of this month were appointed— Mrs. Lent, Mrs. Gartley, Mrs. Hurgins, and Mrs. McGuire.

Mrs. Hunter and Mrs. Hagerman contributed much enjoyed solos.

Mrs. Hagerman gave a suggestive papers on "Citizenship"—Women," she said, "should become thoroughly informed on all public questions especially the system of government not only of Canada but of the Empire. Our imperial relationship gave us the opportunity for an unusually broad outlook on the affairs of government and tended to produce an internationalist mind and sympathy with people of widely differing race and culture.

"Good citizenship demanded our assistance in all good causes while one should vigorously oppose everything tended to degrade our civic and national life."

The Rev. E. Farnsworth gave an impassioned address on "Citizenship". He declared that the home stood first in its power to create good or bad citizens and stressed the necessity of good Christian homes. He strongly condemned the evils that are tending to lower our moral standards and cited the liquor traffic as a chief offender.

At least 2,000 delegates are expected to register for the Baptist Young People's Union Convention, being held in Brantford, May 23-5.

R E. CHURCH ASKS AFFILIATION

Synod covers northern England and has associated with it three Scottish churches which otherwise are free.

Bishop Vaughan left today for Philadelphia to attend the meeting of the Episcopal Church. Bishop Rudolph, of Philadelphia, head of the R. E. Church in the United States, was in Belleville last week meeting the synod of the Canadian church. Affiliation of this latter body with the church in England was recommended and Bishop Rudolph as more in line with the genius and ideals of the Canadian church.

FIRE CAPTAIN IS KILLED IN OTTAWA

OTTAWA, Ont., May 19.—(CP)—Capt. Robt. Pratt was killed and several of his firemen were injured when the wall of a blazing two storey brick west end cf city collapsed soon after noon, pinning them to the ground. The captain was standing close to the wall directing the fire fighters when the burning section gave way.

William Oulrin, a boarman, was so seriously injured, he is reported to have but fighting chance for his life. Wall was shattered by explosion and wall crumbled on top of fire fighters.

PLAN BOXING BOUTS FOR KING'S BIRTHDAY

Arrangements are being made at present fo rthe boxing bouts that will be held under the auspices of the Canadian Legion in the Armouries on Thursday night, June 3rd, next. The last bouts were such a success that it is confidently expected that one of the largest crowds in the history of local boxing will be in attendance for the event. The Legion is lining up an excellent card and promises the best bouts that have ever been seen in the city.

LET CONTRACTS FOR PAVING OF TRENTON ROADS

Announcement of Awards is Expected in Few Days

COMPLETED BY FALL

(Special by Staff Reporter)

Trenton, May 10.—The contracts for the paving of several Trenton streets will be let during this week, and immediately afterwards the company to which it is awarded will start work thereby employing most of the men who are still idle in Trenton. The announcement as to who has been given the paving contract will likely be made on Wednesday, May 21st, it is stated.

This paving job will include, Dufferin Ave., and Front street, as well as the Wooler Road from Mayhew's Mill to the town limits. The work should be completed by early fall, and will be a decided improvement to the town both from the motorist standpoint, as well as the scenic. At present both these roads are in a deplorable state, and are well travelled main arteries leading into the town.

ATHLETES READY FOR RELAY RACE

June Third Race to Find Trentonians in Field

(Special by Staff Reporter)

Trenton, May 10.—Athletes here are getting ready for the annual Trenton vs. Belleville two-day relay race which will be run on the 3rd of June. As usual, a handicap bicycle race will also be run off, with three prizes for place as well, as a prize for the best time. The race will start at the town hall in Trenton about nine o'clock on the morning of June 3rd, and will finish in the down town section of Belleville.

RIORDAN'S CHALLENGE TO TRENTON PLAYERS

(Special by Staff Reporter)

Trenton, May 10.—It is not yet known whether there will be any soft ball game here on May 24th or not, as a challenge has been sent to Trenton from Riordan's of Toronto, which asks for a game or any number which are to be played on that date, with any team in Trenton or vicinity. It is likely that one of the town league teams will take up this challenge, and it is possible that more than one team will play should the Toronto team, said to be a senior outfit, come along.

MEN'S CLUB AT CHURCH SERVICES

(Special by Staff Reporter)

Trenton, May 10.—Yesterday morning the Men's Club of St. George's and Grace Church assembled at Canterbury Hall and marched in a body to their respective churches. This is a novel idea which arose from the splendid comradeship enjoyed by these clubs in their social evening held joint ly on Easter Monday last. The men assembled at ten o'clock and the large est turnout seen this year was the result. Mr. F. S. Keane, president of St. George's Men's Club, and Mr. W. G. Avery, president of Grace Church Men's Club, had charge of the parade.

AYMOND, WINNER OF KING'S PLATE

Twenty Thousand Witness 71st Running of Big Race

Toronto, May 10—Sharing with kings the traditional love for horse racing, more than 20,000 men and women poured through the gates of the Woodbine Saturday and saw a bay gelding from the town of Oakville flash past the finishing post to capture the 71st contest for the King's Plate.

Turf veterans will recall few open ing days at the Woodbine when interest in the historic race equalled that of Saturday's, as more than 18 three year-olds, all bred in Ontario, went to the starting post. Seldom have racing experts and followers been more at least so completely fooled as when R. H. New's Aymond took the lead early and gamely held it throughout the entire mile and an eighth.

Aymond was an outsider. Popular choices were Pandorus and Rialto. Rialto and Pandorus, and thousand who had enthusiastically backed their judgment were in dumb astonishment as the unexpected happened.

Weather Ideal

Features of the day were the weather and the crowd. From the standpoint of good racing, experts claim, the above was ideal.

The Ontario Jockey Club received a perfect break when the meteorological bureau dropped a sunny day in the midst of a cold, dreary week. The sun and the comparative warmth it brought along was all that was needed to ensure a good attendance and complete the setting for a picture that marks the Woodbine track as one of the most attractive on the continent.

Meeting the eye was the same pleasing sweep of green, melting into the same slate-blue of the lake, and providing the same serene background for the animated mass of men and women ever on the move in front of the stand.

DECORATION DAY AT TRENTON, JULY SIXTH

(Special by Staff Reporter)

Trenton, May 10.—Decoration Day in Trenton will be observed on Sunday, July 6th, it was decided at a meeting of the executive branch of the Canadian Legion held the other evening. A large parade will be part of the day's events and the Town Council, the various fraternal bodies, Boy Scouts, Girl Guides and others will be asked to participate. Graves will be decorated in the morning, and Capt. Rev. C. K. Nicoll, of the Presbyterian Church, will have charge of the service arrangements. Assembly will take place on the College St. School grounds as in former years, and then the parade will move to the Memorial in Governor Simcoe Park.

HUGE BRITISH AIRSHIP MAY START SUNDAY

Cardington, England, May 10.—The R-100, great British dirigible, will take off on her flight to Canada, it is expected, next Sunday, May 23.

This date, however, is but tentative, and the take-off will depend, of course, upon the weather on that day.

One hundred and fifty men from the local air works and an equal number from the Royal Air Force will stand by to handle the R-100. The ship will be attached to the mooring mast after each of the remaining trials this week. In the meantime the television apparatus, on which weather maps are to be transmitted during the flight, is being subjected to searching tests.

BATTLE HONORS FOR MARITIMES

Twelve Militia Units From Atlantic Seaboard Signalized by Sept.

Ottawa, May 19 (CP)—Twelve militia units of the Maritime Provinces have their Battle Honors of the Great War published in the third list issued by the Department of National Defense and included in District Orders today. These include seven regiments from Nova Scotia, two from Prince Edward Island, and three from New Brunswick. A fourth list will follow in due course.

Already all of the battalions of the Canadian Corps and the Expeditionary Force generally have been dealt with the 7th (British Columbia Battalion) excepted. The present list takes in militia regiments who contributed throughout the Corps in a number of battalions or formations. For example:

The Halifax Rifles will bear on their Regimental Color the following Battle Honors: "Mount Sorrel, Somme 1916, Arras 1917-1918, Hill 70, Amiens, Pursuit of Mons."

Additional to those, the following honors will be credited to the Halifax Rifles as an introductory to that regiment's particulars in the Militia List: The Great War, Ypres 1917, Hindenburg Line."

The Members of the Princess Louise Fusiliers of Halifax are also published, while other Nova Scotia regiments entitled within the current list are: The King's Canadian Hussars, Kentville; The Pictou Highlanders, Stellarton; The Cumberland Highlanders, Amherst; The Lunenburg Regiment, Lunenburg; The Annapolis Regiment, Middleton.

The Prince Edward Island Light Horse and the Prince Edward Island Highlanders are the only regiments from that province whose color honors are listed, while the New Brunswick regiments are: The York Regiment, Fredericton; The North Shore Regiment, Chatham, and the New Brunswick Rangers, Sussex.

MODERN ANDROCLES FINDS PACHYDERME NEVER FORGOT AID

New York, May 19.—Androcle and his lion with a sore foot had nothing on H. H. McCollum, naturalist, according to the story he told Dexter Fellows, publicity impresario for a great circus which was playing here a few weeks ago. The story was told several years ago, Fellows said, but it showed, he claimed, or rather said McCollum claimed, that elephants do really possess some remarkable traits of memory with which they are often credited.

"Nearly forty years ago," Mr. McCollum told a group of naturalists, "I was a junior member of an expedition into the Indian elephant country to capture a number of "punka-wallah" elephants. We had been in the jungle several days, marching in a column when I became separated from the rest of the party and, although I could hear them marching, was out of sight of the group. I started back toward the sounds and drew up short, face to face with the largest Indian elephant I had ever seen.

"I expected momentarily to be ground to death, but for some reason he made not a move toward me. Then I noticed that he was grunting — in fact whimpering—and tenderly mustalist his right fore-foot. I saw that a thorn nearly a foot in length had pierced the hoof.

"Gritting my teeth, I stepped off the few feet that separated me from me, leaned down and pulled out the thorn. With a grunt of thanks, he wheeled and disappeared in the jungles. I rejoined my party, and after we captured our babies, returned to the United States.

"Last fall," Mr. McCollum went on, "I attended a circus at Espy, Pa. I sat in the fifteenth row of section. The grand parade was led by a huge Indian elephant equipped with a gilded howdah and attended by several mahouts.

"The procession approached the bleachers section and the huge elephant stopped. In spite of all the attendants could do, he walked out of the parade and over to the section where I was seated, picked out me, his trunk around me, he lifted me out of the seat, walked across the arena and placed me in a chair in the $3.50 reserved section."

KALADAR FIRES ARE INCENDIARY

Provincial Officer Barrett Makes Enquiry Regarding Burning School

Napanee, May 19.—Provincial Officer F. W. Barrett has returned home from Kaladar and Flinton where he has been conducting a searching inquiry into mysterious fires which occurred near Kaladar on Sunday and Monday.

On Sunday a brisk fire occurred in the village of Kaladar, destroying about after much work by the villagers the blaze was eventually stamped out.

At 10 o'clock in the evening of the same day the villagers noticed a wood shed near the school house on fire and soon had consumed a quantity of wood. The blaze was a fierce one and a bucket brigade was organized at once. Through their efforts, assisted by the residents the school house did not fall a prey to the flames.

At 8 o'clock on Monday evening, gathered at the school as usual with the teacher Gordon McDonald presiding.

Suddenly one pupil noticed smoke was seen emitting from the wall in the school which was a frame construction. The first men on the scene were Neil Benny, James Beattie and Ed Berry and on investigation it was discovered that a hole had been driven in the wall and in the hole were sticks of wood.

All efforts were made to save the building but of no avail as the fire had gained too much headway. The structure with nearly all the contents was a total loss. There is no question that the fires were of an incendiary nature.

On Monday night the store of Mr. Hawley Stone at Flinton was burglarized and Provincial Officer Barrett was accompanied by Provincial Constable D. B. Wagar.

French River, Home of Wiley "Muskie," Will Soon Echo Cries of Elated Anglers as They Battle Fresh Water Tiger

"Now is the time for all good Fishermen to prepare for that summer trip" is an appropriate slogan for disciples of Izaac Walton these balmy spring days, largely upon the careful selection of location, tackle and even associates, for many a party has been ruined by the last-minute introduction of a "wet blanket" to an otherwise congenial collection of sportsmen.

One of the most interesting fishing streams in North America is French River, Ontario, 215 miles north of Toronto on the Canadian Pacific Railway. This lordly river is celebrated as the habitat of the fighting muscallunge, one of the gamest fish known; huge Great Northern pike, pickerel, an abundance of small-mouth and large-mouth black bass and other finny prizes. To accommodate sportsmen and their families, a fine bungalow camp—a collection of individual cabins centering around a main clubhouse—has been erected on a cliff overlooking the river. Here the fisherman and his family can "rough it in comfort," far from the cares and annoyances of a work-a-day world.

That big "muskie" are plentiful at French River is proven by the fact that one recent summer a monster muskie weighing 55 pounds was taken in the North Channel at the mouth of the Wolseley River. Also, not long ago a party of Ohio sportsmen caught, besides their daily limit of bass, pike and pickerel, no less than seventeen "muskies" ranging from 10 to 38½ lbs. In 1922 a "muskie" of 35 pounds weight, 50 inches long and 21 inches in girth was taken in the main channel of the French, one mile from the bungalow camp.

The French River Bungalow Camp will open June 15 and remain open until Sept. 15. Jack Strathdee, its genial manager, is an experienced outdoorsman whose chief delight is coaching the uninitiated in the art of luring the fish. French River also has a fine 9-hole golf course so that devotees of the royal and ancient game who are also fond of fishing need not entirely forego the former sport in favor of the latter.

Look To Record Season

Prepared for the coming annual invasion by thousands of tourists from Canada and the United States, the British Columbia Coast Steamship service of the Canadian Pacific Railway will have in service during the coming summer in Washington, British Columbia and Alaskan waters, nineteen passenger vessels, two of them brand new, the whole fleet representing a total of 58,349 gross tons, accommodation for 27,274 passengers with 2,562 berths and 1,691 staterooms and dining room accommodation for 1,729.

Two new sister vessels, the "Princess Joan" and the "Princess Elizabeth," each of 5,500 tons, will be added to the service between Vancouver and Victoria. These twin-screw oil-burning ships which recently turned in spectacular performances in their trial runs, have a total of 816 beds in 420 staterooms and on day runs will increase the fleet's carrying capacity by a total of 3,000 passengers.

Addition of these new ships will relieve the strain of increasing summer travel between Vancouver and Victoria, and enable the company to release more ships for its Seattle-Victoria-Vancouver triangle run; its west coast of Vancouver Island service; its Gulf Island excursions; Powell River, Comox and Chemainus and Fraser River passenger boats, and its popular Alaska service through the scenic Inside Passage.

EAST ABUTMENT OF PIER IS POURED

Holderoft Company Ahead of Time on Bridge Construction

After repeated efforts to effect a coffer dam at the east abutment of the new lower bridge that would block the water from running in, the Holderoft Construction Company which has the contract decided on another method and today the work is proceeding satisfactorily. Instead of trying to develop the coffer dam it was decided to fill it with cement and thus make a more solid foundation for the new pier. Seven feet of solid cement was poured in on Friday afternoon and Saturday and the structural irons were placed in as the cement was poured. Mr. Holdcroft told The Ontario Intelligencer it was impossible to stop the flow of water in the coffer dam and that filling with cement was the only course. With the new arrangements the pier will be much stronger than that proposed under the plans and specifications. A course of cement impervious to water was laid on the outside to offset the seepage.

Work will be started immediately on the coffer dam for the centre pier and it is expected no serious difficulty will be met in this work. The dredging for the west pier is nearly completed and the contract is well up to schedule. The cribbing under the bridge is nearly complete and Safe and Company, who purchased the old bridge with the contractor as well along on the dismantling process.

Today's Poem

When you were a little wee girl like me,
Did your mother say to you "one-two-and-three,"
And jump you right into your snuggly bed,
And pull the soft covers 'most up to your head?
Did your mother sit on your little red chair
And tell you the tale of the big, bold brown bear?
And did she lean over and say "Now my dear,
And kiss you and whisper "God keep you all night?"
Did she tiptoe out then and leave you so warm
And happy and cozy and safe from all harm?
I guess that she did it, and that's how you know
That a little girl loves every bit of it so!

RESOLUTIONS TO IMPERIAL MEET

Belleville Chamber of Commerce Sends Four Subjects For Debate

Belleville Chamber of Commerce has forwarded to the Federation of Chambers of Commerce of the British Empire the following resolutions for discussion, Mr. J. Elliott of this city will be Belleville's delegate at the [illegible] the resolutions follow —

RESOLVED that this Federation of Chambers of Commerce of the Empire unite in earnest advocacy of increased and freer intra-Imperial trade as a means of strengthening the unity and of securing the prosperity of the Family of Nations under the British flag, and that a memorial to this effect be forwarded to the Imperial Conference of the representatives of the self-governing Dominions, to be held in October of this year; requesting the Imperial Conference to work out some practical plan of progressive intra-Empire trade preferences looking toward the ultimate attainment of free trade within the bounds of the British Empire; thereby opening and strengthening the lines of communication so that we may have an Empire united not merely in kinship and loyalty but also in mutual confidence by the girdle of commerce and community of interest and of resources in one economic and co-operative partnership,

THAT this Federation of Chambers of Commerce of the Empire earnestly advocate the annual publication of an authoritative Imperial Year Book, for circulation throughout the Empire prepared by and at the point expense of the Governments of the constituent parts of the British Commonwealth of Nations, showing forth in clear and correlated form in a survey of wide scope, the varied and abundant products, resources, enterprises markets and opportunities of this largely self-supporting Empire to aid in developing our mutual family heritage and estate, in the paths of co-operative progress and prosperity,

THAT this Federation should strongly support and advocate the wide extension of Education for Commerce throughout the Empire, including in such an educative course (a) the study of Modern Languages (especially French and Spanish), (b) Technical and Research work in the widest sense, (c) Empire History and the elements of Political Economy and Finance (d) Qualification as Trade Commissioners and diplomatic attachees of Commerce, and all cognate subjects; so that in these days of international competition and of seeking for profitable markets, our young men may be sent out fully equipped as skilled experts in the great laboratory of Empire business.

THAT to secure employment for all who have the will to work, and to re-establish the prosperity of British trade, commerce and industry, the pressing burden of taxation should as far as possible be removed from manufacturing business and productive industries, within the Empire.

NEW ADDITION TO C. P. FLEET

"Princess Elizabeth" is Fine New Boat Added to Line

Vancouver, B.C., May 19.—Welcoming the latest adoption to the C. P. Railways fleet of 10 passenger vessels, Vancouver today congratulated the C. P. R. on its initiative and foresight in building on the west coast of Canada, a coastal S. S. service which is second to none in the world when the mayor, members of city council, consular representatives and representatives of civic labor greeted the new C. P. coastship "Prince Elizabeth" at a civic luncheon held aboard the new vessel at pier 6D the virtuous foresighted policy of Canadian Pacific has been responsible for the maintenance on the pacific coast of a S.S. service which has done much to build the province and create a feeling of pride on the part of British Columbians, declared R. D. Williams, president of the Vancouver Board of Trade proposing the toast to the Canadian Pacific Railway. Arrival of the "Princess Joan" sister ship of the new "Princess Elizabeth" at Victoria is the sixth addition to the B. C. coast fleet of the Canadian Pacific in the past five years, representing an expenditure of $5,50,000, Capt. C. D. Nerouton, manager of the Coast fleet stated. With the completion of tonnage now under construction including the 20,000 ton Empress of Japan and 40,650 ton Empress of Britain the Canadian Pacific will have steam ships aggregating 73 ships with total tonnage of 525,621 tons, placing the C. P. R. steamships eighth on the list under the British flag which means also eighth in the world. Presentation of a handsome bouquet presented by Mayor W. H. Malkin in conjunction with K. J. Burns, port superintendent and one of the commissioners of the Vancouver harbor commissioners will be made to the first bride who travels on the "Princess Elizabeth" both Mr. Burns and Mayor Malkin promised. They congratulated the C.P. on the vigorous policy which has characterized the rapid and steady growth of the B. C. Coast steamship fleet and welcomed the "Princess Elizabeth" on behalf of the port and City of Vancouver. E. P. L. Burden, general passenger agent C. P. R., also spoke. A bronze shield commemorating the first voyage of the S.S. on ship which sets a new standard of comfort for coast vessels, was presented to Capt. D. Herouiten, manager of the B. C. Coast service by H. George Hanlsolarium lounge car containing green tile bathrooms, spacious dressing rooms and a lounge compartment glazed with vita-glass to admit the ultra-violet and most beneficial sun rays.

NEW ENGLAND IS SHORT OF BAIT

PORTLAND, Me., May 19—With the swordfishing season drawing near New England fishermen face the possibility of a curtailment of the industry due to lack of bait.

Local markets here and at Gloucester and Boston, Mass., report that not a single pound of frozen bait is left and the seining season, when a supply of fresh herring will come in, is a long way off.

The effect of the famine in bait will be to force the fishing schooners to remain tied up at the wharves in idleness until the swordfishing season opens in May. Fishermen declare that this condition is rare in the annals of the industry.

From the viewpoint of the wholesale fish dealers, there is only one ray of hope. The beam trawlers and draggers, who require no bait, are obtaining excellent catches of fish and are able to keep the markets supplied.

This famine in bait is an absolute hardship for the trawl fishermen, who number all others at this port. The past winter has been a particularly cold one for them as a consequence the cold weather and lack of fish has materially reduced the earning power of the men engaged in the oldest industry on the coast.

The supply of bait here has been further depleted by several of the larger schooners from Provincetown, Mass., which have come to Portland recently for supplies of frozen bait.

Fresh alewives at Edgartown, Mass., and a small supply of fresh, small herring at Rockland and other eastern Maine ports are only supplies of bait obtainable.

GRAIN BENEFITS BY WET WEATHER

C.N.R. Crop Report States Early Wheat Above Ground 4 Inches

Winnipeg, May 19.—Cool wet weather with rainfall varying from light showers to heavy downpour has been prevalent over most of the grain growing districts of Western Canada during the past week, according to the weekly report of the agricultural branch of the Canadian National Railways. Practically all points above early sown wheat from two to four inches above ground and plants are sturdy dark green in color and the temporary roots are being replaced by an intensive permanent root system. No points report much growth for grain but cool and warm weather at any early date would not only speed grain germination but would assist the growth of wild oats and other weed seeds, thus ensuring the destruction of the first growth of noxious weeds before barley and oats are seeded.

All Manitoba has had good general rains and where already above ground varies from 50 to 75 percent. of the total sown. Coarse grain seeding in some districts is nearly completed. Showers were recorded at many points on May 5, but no damage resulted and while rains have been cloudy, cool weather has one band is in excellent condition and no points report soil drifting.

Saskatchewan had a general heavy rain, followed by local showers at many points. From one to three inches of snow fell along the Kuroki-Wadena-Clair subdivision and also along the Tisdale line. The Yorkton Tourwood subdivision reports land too wet to work and seeding operations delayed. Very poor is making good growth and stooling well.

Alberta wheat seeding is practically completed, coarse grain is showing up well and wet weather is needed to promote growth. The Peace River district has had cloudy, cool weather with plenty of moisture.

POLITICAL POT WILL BOIL IN THE MARITIMES

Provincial Election in New Brunswick is Likely Forecast

Halifax, N.s., May 19 (CP)—Not in five years have political strategists on the Atlantic frontier had opportunities to compare with the events of the coming summer. Since 1925, when two provincial general elections and one federal contest kept Maritime party fences in a constant state of construction or repair from June to November, has there been anything to equal the present indications of activity. Although this year's conquests of the polling booth will number one less than in '25, the surety of a Federal vote and of a general election on the merits of the Baxter government in New Brunswick are already having their repercussions in headquarters of fices of both parties.

From 1923 to 1928 there was no lack of political interest along the Maritime front. The 1926 Federal election the prominent turnover to the Liberal fold in Prince Edward Island in the following year, and the Rhodes administration's second victory in Nova Scotia provided an annual battle. But the past two years, with the exception of a by-election in Halifax, have consisted what amounts to a closed season on th. ballot.

Good-oye to all that. The party flags are up. Already in New Brunswick the Liberal party has chosen a new leader in preparation for the provincial contest, and in succession to A. A. Dysart, who declined to accept reanointment to the post. The new leader, Wendell P. Jones, K.C., of Woodstock, is a veteran in the field having served from 1903 to 1908 in the Legislature Assembly of his province. At one time he was solicitor-general.

Nominations for the New Brunswick election, are already streaming in.

In Nova Scotia, too, although no provincial election is impending, the Liberal opposition will assemble under new leadership at the next session of the House. After thirty-five years of public life, in the course of which he has successfully contested three elections for the Federal House and four for the Nova Scotia Assembly, Hon. William Chisholm, his health no longer robust, will leave the affairs of the party to a leader who will be named at a provincial convention in June.

Up to the present, one nomination only for the Federal contest had been made in the Maritimes, when J. M. Wallace, Mayor of Yarmouth, was endorsed to contest that constituency, at present represented by the Hon. J. L. Ralston, Minister of National Defense

A survey of the situation shows that of the twenty-nine Federal representatives from the Maritimes, eight een are of the Conservative faith, eleven professing Liberal beliefs.

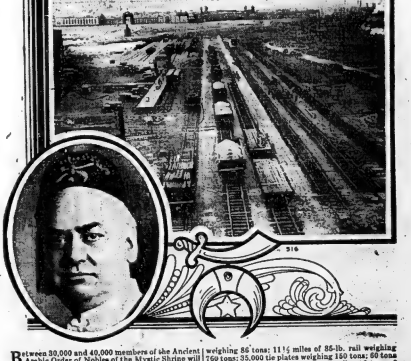
OBITUARY



JOHN HURST

John Hurst, an aged and respected resident of this city for many years, suddenly expired at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Gerald Vance, 42 Murney Street, on Saturday, Mr. Hurst was apparently in good health despite his 78 years and was about the house for the greater part of the day. In the afternoon he was suddenly stricken with a heart seizure and before medical aid could be summoned, the man had succumbed. He was born in this district 78 years ago and lived in this community practically all his life. He was a member of St. Michael's Church and leaves to mourn his loss six daughters, Mrs. Clare Hagerman, Mrs. Rose Clare, Mrs. Emma Shaw, Mrs. Harold Hoswer, all of Rochester, N.Y., Mrs. Westover, Toronto, and Mrs. Jake Mattis and Mrs. Gerald Vance, all of Belleville. There also survive one sister, Mrs. John Hagern, of this city, and two brothers, Hugh and Patrick Hurst, of Belleville.

Getting Ready for Shriners

Between 30,000 and 40,000 members of the Ancient Arabic Order of Nobles of the Mystic Shrine will meet in Toronto next June under the leadership of Eaten A. Fletcher (inset), Incoming Imperial Potentate of the Order. Hotels of the city, including the Royal York with its 1184 rooms will be insufficient to meet the demand, and the Canadian Pacific Railway is building a city of sleeping cars to accommodate some 8,000 of the Shriners. "Pee City", as it will be called, will cover 21 acres of land and construction data given out show the tremendous scope of the labors. There will be required 115,000 feet board for 30 miles of streets; 12,000 feet of water pipe; 12,900 track ties weighing 800 tons; 30 switches weighing 86 tons; 11½ miles of 56-lb. rail weighing 760 tons; 35,000 tie plates weighing 140 tons; 60 tons of rail fastenings; 30 tons of track spikes; 6 tons of track bolts; 18,000 cubic yards of ballasting for tracks; and 9,000 cubic yards of material for 8½ miles of platforms with a breadth of 14 feet. The city will be fitted with modern conveniences and a building 220 by 220 feet wide will accommodate 100 cold and hot showers. Lighting will require 76,000 watts, enough to supply 14 miles of city residential street lighting power. The electrical work will call for 25 miles of wire strung on 200 poles. Duty, Vision Two Sides of Coin of Life

Rev. Robert Hall Addresses The Guides And Brownies

GOD YET SPEAKS

Over fifty strong, Girl Guides and Brownies paraded to John Street United Church yesterday morning and heard an inspiring sermon by the Reverend Robert Hall on vision and duty. The girls, the Guides in Blue and the Brownies in neat brown outfits, presented a fine appearance as they swung into the main entrance of the church and seated themselves, six rows deep.

The Rev. Hall preached a most appropriate sermon for girls—and boys, for that matter. "There are," he said, "two indispensable requirements of character-building. These are vision and duty. Sir Robert Baden-Powell, chief executive of the boy scouts and Lady Baden-Powell, head of the Girl Guides, have both declared the principal end of the movement is the training of character."

The speaker went on to show that character in life is a coin. It has two sides. On one side is duty and on the other vision. "Vision and duty," he said. "What great words! Vision is the challenge of the work to do, duty is the way to do it. God has not stopped speaking to his children (as he spoke to Samuel in the Temple, calling him three times in one night). You, too, have your mission, what you are going to be when you grow up. It may be a doctor, it may be an engineer, or the manager of a bank. A girl may vision herself a nurse, a teacher, a stenographer.

"The crowning vision of all, however, is that of being a mother. Every one of us has our visions. Did you not know that God was calling you in this vision?"

"The only way," the speaker pointed out, "in which we can prepare ourselves to do big things for God is to learn how to do the little things first. It is not a simple thing," he said, "to grow up into the sort of character God wants in all His children."

"Developing fine character is a painstaking business. Right now, at home and at school you are gathering the material that will make the man of man and woman that you will be in later life. Vision and duty must go hand in hand. We must keep in touch with God. Jesus is the guide for every one of us, young and old.

Fashionably Speaking

DEAR READERS—It is not going to be so difficult this year to select shoes daintily enough for wear with one's filmy summer frocks. The trouble will be that we won't want to stop buying them and there will be grave danger of the whole family having to move out of the old homestead to make room for our shoes! Yes, the shoes are so appealing this year, on one special point, that we will have to sternly repress our extravagant feelings.

That one point about shoes that proves so alluring this year is that they have taken the colour. Not just good old beiges, and grays that have brightened up the sombre standbys, black and brown, but real colours, rain bow hues, pastel shades, anything you want. The secret of course, is that shoes will be tinted. Last winter crepe de chine and even satin dance shoes blossomed out in the same shades as the dresses with which they were worn. This made the dance floor a very flow er garden for serviceable though they may be, black satin pumps detract from the glory of your pretty evening dress.

Linen is the chief fabric for summer shoes, and you can have it in the natural shade, or have the shoes tinted to match your costumes. You can have pali blue, and green, and many shades to match the varying hues of your summertime dresses. Can't you see the endless possibilities of such an arrangement? It is excellent fun isn't it?

Then there are the basket weave shoes, so light and comfortable for hot summer days and scorching pavements. They have improved the design so that the shoes don't look so floppy as last year's did. But every one who wore them agreed that they were the best thing for summer wear.

Then there are all kinds of fascinating models in kid in the rose beige and similar shades. They are charming this year in pumps, in strap models and in semi-dress style.

Yes, it's going to be a hard matter to resist the beauty of the new footwear.

Fashionably yours,
LUCILLE

Speaking Frankly

By Lucille

"Don't think I want to spell things for you, old man, I know the woman, that's all." John spoke sweetly.

Bob turned on him, his face flushed, his eyes blazing.

"Oh, no, you aren't trying to spell things, not much. You don't expect me to believe all the rot you've told me, that I tell you she loves me." He was in a quarrelsome mood, angry and excited.

John interrupted him with a gesture of impatience.

"Bobby, don't be a fool, it's your money she's after. If she loved you she wouldn't spoil your career. Don't run headlong into a thing like this, wait a bit, the waiting won't hurt either of you."

"Who says she'll ruin my career? She's an inspiration, I tell you." Bob answered angrily.

"What makes you think she doesn't love me, think I'm too young? Well she's united down older men for me, that's why I'm asking you to help me. That's why you're interfering, used to be sweet on her yourself. Well it won't do any good. She's going to marry me, that speaks for itself, doesn't it?"

John rose and walked to the window. Bob's last remark made him realize what a fool he had been. Bob was young, had his life before him and John determined to save that young life from ruin at any cost. If he could listen to reason, then there were other ways of convincing him. He could imagine a kid like Bob, the days when he had been losing indulged to beg for her caresses. The thought sickened him. He remembered the days when he had lavished his own affections and money on her until he discovered that the prize were not worth the bidder.

Bob, angered by his silence, turned on him in fury.

"I'm not going to say to that. Well you might as well hold your tongue for all the good it'll do. We are going to be married in two weeks and nobody can stop us, you or anybody else, get that?"

John looked at him in silence, turning over in his mind various plans by which Bob could be jolted out of his present dangerous pace. He was in the race with spurs and no bridle and there was sure to be a smash. A kid Bob would not stand for a break the colt. Suddenly he hit upon a plan.

"Oh, well, if you will you will and there's nothing more to be said, I suppose." he grunted.

John shrugged his shoulders and glancing at his watch, walked toward the door.

"It's an ideal night for a call, what about having supper on board the Bluebird after the concert, Bob?"

"Going anything special tonight?" John asked, glancing back at him.

"Nothing particular unless Nanon gets back, she's been out of town for three days."

"Oh, very well, come along if you like, I'll be on board by eight."

Bob turned his back on them and went to Belleville still. Rev. Dr. E. N. Baker, Principal Emeritus of Albert College, delivered an inspiring message to a large congregation last night.

Personals

Mr. J. R. Coffey, of Louisville, Kentucky, arrived on the midnight train last night, having been called to the bedside of his father, who is critically ill at the Belleville Hospital.

Mr. C. V. Bixler, of Salina, Ont., arrived today to see Mr. H. M. Coffey, who is critically ill at the Belleville Hospital. Mr. Bixler is an old Frankfort, Kentucky, friend of the family.

Mrs. Frank Moore, 63 Crier St., is seriously ill in the General Hospital.

Mr. Charles Shortt of Toronto University will be the guest of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Shortt for a few days.

Mr. F. Carbutt of Toronto was the guest of relatives in the city over the week end.

At the conclusion of the evening service in Bridge Street United church last night, John Dexlon, popular young Belleville singer rendered a sacred recital. Mr. Deacon sang with that evenness of tone and with such reflecting great credit on his New York teachers. He rendered three particularly pleasing numbers, "Ho! Ho Mr." Dunn and "Sing the Waters of Babylon" (Eville) and "Thanks be to God" (Dickson). All three were given in that soft manner which stamps Mr. Deacon as an opera star in th ermaking. He is spending a few days at his home on Dundas street before he will leave for Toronto where he will continue his studies in the Toronto Conservatory. He will return to New York during the past season with teacher, of national repute and a great career is promised for the young Belleville artist.

WEDDINGS

SINFIELD—ELLIOTT

A quiet wedding took place at eight o'clock Saturday evening at the Baptist Parsonage of Rev. May Mikel and Cecil Allan Sinfield, Rev. Hilliard Cress officiating. They were attended by Mr. Royal Sinfield and Miss Grace May. After the ceremony they repaired to the home of the bride, where a delicious supper was served. Afterwards the happy couple left on a motor trip to Palmyra, New York State. On their return they will reside at 236 Moira street.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

FLAMING YOUNG LOVE

by

Ethel Willis Hewitt

Copyright, 1930, International Features Service, Inc

Bob groaned on his couch and hated himself for a fool he had been.

She was one of those women who so deeply arouse passion in a man that he is apt to be swept into the belief that his feeling for her includes love. It was at this stage Bob had arrived. John had experienced it, other men had no doubt gone through it. It lowered a man's ideal of love, it shattered his illusions to such an extent that he became all turned about and was apt to loose his bearings.

Still cost what it might he had brought her here for one purpose. Bob might arrive at any moment. He stretched out his arm and drew her to him. It sickened him to think how he had pleaded for his embrace, when Bob, poor fool, thought she belonged to him.

A sigh of content she sank in his arms. John remembered of old how the softness of her seemed to grow more and become a part of him. Threaded through the disgust he felt at her touch ran the thought of Bob, the fire of his youth whipped into fury by the spur of her embrace. Love like that, if Bob called it love, would burn up everything worthwhile in his young life.

John felt her lips on his cheek, then on his mouth, kissing him hotly for a moment, on his lightly. Suddenly he caught her in his arms and enacted the love scene which he had witnessed him at her nearness. He felt her slim hands on his face, her soft, warm breath pressed close to him. Bob's face floated hazily before him.

Suddenly a voice broke the stillness.

"So—that's the kind of dog you are?"

John was on his feet in an instant. Nanon stared with wide questioning eyes at the infuriated Bob who addressed himself to John.

"You snake, you low down cad," he hissed through clenched teeth, striking him a blow full across the face.

Nanon was on her feet in a flash, she stood silent, watching with bated breath.

John caught Bob by the shoulders.

"Look here, old man," he began.

But Bob were toughened. Bob, thrusting his fist forward, striking John a tremendous blow under the jaw that sent him reeling. His head hit the rail as he fell. For a moment he felt dazed, a thin trickle of blood was running down his face. Reaching for his handkerchief he wiped it away and pulled himself, up to a sitting position.

Bob glared at him savagely, Nanon was right, he growled, turning to Nanon.

In an instant her arms were around him.

It was all an ugly trick to separate us darling. Oh I'm so glad you came, please, please take me home." Her voice was low and pleading.

John watched them, it was the last stretch, would Bob come through like a thoroughbred.

For a moment Bobby stood silent his young face white and drawn, his eyes given the look of utter misery of thwarted youth. He met John's gaze with a defiant look, then looking down at Nanon, an expression of utter contempt swept over his face, and with a rough gesture he flung her arms away.

"Don't touch me again, I'm through." His voice was hoarse and his dark eyes blazing.

"I've heard of your kind before. Well you can do your gold digging in other fields. His tone was final, leaving no room for argument.

Silently he passed Nanon and rang the electric bell just inside the cabin door.

Nanon ran to him, frantic. "What are you going to do Bobby?" she asked in a frightened voice.

He shook her hand from his arm with a savage gesture. The steward appeared in answer to the bell.

"Clayton, call a cab for Miss Bruin, she'll be waiting in the cabin." He turned abruptly and left her.

Nanon started after him, then hesitated, then without looking at John, turned and followed Clayton into the cabin.

John rose unsteadily to his feet and leaned against the deck rail. He put his hand to his head, there was a sharp pain in his temple and he felt a bit giddy, but he smiled. That was a small matter since the colt had come through.

Fashion Flashes

By Alice Alden

Ready for Red is the color signal for the new season. Many costumes combine white and red in a colorful way as for example a frock of white georgette with a spray of red tulle flowers on the shoulder lines more red in the form of a sash made of three layers of matching red tulle.

The Bugle Blows to announce the return of the bugle bead. A flock of white georgette is entirely beaded with small crystal bugles that hang loose and has a matching cape similarly treated.

Leaves are Growing in importance as trimmings for hats and are cleverly used. A hat of black horsehair, very wide of brim and shallow of crown has a wreath of crystal leaves while a white hair hat has a garland of crystal leaves tinted green.

The bag is Full of interest and importance this season. Black and White is much used for day bags as is exemplified by a black calf bag trimmed with white kid and decorated with a frame of insulated ivory and onyx. The clasp is of ivory and silver.

GALLANT FOX WINNER DERBY

Beats Gallant Knight by Two Lengths—Sands Equals Murphy's Record

LOUISVILLE, May 19. — Gallant Fox won the Kentucky Derby at packed Churchill Downs, here Saturday, as he did the Preakness Stakes a week ago —only more easily.

His name, great in racing, now can be coupled with Sir Barton as the only horse to score the famous double of these two ancient and honorable fixtures.

He won galloping by two lengths and this popular favorite paid $4.36 on almost 7 to 5; $3.76 a place, and, $3.42 third. He ran the mile and a quarter over a track in fine condition, but a shade dull from the grizzle of rain, in 2.07 3-5.

Gallant Knight carried the colors of B. B. Jones into second place. He made a brave fight and beat O. W. Foreman's Ned O., son of Campfire, by a length. He paid $14.60 and $8.78 third. Ned O., one of the outsiders rewarded his followers by paying $.50.14 third, or better than 4 to 1.

William Ziegler's Gone Away was fourth, earning the consolation award of $1,000, while the others, including Crack Brigade and Tannery, the pride of Kentucky and the Middle West, came trailing home just sweepings for the moment, in the dustpan of broken hope.

CHALLENGE ISSUED BY FOOTBALL TEAM

Kingston United have invited Belleville Foosball Club for an exhibition game at Kingston next Saturday, May 24th.

The local players are busy getting into shape on the Pine street grounds and practice nights are Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays.

Most of last year's team are available, namely, Blaker, Taylor, Bellanger Pukin, Colcough, Howard, Morridge, Knott, Kennedy.

New players will be welcomed as the team need a left half and left wing player.

CLEMAN WINNER TITULAR WALK

Toronto Man First by Large Margin, Breaking Record

New York, May 19—Henry Cleman of Toronto won the national A.A.U. 50,000 metres walking championship Sunday and broke the national record for the distance.

Cleman, covering the distance in four hours 47 minutes 46 seconds, shaved more than four minutes off the record of 4.52.06 set at Philadelphia last year by Mack Weiss of the Newark A.C. Weiss was entered in today's event, but a leg cramp forced him to drop out after 28 miles.

Cleman finished approximately a mile and a half ahead of Harry L. Clark of Boston, whose time was 5.01.14.

The next eight finishers, with their times, were:

3—S. J. Goodsell, Toronto 5.15.26.

4—Anthony K. Podbielski, unattached 5.16.26.

5—Harris Davis, 92nd Street Y.M.H. A. 5.19.21.

The team championship went to the Central Y.M.C.A. Walkers' Club of Toronto, of which all the Canadian entered are members.

The course was five miles around Central Park.

NEWLYWEDS ARE GIVEN WELCOME

On May, the seventh the Mallowy friends of Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Ashley met at their home at Madoc Junction and spent a very pleasant evening with them. They were then presented with a beautiful mantel clock and candle sticks.

Miss Danford read the following address:—

"Dear Mr. and Mrs. Ashley—

"A few of your friends and neighbours have gathered this evening, to partake of the joy and happiness of your home and to welcome to our midst the partner of your joys and sorrows. Mr. Ashley we have known you for long years as a neighbour and friend and have ever found you loyal warm hearted and true. In your endeavors to do unto others as you would that they should do unto you, you have lived up to the golden rule and set an example well worthy of imitation. Mrs. Ashley we had you welcome to Madoc Junction. Our hearts and homes we throw open to you. We wish for you a happy and prosperous voyage on the matrimonial sea and in token of our sincerity we ask you to accept these gifts. May they like the sun dial of old, record only sunny hours.

Snapping the Clubhead Into THE BALL.

The snap of the wrist sends the ball on its way. This calls for little effort on the part of the golfer who knows how to do it properly. When the club reaches a point opposite the knee the left hand appears to stop altogether, or rather sets itself for the punch. The right hand then comes through with lightning like rapidity.

Considerably more power can be gained this way and as a rule better direction can be obtained as the clubhead is not likely to wander off the line.

NATIONALS WILL START PRACTICE

Tuesday Evening to see First Practice by Ball Team

Letter late than never. The National Ball team under the management of Walter Grove will take its field tomorrow night for the first practice of the season. The league will officially open a week from today when Kingston will be the visitors. The two teams will play a series of games for the championship of the league and the right to enter the Provincial playdowns. The manager wishes it understood that the Nationals are not a select organization and every ball player is wanted. The practice tomorrow night is wide open and an invitation is extended to all to join up. There is splendid material for a ball team in the city and it is expected that Kingston and Belleville will furnish the fans of the two cities with high class ball this summer.

CALLS WRITING LAW OF LIFE

Bishop Vaughan at Emmanuel Church Speaks on Redemption

"Writing is a law of life and of our existence," declared Bishop Vaughan, head of the R. E. Church in England who is on a tour of the Canadian Reformed Churches, speaking last night at Emmanuel Church, Belleville. "We write because we cannot help ourselves. God writes on everything He has made, the world about, the flowers, trees, leaves, all are covered with the handwriting of God. Botanists and geologists read the story of life in nature and the progress of the plan of God. God's written record of time's timeless march endures. God wrote His name on the conscience of the first man. Then all the men. He wrote on the tables of Sinai, ever since the moral law has been dotting the I's and crossing the T's for man. God has written on every organ of the human body. God writes the character of Jesus Christ on the hearts of the people.

"Because we are made in the image of God," he went on, "we have to be writers. Every act is recorded, even the footsteps are prints. Do not ask me if there is a final judgment day or ask me to explain it. The gramophone record can preserve for hundreds of years the human voice, why there can God remember? We write our own story, we paint our own character. The writing cannot be revised."

The Bishop chose as his text the words of Pilate "What I have written I have written," and he pointed to pardon in "Blotting out the handwriting of ordinances which was against us, taking it out of the way, nailing it to the cross." Pilate, he said, would be remembered though he had a farway post, he will live in the minds of humanity beyond the greatest rulers of Rome because he met Christ face to face, and because he wrote what he did not believe and what he could not change. Pilate is a type of present day man, educated, wide in outlook, the man who makes abiding decisions of unalterable importance.

Pilate's was a confession of human weakness. He had the inscription written in Greek, the language of culture, idealism, in Latin, the language of law and material power, and Hebrew, the language of organized religion and ritual. All these fail.

Against this view is the view of redemption which blots out the transgression as heat warmed and blotted out the inscription on the waxen tablet.

Rev. George Marshall, Rector, assisted in the service.

COUNTRY CLUB OPENING MAY 26

Dubs and Duffers Match Planned For Course on MONDAY

Monday, May 26th, will be a gala day at the Bay of Quinte Country Club when the annual field day will be held at the club. A number of sporting events have been arranged, the most interesting of which will be the "Dubs and Duffers" match, for which tournament it is expected there will be a number of entries. This match was the most popular of all last year and there are many more to turn out in great numbers this season. If the weather permits, dinghy racing will also be seen at the club, and tennis will hold an important position on the bill.

LARRY GAINS WON DECISION IN ITALY

LUCCA, Italy, May 19.—CP—Larry Gains, Canadian negro heavyweight boxer, last night won a decision over Roberto Roberti, Italian heavyweight champion in a ten round bout here. Gains won nine rounds with the tenth ending in a tie.

Ready-made Medicine—You need no physician for ordinary ills when you have at hand a bottle of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. For coughs, colds, sore throat, bronchial troubles it is invaluable; for scalds, burns, bruises, sprains it is unsurpassed, while for cuts, sores and the like it is unquestionable healer. It needs no testimonial other than the use, and that will satisfy anyone as to its effectiveness.

MOHAWKS MARK ANNIVERSARY

from the reservation, the remaining descendants of the tribe and a score of white persons offered their thanks to Deity for a long rein of peace and happiness under the British flag.

It was an historic occasion and members of the tribe came from far and near to celebrate the event. They chanted their hymns and offered prayers in the native Mohawk tongue. They took Communion from the Rite of Holy Service which was presented to the tribe by Queen Anne and heard an inspiring address from Rural Dean W. W. Craig, Rector of St. George's, Kingston.

History states that the little hardy band of Mohawks who paddled up the Quinte arranged their craft in the form of an altar on the shore and in their sincere fashion, prayed to the gods for a prosperous future.

There was no pomp associated with yesterday's service. There was no colour or brilliancy which one might expect to find at an event of the nature.

They were gentle folk, these people, educated in Canadian schools, operating prosperous farms and having all the characteristics which bespeak of loyal Canadian citizens. They are proud of their ancestors who hewed the forests and explored the rivers, making possible the privileges and enjoyments which are now theirs.

Prayers in Mohawk

Solomon Brant, one of the chiefs at the Reservation, lead the natives in Mohawk hymns and prayers. Rev. Herbert Pringle, Rector of the church and Rural Dean Craig conducted the service.

Dean Craig spoke of the history associated with the Mohawks and remarked on their act in arranging the canoes on the shores for worship. He told of the great works of Pauline Johnson, the eminent Italian poetess. He described her birthplace on Stanley Park, Vancouver, on the picturesque Pacific slopes.

He took as his subject, "Christ," painting the many and varied pictures portrayed of Him. "There is glory and beauty in every picture, but once are quite so significant as that of the 9th chapter of St. John which shows Him as a healer of a blind man. This was a picture of judgment," he observed, "the Disciples were filled with bewilderment, the Scribes and the Pharisees with horror, while the parents were afraid. "Religion as life, moves as a pendulum, the rhythm indicating the different moods of those who attend. Sometimes we don't event try and struggle, we just take it for granted that life will come out alright. He will not assist the idle man or woman," warned Dean Craig. "He knows our weaknesses and our sins but he is merciful and sensitive, but there is no escape from his judgment."

Members of the tribe paid a visit to the Memorial erected last year, at the conclusion of the regular church service.

The trans-Atlantic speed record between the ports of Liverpool and Saint John, was broken recently by the arrival at the latter port of the Canadian Pacific liner Duchess of York, after a crossing from Liverpool which took six days, 21 hours, 57 minutes. Besides conforming to local shipping men this is the first time in the history of the port that a crossing has been made in under seven days.

Twelve thousand pounds of Quebec maple sugar and syrup were handled daily during the later part of April by the Canadian Pacific Express Company to points overseas, the Prairie Provinces and Ottawa, constituting what is claimed to be a record movement of this dainty. Quebec consumers' demand for this product arises on the part of many Canadians who are a practice of shipping it to relatives and friends in Old Country and the west of Canada.

Close on six million dollars were spent on New Brunswick roads during 1929, being reconstruction of 231 miles of main trunk highways and 1138 miles of secondary roads. This is regarded as the most successful year since the highway constitution, improvement and maintenance was undertaken in the Province.

Snapped in Hyde Park, London, England, recently, Hon. Barney Howard, little son of Lord Strathcona and Mount Royal, the great Canadian who was one of the founders of the Canadian Pacific Railway, was photographed feeding his cousin, the small daughter of the Hon. Mrs. Norton Griffiths. Both children are living Nuka with the great grandfather of the latter, a major events in the history of Canada was in his early days.

Organized a few years ago by a group of farmers' wives with Mrs. Mary Stephens, of Asquith, Sask., as president, the Saskatchewan Poultry Pool handles about 75 per cent. of the eggs and poultry produced in the province. Last year the pool turned over 24,840,184 eggs, valued at $540,000; 822,762 pounds of dressed poultry valued at $184,000, and 28,561 pounds of live poultry at $6,000. The total turnover of $730,000 for the year.

After 15 years of seed planting, the experimental work of the Canadian Government Department of Agriculture has developed sixteen varieties of apple trees suited to the climatic conditions of the Prairie Provinces, it is stated. Of these seven have been graded "very good" and nine "good."

The first "improved Sire Area" in Manitoba has been established in the municipality of Roland, according to the announcement made by Albert Prefontaine, Minister of Agriculture in the province. Under this scheme all bulls, boars and rams kept for breeding and approved before owners are permitted to retain them for service in the Area.

Over $82,000,000 have been invested in manufacturing enterprises in the province of Alberta and they are paying about $14,000,000 yearly in salaries and wages to over 11,000 employees. A similar rapid development in industrialism in the sister provinces of Manitoba and Saskatchewan is to be noted. Combined, the three provinces have now a yearly output of manufactured goods in the neighborhood of $325,000,000.

Every obscurity to world power is the record of Japan within the past fifty years, says Dr. Nasaaki Kanai, Tokio University professor and chairman of the Japanese National Committee on World Power congress, here on a tour of Canada. He told the Rotarians and a passenger aboard the Empress of Asia, he attributed the growth of his country to her progress in education.

The Provincial Bowling team which has played 16 matches in Los Angeles in the last two months, lost the first and winning eleven of the games, trailed for England aboard the Duchess of York recently. They came out to win the American bowling Trophy, but the five games lost were in that event, and they must wait next year for another attempt.

Seventeen European races contributed songs, folk-lore and handicraft work while inhabitants of Labrador, the Arctic Circle, the Maritimes, Pacific Coast, and Indians furnished their quota toward the brilliant success of the Great West Folk Dance, Folk Song and Handicraft Festival held at Calgary, March 19-22. The Provincial Premiers of the provinces, the Lieut.-Governor and D. C. Coleman, vice-president Western Lines, and J. M. Gibbon, General Publicity Agent, representing the Canadian Pacific Railway, gave inspirational addresses in this effort to "broaden, stabilize and elevate Canada's national consciousness."

Recuperation of Europe, from financial losses of the war, and the return of European nations to active and formidable competition in world's production has made it more and more essential for Canada and other countries to develop the vast potential markets of the "Orient," said John Deutcher, publisher of the New York Journal of Commerce, who sailed from Vancouver recently aboard S.S. Empress of Asia for a tour of China and Japan.

Widespread interest aroused in the United States as well as Canada by the radio broadcasting broadcast by the Canadian Pacific Railway of the ceremonies attending its own transcontinental network of radio broadcasting stations from the railway and the National Broadcasting Company of New York, under which Canadian Pacific will supply 60 minutes weekly stations with a series of Canadian programmes made in Canada by Canadian talent, is evidenced by the fact that a single broadcast by this extension which commenced on May 4th.

Dairying was a profitable industry in the three prairie provinces of Canada last year, when its sales totalled $57,629,000. In eleven of the Canadian cities with populations the large exhibitions held throughout the country last year these Lires provinces were awarded eighty per cent. of all first prizes in butter and 85 per cent. of all prizes, over half of which went to Manitoba.

According to a recent compilation made by the Canadian Government Bureau of Statistics, the average value of the occupied farms in the of Canada, last year, including both improved and unimproved land, as well as the value of farm houses, barns, stables and other farm buildings was placed at $17 per acre for the year 1929.

There is at present in Great Britain a decided awakening of interest in the Canadian universities," said Dr. Cyril Norwood, headmaster of Harrow, one of the most famous of English public schools and fellow Master of Pembroke. Dr. Norwood is chairman of the delegation of British educationists here on a tour of inspection of ten Canadian universities. He arrived at Saint John recently aboard S.S. Duchess of Bedford.

Canada's first ranking tennis star, Dr. Gar Wright, figures into shooting, shipboard batting and another fine hunting is but one of his sport to keep a tennis player in trim. Dr. Wright, who has recently aboard S.S. Empress of Canada, Yokohama bound, is in great shape for the forthcoming Davis Cup matches.

Retirement of C. E. McPherson, assistant general traffic manager Western Lines, Canadian Pacific Railway, after more than 50 years of railway service, and promotion of Walter Fitzgerald, as his successor, from coast to coast of Canada, after more than 40 years of railway service, and promotion to the position of assistant general manager, R. G. McMillan to be assistant passenger traffic manager, eastern lines, with headquarters at Winnipeg; E. F. Sturdee, assistant passenger traffic manager, and H. R. Mathewson, general passenger agent, Winnipeg; and George R. Carter, assistant general passenger agent, Regina.

The annual production of honey in Canada is about thirty million pounds. While a great deal of honey is used in the home, the principal commercial users are confectioners, bakers and distillers.

At the World's Poultry Congress to be held at the Crystal Palace near London in July, a feature of the Canadian exhibit will be a model of the fifteen acre Wrigley ranch at High River, Alberta. It will occupy 100 square feet of space and will be fitted with electric appliances and lighting that will show the ranch in a novel and attractive way.

OBITUARY

MRS. JAMES HOWATSON

In the passing to her great reward of Mrs. James Howatson, (Caroline Hollingsworth) Belleville lady loses one who was a loving sister, an interested and thoughtful relative to an extensive kinship. She belonged to one of the best and oldest families in this district, her ancestors being born of the early settlers from England, who made their homes in the New England States, later coming to our Bay of Quinte shores.

A devoted wife to a suffering husband who left her early widowed, she came home to Bay View Farm and helped cheer the declining years of her mother, Mrs. Asa Wallbridge, also taking an enthusiastic interest in the church and community life as a neighborhood, especially in the Women's Missionary Society of which she was a valued officer until illness forced her to retire.

As a friend said, "She was the life of any company which was graced by her presence."

Left to mourn in the home are one sister, Miss Bessie Wallbridge, and a brother, Mr. Jay Anderson.

WILLIAM ARTHUR VANALLEN

William Arthur VanAllen, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest VanAllen 43 Station Street, died at his home yesterday. Burial will be made this afternoon to the 8th Concession of Thurlow.

JOHN JOSEPH McAVOY

Jack Miner and the Birds

and Some Things I Know About Nature

by

Jack Miner Himself

"COPYRIGHT AND FOR SALE IN BOOK FORM AT ALL BOOK STORES"

He insisted that this old ground-hog, as we call them, had been setting close all morning and now, just at the heat of the day, the eggs had become too warm and sweaty; the mother had just gotten off to air them as Mr. Crow came flying over, and that crow did smell the eggs.

I put up such an argument it apparently got on brother's nerves. He said, "Just you wait a minute." and he stepped out into the field and picked up a flat stone about eight inches in diameter, putting it on the stump just above the nest. Then he took a small handful of punk and placed it firmly on the stone. As the day was extremely hot it only required the least touch of a match and he had a smudge started; and sure enough, as the smoke rose in the air it fooled the crow exactly as the crow was when he turned so suddenly, "Now," said brother, "are you satisfied?" and he took the stone, with the punk on it, away from the fence and put the fire out. But still we have no proof that the crow smelled the eggs. Yet we were absolutely sure that he could not, and did not, see them until after he dropped off the fence into the woods.

Since that I have time and again noticed crows and bronzy grackles locate birds' eggs where I know they cannot see them.

But I think the turkey buzzard furnishes us the most convincing proof of birds using their nostrils to locate their food, for we actually know that they will come for miles and miles, not to carrion, but to freshly killed beef.

Now here is a fact for you to analyze: One Sunday morning last June I got up at the week-day hour and took a stroll back to the north pond. For some unaccountable reason I forgot to take feed to the family of young pet ducks that we'd about four weeks old. When I arrived they all came scudding over the water to me. I had no feed so I picked up a little coarse earth and threw it out into the pond, and all went after it; as they rushed out I ran away and came by a roundabout way, back to the house, first coming about four hundred feet across newly cultivated earth where I had threw out six feet apart; then I came out on the ball-ground and made a crook ed path for fully three hundred feet in the grey trash. As I neared the house I stopped for a few minutes looking at the climbing roses and listening to the birds, when I heard young ducks peeping. Looking up, behold you! here were the little pets following the same trail across the ball park. The sun was just high enough for me to see the path very plainly in the dew, and they toddlers did not vary a foot, but came, in single file, right up within twenty feet before they saw me. I then got some food and then followed me back to their old stepmother who was wailing in her coop for them. I then went and found that these little hungry pets had knocked dust in my tracks all through the cultivated grove. In other words, they had followed every step of my trail to where they overtook me.

On another occasion I had two young pet silver pheasants, and in March, 1908, I went into the little park and forgot to shut the gate; them, instead of coming back through it I jumped over the brick wall to the ert. north and went right on to my work which was at the time laying down tile at the extreme north side of the farm, fully three-quarters of a mile from the park. In going there I had to pass through thirty acres of woods, where I visited three weasel traps; therefore I did not go in a straight course. I was left home about seven o'clock. At nine, as I was working with my head down, I heard familiar deep water at the channel bank. She noised hooting up. Here were my two pet silver pheasants pecking the earth beside me. They stayed until eleven thirty, then both followed me back home just like two puppies, for their wings were pinioned and they could not fly four feet, and when could, as this was done when they were very small. They were about ten months old. There was not a bit of deer on the ground and the weather was quite warm.

The Only Thing That Helps Her Lame Back

Ontario Lady Uses Dodd's Kidney Pills

Mrs. J. S. Ford Speaks Very Highly of Canada's Foremost Kidney Remedy —Dodd's Kidney Pills

Enterprise, Ont., May 19 (Special)—"Anytime I get a Lame Back I turn to Dodd's Kidney Pills and they soon do the work," writes Mrs. John S. Reid, well-known and highly respected resident of this place. "I have used them for years. As I occasionally take a Lame Back. They never fail to do the work."

With the winter months approaching comes colds and chills, which double the work of the Kidneys. Often the results are serious, for, if the Kidneys weaken, harmful uric acid and other poisons are allowed to escape. Backache, dizziness and urinary disorders should not be neglected. Use Dodd's Kidney Pills to stimulate Kidney activity. Their treatment relieves you of discomfort, and wards off Rheumatism, Lumbago and Sciatica. An occasional course of Dodd's Kidney Pills will prevent Kidney disor-

INDIAN GIRL AS RESCUER

Wallaceburg, May 17—A heroic rescue from drowning by a little 9-year old Indian girl on Walpole Island, last week-end has just come to light.

While playing on the dock, little Joan McPherson, 3, daughter of Mrs. Harriet McPherson, a school teacher on the Indian reserve, fell into the water. Her sister, Mavis, 9, ran to the rescue, but brought her to the dock, where she was found to be but little worse for her experience.

Drives Asthma Like Magic.

The immediate help from Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Asthma Remedy seems like magic. Nevertheless it is only a natural remedy used in a natural way. The smoke or vapor, reaching the most remote passage of the affected lubes, brushes aside the trouble and opens a way for fresh air to enter. It is sold by dealers throughout the land.

RADIO FANS CORNER

Oh, oh what a flop the reception last night turned out to be. Static grocery especially around nine-thirty until then it wasn't too bad, but there was plenty of room for improvement.

A reader of this corner writes in that 'Anyone wishing something real good to begin the day with will be well repaid if they tune in on Buffalo or Chicago stations seven a.m. each morning for Paul Rader's Breakfast Brigade. It is a good stimulant for the the whole day and worth while listening to". So try this program on your radio, fans.

During the Beaconlights program tonight, Robert L. Ripley tells odd interesting facts drawn from the field of sport and music such as how the famous eastern man heard musical sounds; how Babe Ruth knocked 125 home run in one day; how Ty Cobb broke baseball records every day for more than a year. Over WEAF at 6.30 E.S.T.

'Great excitement in Thompkins Corners tonight the Mayor has called a mass meeting to discuss the unemployment situation in that village and it should be good. WJZ at 7 o'clock E.S.T.

On the program of the A and P Gypsies tonight they turn to the sea in a medley of nautical songs which will come to us over station WEAF at 7.30.

Guy Lombardo and his Royal Canadians present a program of popular music tonight during the Panatela program to be heard at 9 over WABC Ben Alley, tenor, and Helen Nugent contralto, will also contribute two duets.

New program on the air last night did you hear it fans? Smoke and Ashes was the title and it was all about the coal business. That were working in a restaurant and how one acquired some stock that bids fair to turn out the true article. If I'm not mistaken they are on the air again Wednesday night but as to the time I couldn't say.

Jesse Crawford poet of the organ is heard in an organ recital tonight heard over WABC at 9.30. Leading Broadway productions will form the basis of his program.

TWENTY FLIERS LEAP FROM SAME PLANE

Roosevelt Field, L.I., May 19.—A world's record for massed parachute jumping was established at this field Sunday afternoon, when twenty jumpers left the cabin and wing of a trimotored Curtiss Condor, while 5,000 persons watched. The jumpers left the machine so fast that they were all in the air together. Armand Lisotte, a news reel photographer, one of those who jumped, kept his camera going as the others shot downward from the speeding machine. When all but one had jumped Lisotte, still clutching his camera, went over the side of the cabin in which he had been riding and pulled the rip cord. Settling comfortably under the silken umbrella, he again started making pictures as he floated downward.

LITTLE BENNY'S NOTE BOOK

2 ladies came to see me this afternoon, being Mrs. Jarden and Mrs. Harper, looking kind of alike on account of both having more than one chin, and they were sitting in the front room tawking about different subjecks such as differnt people being good bridge players and others only thinking they was, and ma and pa said that was a very irritating article P. Willis Hinkle had in the paper last nite about imagination being the most important thing in life and not just plain cold facks, did you reed it.

Yes indeed, I would'nt miss a P. Willis Hinkle article for anything. Mrs. Jarden sed, and Mrs. Harper sed, Neither would I, and he's quite rite the things we imagine are the strongest influents in our life and thats not imagination either.

Giving me a ideer, and I took the cover off of the piano without anybody noticing me, and I went out in the hall and took off my shoes and stockings and put the piano cover around the rest of me and came back in with nothing showing but my bare feet, saying, Look, ma, I haven't got anything on but this piano cover.

Ma and the 2 older ladies quick looking up shocked, ma saying, O my goodness, O my piano cover, O Benny I arent you ashamed, how dare you do such a thing, and you such a modest boy, I'm serprised what must these ladies think of you?

How imbarrassing, hee hee, Mrs. Jarden, sed, and Mrs. Harper sed, I must say I wouldent of blieved it of Benny, I'm quite shocked.

Well anyways I'm just the same as I was born under this piano cover only I have now got som going to take it off I sed.

Which I started to do ma yelling, Benny, dont you dare, and the other 2 ladies screeched and I threw the piano cover off me and there I was in my usule outdoors and stock ings, There you are, that proves about imagination.

Making the other 2 ladies laff like anything, probbly being a lucky thing for me on account of ma having to laff too to be fashionable.

FARMERS' NOMINATION

Regina, May 19.—J. M. Thomas, principal of the Melville High School, was on Saturday nominated candidate for the Farmers' Political Association in the Melville Riding against Hon. W. R. Motherwell, Minister of Agriculture.

Is the Robot Fooling YOU?

The Paris correspondent of VARIETY reports:

"The music-wise Continentals object violently to mechanical music (in the theatre)."

WHAT, then, of Europeans, those who have not the American appreciation of the mechanical? Why, the French Government suppressed the mechanical music-roll and mechanical piano-player, the Victrola? Germany, perhaps?

Well, the 2,000,000 theatre patrons have rejected that characterization by their votes. Their answer is the overwhelming success of Canada's Real Music, not Canned Music mechanically, in the theatres.

If you value the Art of Music, you should join the Federation and help maintain the best type of music at the lowest cost to the user.

Their many friends who had gathered presented them with a purse of money, a fountain pen and a pipe. An address was read and Mr. Sweet thanked the audience for their kindness. Several others present gave short addresses. Rev. Langford was master of ceremonies. At the close the ladies served a dainty lunch.

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Sweet:

We, your friends and neighbours, have gathered here this evening to express our love for you and our appreciation of the help which you have been in church and community in the past. While we are sorry to know you leave us, and so break the close ties which have bound you to us, we are glad that you are not going far and that we may still sometimes enjoy your company. We felt, however, that we could not let you leave the neighbourhood without at least this slight recognition, often in the past we have enjoyed your company and many times have we been glad of your willing and efficient help.

We wish you the best of good luck and happiness and ask you to accept these little gifts and purse as a token of our affection and as a reminder of the many friends whom you leave behind in Rawdon.

May the giver of all that is good, give unto you all that is good and true. The will to help and the courage to do

Why suffer needlessly? Doctor Eppley's Liniment brings quick, sure relief to scald feet, soft corns and warts. Relieves inflammation. Removes proud flesh.

Weary miles seem shorter and the day is brightened when you have Wrigley's with you.

Its sugar pops you up. Its delicious flavor adds to any enjoyment.

and a heart that sings all the day through.

Whether the sky be gray or blue, may the giver of gifts give them to you.

Signed on behalf of the community,

Mrs. H. Hagerman, Lindsay Turner, John Courtney, James Jeffrey, Hilda Dafoe, and Arthur Hagerman.

League at Mount Pleasant was opened Friday evening by the president. After devotional period the treasurer Mr. Orval Hubble gave his report and it was moved and carried that seventy five dollars be given to Mr. Frank Spencer to go towards the expense of the community hall. MORE BICYCLES MADE LAST YEAR

To the man on the street, who remembers the time when "bikes" were "all the rage," it will probably come as surprising news that more bicycles were made and sold in Canada last year than in any preceding twelve months in the last quarter of a century.

The advent of the automobile and its rapid rise in popularity, the "coming in" of the motorcycle and the "going out" of the horse, and the competition of new pastimes notwithstanding, the bicycle industry has gone steadily forward in Canada.

In confirming the statement that more bicycles were manufactured and marketed in Canada in 1929 than in any previous year, Canada Cycle and Motor Company executives also point out that 1930 bicycle prices are the lowest for 30 years, despite consistently improving quality season after season.

In other words, price reduction has not been the cause of the growing popularity of the bicycle, but has been the result of this increase in the number of "bikes" purchased in Canada. As output has grown from year to year to meet as ever increasing demand, production costs have been lowered, and this saving has steadily cut down the price to the bicycle buyer.

In the opinion of the management of the Canada Cycle and Motor Company, Limited, that firm's consistent adherence to a policy of newspaper advertising has been one of the main factors in maintaining the healthy growth of the industry. By means of advertising messages, the safety, convenience, economy and healthfulness of cycling have been kept before the public, and these considerations have influenced more and more people to choose the bicycle as a means of easy, speedy, low-cost transportation. And all the indications are that the year in the bicycle market is still a long distance off.

Madoc

Mrs. Chas Moffitt, of Bancroft, was the week-end guest of Mrs. A. Thompson.

About fifteen bowlers from Madoc attended the Hastings County Club's Tournament in Belleville last week.

Mrs. M. Ward and children, of Belleville have been visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs Carl McCoy, for a week or two.

Ends Piles Quick

No Salves or Cutting

Piles are caused by congestion of blood in the lower bowel. Only an internal medicine can remove the cause. That's why salves and cutting fail. HEM-ROID, the prescription of Dr. J. S. Leonhardt, removes this congestion and strengthens the affected parts.

HEM-ROID is now sold by druggists everywhere, and has such a wonderful record of success even in chronic and stubborn cases that J. S. McKeown invites every Pile sufferer to try HEM-ROID and guarantees money-back if it does not end all Pile misery.

SERVING BIRDS AND FLOWERS

Canadian wild life is well served by her artists. Major Brooks is painting her birds and Robert Holmes, R.C.A., O.S.A., has finished his work of doing the wild flowers in oils.

Few countries have artists who know the wild life of forests and woodlands, of meadows, and fields as these men knew them.

Such devotion to the expression of these birds and flowers in painting may seem an amazing sacrifice of life in the eye of some people but it is doing for Canadian art what will give it distinction. Nature is the great goddess before whom Canadian artists work, they study her moods and her rich colorings, they try to peer into her mind (if nature may be said to have a mind, but that may be left to the Philosophers) and to express her in every form. Canadian artists in oils and watercolors have a distant inclination towards nature as the background of humanity. This tendency is seen also in poetic and dramatic studies by Canadian authors and in the novels though the novel is not so philosophic and is more realistic.

The late Robert Holmes who died last week was one of a great line of painters who have done and are doing their best to express in art the Canadian life ideals. In so doing they are enriching Canadian life and character.

THE TRUCK CATICHES IT

Motor truck drivers came in for comment from the Hon. G. S. Henry in his address before the Motor Truck Owners' Association, in which he pointed out that remedial measures were to be adopted to curb abuses of long standing.

The question of sufficient rest for drivers is one that is going to be remedied by limitation of the hours per week which a driver is to work. There is a tendency to drowse on a long trip with the hum of a huge van in his ears and the task facing the driver is accordingly one requiring keenness at all times, for safety.

The road driver who sticks to the centre of the road trusting to the superior weight of his van to force lighter cars out of the way is going to feel the bumps of the law in suspension of driver's permit and truck license.

There must be some means taken to curb the size of trucks using the highways and the trailer menace which has become so great that it is almost impossible to get by a truck and trailer where there is traffic of any dimensions.

From all parts of the country come complaints of the gigantic size of trucks and the menace they create on the narrow roads. In spite of the fact that trucks of elephantine size have diminished fifty per cent in three years, still there are too many of them.

The public it appears has a real grievance in regard to the truck question.

A FREE LAUREATE

Could the United States select a poet laureate for that country has none? Could Canada?

Toronto Globe has taken up the question on the line of John Buffalo News. The News looks at the question from a peculiarly United States standpoint and the Globe takes a slant at the question from the Canadian viewpoint, mixing politics and laureate poetry jocularly. The Globe says:

"The Buffalo News has suddenly become conscious of the fact that the United States lacks a Poet Laureate. But, far from demanding an appointment forthwith, it is moved by the selection of John Masefield in Great Britain merely to a mild sort of speculation as to what would happen were it necessary to send forward a nomination which would be subject to the approval of the United States Senate. If President Hoover's engineering ability has fallen short of the task of carrying his Supreme Court nominations through the august upper House, what humiliations would await him were he to propose the name of a poet!

"Poets are men of odd and fanciful vagaries,' the News observes. 'They cannot be trusted to see eye to eye with the custodians of the Constitution. The nominee would be under scrutiny not only as to the character of his verse—whether it leaned to the conservative or liberal side and whether it was wet or dry.'

"Such self-examination on a national scale is timely and commendable. Shall we in Canada be less candid with ourselves? Who among us with a knowledge of his countrymen would look forward without apprehension to the appointment in Ottawa of a versifier deemed fit and proper to wear the bays? With what sound and fury would the Western bloc fall upon an Eastern poet who might be suspected of a protectionist taint?. And what of the luckless singer whose visions of the beauty of nature failed to comprehend Government wharves? Assuredly, he would be a persona non grata to all who have it heart the time-honored principles inwvlfed in 'Maritime Rights.' Again, let us visualise, if we can, the vicissitudes awaiting the Quebec poet who might strive to measure up to the standards of grace and elegance which would be demanded by some envious Ontario paper."

If the Canadian public could not leave its laureate alone to write without party, or sectional control, better to leave it alone for poetry cannot be made to perch on any special banners.

No one expected Tennyson and Bridges to write parisan poetry and no one will expect Masefield to be dictated to on the score of his subjects, such is the sense of freedom of the English people. If Canadians could not have a laureate as free as a king from such influence as the Globe complains of worse for the ideals of Canada. The laureateship in this respect is one of the glories of Britain. If the Globe's view of the horrors of bitterness over the laureateship is correct, it is a sad view. If the News' view is correct it speaks critically of the national spirit of the United States.

SIDELIGHTS

SYMBOLS

By Aline Michaelis

In the garden I find symbols
Of the powers men possess;
There the oak-tree stands for vigor,
And the vine for tenderness.
Roses glow with pride of beauty,
Violets are love alone,
And in the radiance of lies
Perfect purity is shown.

There is yet another garden
And the lives that flourish there
Are the flowers gladly blooming
In the Gardener's gentle care!
Are bright flowers, fairly showing
Something of the Gardener's grace,
Something of His strength and goodness
In this world's vast garden-place.

DERBIES, DARBIES AND BOWLERS

WHILE THE WIT at the Pilgrims' dinner in honor of the Earl of Derby was cracking about the head of the guest, General Harbord made a joke which brought down the house on the other side of the house, but from the attending British produced only polite, bewildered smiles. He said that somewhere along the line from the twelfth century a member of the family of the guest of honor had attached his name to "an indestructible hat."

It was assumed by those present who noticed the slow and mystified British grins that this apparent lack of appreciation arose from the fact that the hat which here is called "derby" is known in England as a "bowler." It is doubtful whether many Englishmen would have caught the point. For a hat one wears a gray "topper;" and to Epsom many of the real "toffs" wear what has for year been honored in this country under the name of a "plug-hat." It is unlikely that Lord Derby associates the "bowler" with his title.

However, jokes about the pronunciation of his name are familiar to him. He probably knows that the native Kentuckians call their race the "derby," and when he is in Lexington and in Louisville he will meet many who will speak his name in the same way. While visiting Police Commissioner Whalen of New York, he will be made it clear that there is no doubt what he calls himself. "My people," said he, "started pronouncing it Darby in 1432." For New York and even for Kentucky, he will not alter that.

A TALE THAT IS TOLD

Unable Seaman: "When I came round again the surgeon 'e says to me, 'I'm blooming sorry, mate, I don't know what I was thinking about,' he says, 'but there's a sponge missing!' and I bet lieve it's inside yer.' 'What's the odds!' I says. 'Let it be.' And there it is to this day."

Gullible old Gentleman: "Bless my soul."

Unable Seaman: "I don't feel no pain from it, but I do get most uncommon thirsty."

HE KNEW HER

Mrs. Campbell: "Dear, I saw the sweetest little hat downtown today."

Campbell: "Put it on and let me see how you look in it."

SUPER-SALESMANSHIP

Sergeant O'Neil came upon down-hearted Smith contemplating suicide from the Brooklyn Bridge.

"Before you commit this act," said the sergeant, "talk it over for fifteen minutes with me."

Whereupon the two strolled over to a bench and conversed for fifteen minutes. Presently they both walked back to the bridge and jumped over together.

CHARGE IT UP TO FRICTION

"Now, Charles," said the teacher, "if your father can do a piece of work in one hour and your mother can do it in one hour, how long would it take both of them to do it?"

Three hours," answered Charles, "counting the time they would waste in arguing."

A three-hundred-pound man stood gazing longingly at the enticing display in a haberdasher's window. A friend stopped to inquire if he was thinking of buying the marked-down lavender silk shirt.

"Gosh, no," rellied the fat man, wistfully. "The only thing that fits me ready-made is a handkerchief."

MODERN ETIQUETTE

By Roberta Lee

Q.—Are hot dishes served at a buffet supper?

A.—A buffet supper usually consists of cold dishes.

Q.—Who should precede when walking down the aisle of a train, the man or the woman?

A.—The woman goes first.

Q.—What should mothers avoid doing in the presence of their children?

A.—They should never talk about a child's smart sayings and pranks, because he will get an exaggerated opinion of his abilities and his attractiveness and will continue to repeat them.

BOXING

The Canadian Legion have decided to run a series of Smoke Nights, the first being held at the Bandbox, on June 3rd. LINGERIE TOUCHES

With bright, flowerlike colors very much in the foreground this spring, it is good news to hear that navy blue will be as much in favor as ever. Like beige, black and gray, navy blue is one of the foundation colors of a wardrobe which allows many interesting color combinations. And it is especially attractive developed in navy blue, since the soberness is relieved by the pert little tuck-in blouses in delicate shades of rose, apricot, marigold, yellow and blue.

Either as a suit or cape, however, one crisp little fashion touch should be added. A boutonniere of gay wild flowers does much to brighten the outfit, but, better still, is a stiff little tailored white pique flower.

ACTINOLITE FARMER INJURED

Mr. Chas. Minnie, of Actinolite, was driving to Tweed and when descending the hill near Jno Hoit's residence the tongue of the wagon dropped and the team ran away. Mr. Minnie was pulled over the dashboard and became entangled in the harness. He was dragged for a considerable distance before the horses plunged into the ditch and came to a standstill. The unfortunate man was brought to Tweed where Dr. Mather attended to his injuries, and found a small bone broken in his leg near the foot and he was otherwise badly bruised about the body. He had a close call. No ill is expected that he will be able to be about again in a few days.

FRUIT CUP IS ALWAYS WITH US

By Hannah Wing

One thing we have always with us. That is the fruit cup. There are fruit cups and fruit cups—not all alike. But how to get one that tastes different, better, stands out as one in authority—this is the problem. Very well cut up a melange, a selection of various fruits—and canned ones are splendid for the purpose—then make a lemon or orange or grapefruit jelly; just before it sets too stiffly beat it with an egg-beater. It will break up into glistening, sparkling, frost-like crystals; and then either mix in the fruit or fill the glasses with fruit and top with the delicate, topaz-colored crystals of jelly and let them mingle with the fruit in a happy combination of fruit and congealed juices. What could be choicer than this? You needn't go to the trouble of making jelly if you don't want to, for the ready-to-mix jelly powders come in a variety of flavors. Good, too.

Coffee jelly sounds pretty trite. But make up a dish, anyway, then, when it's set, add half a cup of cream and beat it together. Add a little powdered sugar and serve in glasses topped with whipped cream. Evaporated milk, the handy thing, makes this first rate, and if cold when served it is simply delicious.

The tomato juice that comes in cans and bottles and was first supposed to be destined for and dedicated to the cocktail, is the best looking and best tasting thing imaginable when done into jelly, each mold having imprisoned in it pale, coral-colored shrimps. The red of the jelly, the cool crispness and shell-like color of the shrimps give a beautiful color scheme and an indescribably delicious flavor combination.

Serve it with green mayonnaise, on lettuce or cress, and so easily done that you wonder how such a miracle of beauty and flavor could be achieved so quick and completely.

I believe we need not talk about the usual eggs? Hard-cooked eggs, cut in two, stuffed with some savory mixture and set in beet or chicken broth and congealed. Or poach the eggs and season them and proceed as above. Serve with tomato sauce, which now, made to the Queen's taste, comes ready to use in a small can, and good hot or cold, too. Put a little vinegar in the water when you poach eggs. Then you can handle them as you please, whether you use them hot or cold.

Cold custards are refreshing. Make a soft or boiled custard—it may be chocolate, flavored with caramel, or vanilla and almond. Chill it and serve in glasses, on fruit or on jellies. Gives a variety from cream, and is so cool and delicate it is always welcome.

PREMIER KING IS HEARD IN REPLY

Says He Cannot Take Time With House in Session to Answer Ontario

Ottawa, May 20 (CP).—In a statement issued last night, Prime Minister Mackenzie King sets forth his own attitude and that of his government toward the provinces. The Prime Minister's statement came in reply to declarations of Premier G. Howard Ferguson of Ontario, from the platform of the Western Ontario Conservative Convention at London. Mr. Ferguson was reported as saying that the Ontario Government proposed to throw its weight into the election campaign against the Federal Government forces because of Mr. King's "five-cent piece" statement in parliament.

The Prime Minister summarizes his attitude and that of the Federal Government towards the provinces, in his final paragraph, as follows:

"In order that there may be no further misrepresentation of my attitude or that of the present administration towards the governments of any of the provinces, whether they be Conservative, Progressive or Liberal, may I say that so long as I continue to occupy the position which I now hold, my own attitude and that of the administration, towards the provinces of our Dominion, will continue to be in the future what it has been right along, namely, one of an honest endeavor to avoid and to remove all possible sources of controversy between the Provincial and Federal Governments, and in local matters to be scrupulously fair, and insofar as the public interest may permit, generous to the treatment alike of one and all wholly regardless of the political complexion of the particular administration in office in any of the provinces."

Cannot Reply Outside

Mr. King asserts that he cannot give his attention to parliament, which is still in session, and conduct a campaign outside, or he would be glad to reply to Mr. Ferguson from the public platform.

The Prime Minister declares that his statements in the House of Commons had relation exclusively to "a then existing situation, and was not to be understood or interpreted as having any other possible application."

RETIRED ARCHBISHOP OF CANTERBURY ILL

LONDON, May 20.—CP—The serious illness of Lord Davidson, recently retired Archbishop of Canterbury, is causing some anxiety. The present Archbishop preaching at Southwark Cathedral yesterday referred to the aged prelate as lying "in a bed not so much of sickness as of weakness, where with quiet fortitude and patience he is awaiting the call to rest."

Preference for Canadian Wheat Grower in British Market up in British House

President of Board of Trade Says Government Does Not Intend to Impose Any Duties on Foreign Wheat—Inquiry by Conservative Members.

London, May 20 (CP)— The question of preference for the Canadian wheat grower in the British market over foreign wheat growers came up in the House of Commons today. Rt. Hon. William Graham, President of the Board of Trade in reply to suggestion said the government did not intend to impose any duties on foreign wheat so that the question of granting Canada preference did not arise.

The answer brought a spirited query from the Conservative benches. "Do we understand the Government reply to the Canadian tariff concessions is that we can only treat them the same as we treat foreign governments," Mr. Graham was asked.

"Not necessarily," Graham replied. The questioner spoke of a tax on all imported wheat. The government is opposed to this."

INSPECTOR H. B. FETTERLEY M. A. APPOINTED SUP'T SCHOOL FOR DEAF

H. B. Fetterley, school inspector in Dundas County, has been appointed Superintendent of the Ontario School for the Deaf at Belleville, Premier Ferguson announced today. The appointment is to take effect on July 1st.

He succeeds the late Dr. C. B. Coughlin, who died suddenly over a year ago. Mr. W. J. Campbell, of this city, a member of the staff of the school for many years, has been filling the post of principal-superintendent of the institution in the interim to the satisfaction of the Ontario Department of Education.

The appointment of Inspector Fetterley is a proof that the Minister of Education, the Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, has approved the appointment of an educationist to this important post. Mr. Fetterley's high position in educational matters fits him for the superintendency of one of the most important institutions in the Province of Ontario. With a registration of over three hundred students from all parts of the province, this school serves a class of children and young people who require special interest owing to the nature of their drawback. Many people have a general idea of the work being accomplished at the school but in reality the work seems little short of marvellous in the way of the results obtained with those handicapped pupils.

EXAMINATION RESULTS

In the first year examination results of Ontario College of Pharmacy Toronto, as announced today, the following students from Belleville were successful: Lorne A. Morton (first class honours); R. J. Boyes, (first class honours); J. S. Moffatt (second class honours).

GAVE ILLUSTRATED LECTURE

Last night's meeting of the Y's Men's Club was featured by an illustrated lecture given by Mr. J. E. Shortt, Secretary of the local Y.M.C.A. Mr. Shortt, who is an expert on camp life and wood lore and a naturalist of repute formerly held the paddling championship of Algonquin Park and Lake Couchiching summer camp. He gave the members a splendid talk on canoeing depicting the various types used and illustrating the means the Indians took to build their craft. Mr. Shortt also presented a number of slides of camp life. President Bob Brown was in the chair while Percy Cole acted as song leader and Jack Silver, sergeant-at-arms. George Warded, contributed two cornet numbers. Among the guests was Allan Dempsey a recent graduate of the Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph. Mr. Dempsey was formerly well-known in athletic circles, particularly as a walker. The Y's Men's Chorus under the direction of Ross Hunter practiced at the conclusion of the meeting in preparation for their appearance tonight at the Collegiate Institute.

PRESENT PLAY TONIGHT

After weeks of preparation and many hours given to practice, the cast of the amateur production, "So This is London" completed their work at the Y.M.C.A. last night. The play will be presented under the auspices of the Belleville Y's Men's Club at the Collegiate auditorium tonight and those in charge expect a big crowd. "So This is London" is a popular stage hit and Miss Jessie Tuite who has been directing the production, is more than pleased with the co-operation on the part of the cast. The Y's Men's male chorus under the direction of Ross Hunter as well as other local talent will assist on the program tonight. Jack Silver, a member of the club will render several numbers. Mr. Silver a pleasing baritone has become one of Belleville's popular artists. The proceeds will be devoted entirely to boys' work, particularly Camp Community at Moira Lake.

TEMPLARS AT KINGSTON

At Kingston yesterday afternoon, there was a gathering of Knight Templars including thirty-five members of the Richard Coeur de Lion Preceptory No. 7, Knights Templars of Montreal. A number from Belleville were present, namely W. D. Diamond, E. C. Sehrryer, R. A. Sackett, W. H. F. Ketcheson O. R. Thompson, A. E. Belcher and C. R. Churchill, O. T. Ayres of Trenton and J. G. Bennett of Napanee, were also present as representatives of King Baldwin Preceptory of Belleville. Supreme Grand Master A. B. Barr, of London, Ont., was in attendance. Eminent Knight Cy. D. McFarland of Kingston, with others welcomed the visitors. All orders of the Temple were conferred by visiting Knights. Following the afternoon session dinner was served at the banquet hall of the Masonic Temple. At conclusion of the evening session an entertainment was held in the Assembly Hall of the Temple.

INTERESTS ATHLETES

Mr. Ralph Morden, physical instructor of the local Y.M.C.A. accompanied by one of the members of the Belleville Fair Board Sports Committee, motored to Napanee, Deseronto, Trenton and several other nearby towns yesterday and visited the high school principals and newspaper offices, in connection with the Belleville Fair Athletic Meet which will be held at the fair grounds on August 26th. Entry forms for this interesting event may be obtained at the Y.M.C.A. Entries close August 21st.

YACHT TO LEAVE FOR TORONTO

Orio's IV, smart yacht owned by Commodore O. H. Cockburn, well-known Toronto sailing enthusiast which has been in winter quarters here during the past winter, will leave on Thursday of this week in command of Captain O. R. Strachan for Toronto. The craft has been given a complete overhauling in preparation for the summer cruises. A liberal coat of paint has been applied to the vessel which is now resplendent in her spring attire. The yacht will remain at the dispock of the owner who is planning a number of pleasure trips on the great lakes and Bay of Quinte.

CHARGE IS AMENDED

William Brickman who was the alleged driver of a car which plunged into the ditch at the Bay Bridge crossing last week, appeared in court this morning to answer charges laid by the police following the accident. The charge has been amended to read "That he did while intoxicated by an unlawful act, to wit, by driving while intoxicated, cause bodily injury to Sam Burns." The case was enlarged for another week.

ASSAULTED HIS MOTHER

James Alexander, 144 Station Street appeared this morning before Magistrate Mikel on charges of assaulting his mother, Rachel Alexander, at his home on May 8th. He pleaded not guilty to the charge but after the evidence was taken, he was found guilty and sentence was suspended for one year. He was obliged to pay the costs of the court which amounted to $20.30. A charge of intoxication which was laid was dismissed. Alexander must remain away from his home for an unstated period.

CHEQUE ARTIST OPERATES

Recently a cheque purported to be signed by Charles Thompson, of Bloomfield, for $82.00 and drawn payable to the order of Charles Ostrander was cashed at the Canadian Bank of Commerce branch at Bloomfield. On the same day a cheque of the same denomination bearing the same name effect on was presented and cashed at the Picton branch. The police are now looking for a man who is said to be twenty-five years of age, five feet six inches tall, is dark, well-tanned and is stirred in a blue suit and a light hat or fedora. He is believed to be an experienced cheque operator and the authorities are anxious to apprehend him. Merchants and others are advised to cash no cheques for any person bearing this resemblance.

BELLEVILLE BOY HURT

Gordon Lane, young son of Mr. A. Lane, Canniton Rd., a Canadian National fireman, is lying in the Hotel Dieu hospital, Kingston, suffering from slight injuries the result of an accident on Saturday. Lane, riding on the cross bar of a bicycle operated by Warren Stirling on Montreal street Kingston, was hurled off when the bike was struck by a gravel truck operated by O. E. Walker of Montreal. Stirling, the other youngster, was erritically injured and died a few hours later in the hospital. Young Lane suffered from bruises on the left leg and thigh. It appears that the boys turned out to pass a car owned by C. Wise of Cataraqui and the truck coming in the opposite direction crash ed the bicycle.

CANADIAN PACIFIC ECONOMY PROGRAM

Montreal, May 20.—The desire of the Canadian Pacific Railway to use all practical economies in its operations, is no less great than that of the Canadian National Railways, according to a statement issued today by E. W. Beatty, its president, commenting on the remarks of Sir Henry Thornton before the Kiwanis Convention at Ottawa, in regard to co-operation between the two railways, Mr. Beatty said: "The Canadian Pacific is more than willing and always has been to curtail all railway practices involving needless expenditure and to secure the maximum of economy in handling the traffic available may be secured. The general pooling of passenger traffic is not however in our opinion practicable, the desired results can be obtained by co-operation between the companies in the use of joint facilities where possible, reduction of unnecessary competitive train services on an equitable basis and through mutual agreements respecting time schedules of trains. The present need of economy in operation is too obvious to require comment."

GIANT AIR FLEETS FOR BRITISH EMPIRE

LONDON, May 20.—Two fleets of giant airplanes, equipped with luxurious cocktail bars, smoking-rooms and refreshment buffets, and carrying forty passengers apiece, are under construction for use over Great Britain's new Empire air routes.

They will be the largest fleets in operation in the world.

One of the fleets consists of eight 40-seater biplanes for use over land routes. The other consists of six 40-seater flying boats for operation on the water sections of the Empire air routes.

In size the 40-seater boats have of course, been greatly exceeded by the huge German Dornier DO-X, which has gone aloft with 169 persons aboard The orders for both fleets have been placed by the Imperial Airways, but the order for the eight 40-seater land planes is noteworthy not only as being the largest single order ever placed for airliners, but also because all of the eight machines are to be fitted with commercial land planes now in existence. Both types of planes will be fitted, with four motors totalling over 2,000 horsepower.

CONDITIONS IN RUSSIAN MINES

Montreal Dealer Combats View of Sir Newton Moore

Some discussion recently took place in the Dominion Parliament, in regard to Russian coal which is being used in large quantities in Ontario. The question also came up in the British House of Commons on allegations by Sir Newton Moore that sweated labor conditions prevailed in the production of Russian coal. Lovell O. Mickles, president of the Weaver Coal Co., of Montreal, interviewed by the Montreal Gazette, talks issue with Sir Newton Moore, speaking as follows:

"I would assume that by 'sweating labor conditions' he refers to enforced lengthy hours of labor, or unduly small remuneration, or both," said Mr. Mickles. "I spent several weeks in the Russian coal fields last summer, visiting a considerable number of mining properties, and from personal knowledge can therefore state that there is no evidence of enforced labor; in fact, all labor gave as much evidence of freedom and contentment as is to be found in any mining community that I know of.

"With reference to the statement that the miners' wages are 8d. per day —after careful enquiry, I have authoritative information to the effect that surface miners receive approximately four rubles, being an equivalent of 53 per day for a 6-hour work day. Moreover, all miners in the Kuzbitz Basin receive additional benefits, entirely unknown before the war, which adds considerably to the money value of wages received; as an example—underground miners receive one month's vacation each year, with pay, and surface workers two weeks. Most workers in Soviet coal fields, pay either a nominal rent for their housing unit. Electric light, fuel, and other municipal services, and considerable special working clothes are supplied either free of charge or at a nominal rate.

"From my own personal knowledge, I ascertained that the houses occupied by workers before the war were usually nothing but shacks, while there is now under construction, and a very considerable number have been completed, houses of the most improved type, in the matter of material, lay-out, and sanitation, even to the extent of landscape gardening, the superior of which I have not seen in coal mining community in this country nor abroad.

"Far from being sweated in respect to the length of hours, 6 hours for underground work are the recognized hous, and overtime work is not permitted, except to a very limited extent in fact, no permitted to exceed four hours overtime in one week, and this only after the management has obtained the sanction for such overtime which in no instance can exceed two consecutive hours."

LOCAL BATTERY OPEN TRAINING

A Section of 34th Battery Is Organized at the Collegiate

At a recent meeting of the Commanding Officer and Officers of the 34th Field Battery Canadian Artillery it was decided to commence spring training on Tuesday, May 27th. Major Roberts, Officer Commanding the local battery, anticipates a very successful year for the local battery.

This year, for the first time, the Field Batteries of the Canadian Artillery, at their camps at Petawawa, will be mechanized. A few days ago five large tractor lorries passed through the city enroute to Kingston. These created considerable interest to citizens during their short stay in Belleville. Previously to this year, the horses of the R.C.H.A., headquartered at Kingston, have been used for training purposes. Reports will speak to the men on the new changes and map out the plans for spring training. Col H. J. Graham, Officer Commanding the 8th Field Brigade of which the 34th Battery along with Kingston and Gananoque units up the Brigade, will also be present to address the men. A section of the battery has been organized in the local Collegiate and prospects for a large number to take the training and attend camp, with competition between sections, promise to make this season a most interesting and successful season for the Battery.

Any interested in the training are reminded to be at the Armouries on Church Street, Friday next at 7 o'clock.

MENTAL DEFECTIVES HAVE BEEN STERILIZED

Lethbridge, May 20 — Eighteen to twenty mentally defective patients in Alberta have been sterilized under the Alberta Act for the Sterilization of Mental Defectives. This was reported by Dr. Fitzpatrick of the Alberta mental health department in an address before the local council of women, and is the first official announcement that the sterilization act had actually become operative.

Dr. Fitzpatrick explained that only when the case is pronounced by experts to be permanently incurable, that the operation is performed. The operation does not unsex the individual, he said, but only has the effect of preventing increase in mental disorders, he said that in the province there are 1,200 being kept in institutions.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

THE GOLDEN KEY

By

Jasper B. Sinclair

Copyright, 1930, International Features Service, Inc

He was past middle age. His shoulders were stooped and his head bent slightly forward, as though tired of struggling against the world and life itself.

His drawn cheeks emphasized the hunger in his dulled eyes. People hurried by without noticing him, or favored him with a pitying stare.

A forlorn figure in the gathering dusk. Tim O'Neill shuffled along How ard street to close to the curb.

He stopped a moment at Second St., waiting for a stream of machines to pass.

Standing there, he saw a black object lying in the gutter at his feet. He picked it up, glancing furtively around as he straightened. But no one was paying any heed to the shabby figure on the corner.

Hastily Tim shoved the wallet in his pocket and crossed Second street with quickening steps.

In the shadow of a doorway a block further along, he drew it out of his pocket again. His fingers trembled as he counted the crinkling bills the wallet contained.

"Thirty-two dollars!" he mumbled, staring at the money with widening eyes. "Thirty-two dollars!" he repeated visioning all the things that such a sum would buy.

A new pair of shoes, a clean bed and a square meal. It meant a chance to face the world with renewed confidence. A chance to grow up to his job and look for a job. It was a staggering thought.

Then he hesitated, still shaken by thought of his new found wealth. Was it his, after all?

Suppose it belonged to someone who needed it as badly as himself? Someone, perhaps, with a wife and children. In that case it meant far more to them than to one who was only a derelict on the flood-tide of life.

There was only one course open, despite the temptation so close at hand.

Back in some distant recess of his mind he remembered that old quotation he had learned in his schooldays: "that golden key that opens the palace of eternity."

Tim sighed, then shoved the wallet back in his pocket. With that gesture he thrust aside all thought of a new pair of shoes, a clean bed and a square meal.

He stepped out of the doorway and headed up Howard street, bending his head against a drizzling rain that was commencing to wet the pavement.

His shoulders were still stooped, but his fingers no longer trembled as Tim O'Neill laid the wallet on the sergeant's desk in the Southern Station.

"I found it at Second and Howard," he explained quietly.

"Eh?" The desk sergeant was incredulous as he looked inside the wallet. Then he glanced dubiously at the shabby figure before him.

"But reckoned that the owners might need it worse than me," stated Tim, in response to the unasked query in the officer's eyes.

"Hmm!" grunted the sergeant. "Well—you know the rules in a case like this, I guess. If the owner isn't found in thirty days, the money is yours."

Tim's face lit in a wan smile. Thirty days! Thirty days hence it would hardly matter to him whether the owner had been found or not.

But Tim O'Neill held his head erect, despite the rain, as he walked out of the station and headed toward a fifteen cent "flop house".

It was three nights later that they found Tim O'Neill wandering aimlessly down Howard street.

His threadbare coat was drenched, water oozed out of his shoes at every step. He was shivering, not so much from the cold and wet as from sheer exhaustion.

The two bluecoats who found him led him into the Southern Station, intent only on drying him out and arranging a bed for the night.

Derelicts such as he were common in the Southern precinct, but despite his haggard appearance they sensed something in Tim that set him apart from the ordinary run of characters with whom they dealt.

"Found him wandering around in the rain, sergeant," explained one of the officers. "Appears to be just about all in."

The desk sergeant looked up casually. It was part of the night's work. Then he straightened, recognition widening his eyes instantly.

"Just the man we're looking for!" he exclaimed. "What's the idea of getting drenched on a night like this?"

Tim shrugged and looked up at the sergeant.

"There ain't none of these rooming houses giving out any charity beds, sergeant," he muttered.

The officer frowned. Tim's words were significantly clear.

"And yet you gave up that money the other night?" he questioned.

Tim shrugged again. "It wasn't mine," he responded simply. "I told you somebody else might need it worse than me."

"I think—well, never mind! What's your name?"

"Tim O'Neill, sir."

"Well, Tim, you're just the man we want. The owner of that wallet came in and claimed it this afternoon. As it turned out, he didn't need it as much as you, but he does need a good man."

Tim looked up inquiringly.

"He's superintendent of the Pacific Metal Works down on Folsom street. He left word for us to find you and send you around to see him....in the morning, if possible. He's got a night watchman's job for you. Here's his name and address," and he handed Tim a card.

The old man's lips moved fervently but no words were forthcoming.

"One of the boys will take you into the back room and dry you out a bit. After that you can get a square meal and a decent bed."

"But—"

"With this," added the sergeant, holding out some crinkly bills.

"But, I don't understand," protested Tim, vaguely looking at the money clutched in his hands.

"Thirty-two dollars," he mumbled, leafing over the bills with shaking fingers. Then he looked up at the sergeant.

"It's the same thirty-two dollars you found, Tim," explained the sergeant. "The owner said to give it to you not as a reward for returning it but as a sort of bonus for finding him a good watchman!"

AUTO AS WEAPON IN ATTEMPT TO KILL

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., May 20.—An automobile was termed "a dangerous weapon" by Judge James H. Slade in Middlesex County Superior Court here Monday, and as a result of the court's decision Robert W. Humphreys, 32, of Everett, was ordered to serve from two and one-half to three years in state prison.

Humphreys was found guilty on a charge of assault with a dangerous weapon with intent to kill his mother-in-law, Mrs. Orrie Lovejoy, 44, in front of her Somerville home on March 18 last. His automobile was referred to in the case as the "instrument" used in the assault.

Mrs. Lovejoy, who was carried into the court room on a chair testified Humphreys had run her down with his automobile and seriously injured her while she was attempting to frustrate his plot to kidnap and carry away his four-year-old daughter, Jean.

JAPANESE NAVAL OFFICER SUICIDES PROTESTS NAVY PACT

Tokio, May 20—In the tense atmosphere surrounding the return of Admiral Kokora Takarabe, Minister of Marine, from the London Naval conference and his first conference with the cabinet and senior naval officers, a sensation was created today by the suicide of Lieut. Commander Kusakari, high naval officer, which the press is exploiting as an echo of the navy's bitter opposition to the London pact. The officer slashed his abdomen with a sword while aboard a train, is said to have expressed bitterness and despondency over the future of the navy as a result of the London treaty.

BAD LANDS HERO POLICEMAN DEAD

St. Thomas, May 20—Ney Chute for nearly half a century a police constable in Skyhorn township, is dead. Pneumonia reduced the once-sturdy officer of Zeat Eigtn to a shadow and his death resulted from his weakened condition.

Ney Chute was 71 years of age, a native of Bayham, and his wife was devoted to the cause of justice in one of the recognized bad lands of the continent. The story of Bayham's bit for notoriety as the most lawless district in the peninsula 70 years ago, is linked around a notorious gang of "bad men" known as "Bayham Jamies."

For many years the name of Bayham lambs was a household word. No less than seven murders were reported at one stage, besides robbery and virtually every other offence on the calendar. The crime story has become traditional to the people of the country and even yet among the older settlers the name of the Bayham lambs recall tragedy and evil days.

CHILDREN'S AID SOCIETIES MEET

Various Phases Brought to Attention of the Officers

The Annual Conference Association of Children's Aid Societies of the Province of Ontario, was brought to a close yesterday. A splendid attendance of those who are interested in the Welfare of Children.

Nearly all the Local Societies had a good delegation present. All the Local Superintendents with the exception of one or two who owing to ill health were not able to share in the inspiring gathering. The Hon. George Henry, Past Premier of the York County Society on behalf of the Government welcomed the delegates to the conference, and in his address he predicted a government policy for the care of under-privileged children.

Every phase of the work was brought to the attention of the conference many splendid addresses was given dealing with ; The Problem Child and Placement, Institutional Care, Segregation of the Physically and Mentally Unfit. Mr. Moore of Dundas, dealing with this subject strongly advocated sterilization of degenerates and mentally unfit. It was stated by the speaker the number of feeble minded persons is increasing at the rate of four percent each year. Mental deficiency is hereditary and although in a few cases morons make useful citizens as mechanics but on the whole they constitute a great menace. Dr. T. B. McClibe, Medical Superintendent of The Ontario Hospital at Orillia, in his usual interesting and thought provoking address told of the advance made in the training of those who was mentally sick. Fifteen doctors are at present at the Ontario Hospital studying the problem of the mentally unfit at first hand. These doctors will go from Orillia to establish the first of the new mental clinics at Kingston, Woodstock, Brockville, Whitby and other centres and on application to Mr. J. J. Kelso, Provincial Superintendent of the Children's Aid Societies will be granted permission to take children to these clinics. The Hospital at Orillia stated the doctor is now full to capacity, but the Hon. Commission appointed to investigate the work on the feeble minded has recommended $500,000, to be spent on the enlargement of the Ontario Hospital this year. In the matter of training defective children the doctor said he hoped before long to be able to set aside a special ward for children between four and six years of age.

Mr. Kelso in his address regretted the increasing number of wards of the Children's Aid Societies, and the placement of these wards in foster homes. He emphasized the importance of leaving a child in its own home, wherever possible. Children should not be kept in the Shelter any longer than absolutely necessary.

The home was the proper place for a child. If not their own home a suitable Foster Home. He thought the societies should try and get more publicity for their work and need for homes. Newspapers and Radio publicity had been used with success in finding homes and it might be used more widely. In one instant twenty minutes after a radio address a suitable home for a child was found and placed.

In forty-two shelters 997 wards were in residence but a large number of these children were unplaceable, every shelter in the Province had one or more insane or feeble minded in residence and was unable to make any other provision for them. Miss Brooking, Superintendent Alexandra Industrial School for girls said she had several such girls and it was five years since she had been able to get one transferred to Orillia Hospital. This was a very lamentable situation for it was crowding up her Institution, that was unable to take others that should be under her care.

Other speakers at the conference included Dr. Helmuth, Judge Mott, Mr. Frank Sharp. The closing address was given by Rev. Trevor Davies of the Timothy Eaton Memorial Church, which brought to a close a very instructive conference.

R. W. Hamilton, Ottawa, was re-elected President, Hugh Ferguson, Secretary C. B. Bilger, Treasurer.

Hon. Vice Presidents, J. J. Kelso, Canon Quartermaster, Judge H. S. Mott, F. B. Holiby, W. E. Kelley.

Everything for the ROOF
—ALEXANDER Murray—

DADDY CAN NOW EAT ANYTHING

He dearly loved a rich tit-bit. The spirit was willing, but the flesh was weak. Whenever he ate anything rich, his boys used to say, "Poor dad, he will pay the penalty to-morrow". Read the injured in his own words:—

Since last night the regular dose of Kruschen Salts it is quite different, and my boys pride themselves seeing just eat what I dare not touch before. My eldest son is the same, but since he has taken Kruschen Salts he can eat and enjoy whatever is put in front of him."

Modern artificial conditions, errors of diet, overwork, lack of exercise, and so on, are bound to have injurious effects in the long run providing due precautions is not taken.

Kruschen Salts should be your safeguard. Besides cleansing the body of impurities gently, surely and painlessly, they possess a vital power of giving new life and vitality to the countless millions of cells of which every body is composed. That is why physicians never hesitate to recommend Kruschen Salts.

PLEASED WITH COMMUTATION

Rev. W. F. Seay Says Church Failed to Reach Young Men

Rev. William F. Seay, presiding elder of the African Methodist Episcopal Church, was in the city yesterday on his way westward to his home in Chatham. He had recently presented an appeal to the Minister of Justice asking for a commutation of sentence in the case of Charles Cross coloured, who was to have been executed yesterday. On Saturday the sentence of death had been commuted to life imprisonment.

Mr. Seay read to The Ontario Intelligencer a copy of the appeal made for commutation in which he pointed out that the boy who is only eighteen years of age, had been left motherless at the age of two years and had thus been deprived of a mother's love and care. Mr. Seay felt that the church life had failed to do its best for the lad and if he had not, he said that a bill of guilt would be presented in the long run to whoever was responsible. Cross was sentenced to hang for a certain of the shooting on September 30 at Chatham of John Labadie, gasoline station keeper during a hold-up by four young men, of which Cross was the youngest. The three others turned King's evidence and Cross the trial on Crown. One was given twenty-five years and the other two fifteen years each. Mr. Seay in his appeal said he wished to uphold law and order and would only ask for commutation to a life term. He claimed that Cross was the victim of circumstances. Mr. Seay is pleased with the result of the petition.

On his way home Mr. Seay was privileged to preach to five hundred prisoners in the Portsmouth Penitentiary at Kingston, after which he was escorted through the various departments of the prison, and given information concerning every department.

"I am gratified to see," he told The Ontario Intelligencer, "that the government takes care of the inmates in such a splendid way."

WITCH DOCTORS COME UNDER BAN

Pretoria, South Africa, May 20 (CP) —Witch doctors are going to find it hard to make a living in Swaziland where they have practised with some success for many generations. Under a new law any witch doctor or his agent practising divination, is liable to a year's imprisonment. Anyone found wearing charms, dress or insignia of a wizard will be liable to six months' imprisonment. Moreover, any fruitful native who seeks the aid of a witch doctor may find himself cast in jail for a year.

One case which had an effect in bringing about the restrictions was reported recently. A witch doctor and a native woman killed another native woman, cutting the victim into "medicine meat" which was found buried in 14 fields with the idea of increasing the crops.

SUMMARY JUSTICE

Bulawayo, May 20 (CP)—Investigating a case of "black justice" officials found recently that Mrs. Ramsay, wife of the manager of a mine, together with the head police boy, had conspired to set up a court to settle native cases. One prisoner, charged with stealing a child from its mother was handcuffed with her arms around a tree for 12 hours in rain. A native woman who refused to live with one of the household servants was legironed to a native hut under a police constable arrived to set her free.

EMPIRE DAY IS MARKED BY CLUB

R. J. Graham Tells of Great Power of British Flag

Empire Day was celebrated at the Rotary Club Monday with guests inviting representing countries in and out of the Empire. President-elect Ed Worth presided and the speaker of the day was R. J. Graham who related several instances in his own travels where he had witnessed the great power of the British flag, the advantage of British connection and the respect everywhere accorded British institutions and officials.

It was announced that the directors had elected Ed Bernstein, secretary; Harold Lezzie, assistant secretary; and Bob Dewar, treasurer. O. H. Scott, who has been a highly efficient secretary or ten years, since the inception of Rotary in Belleville, with the exception of one year when he served as president, requested to be relieved of the office this year, to the great regret of officers and members.

When the Car dissolved the Dumb and stirred up such a fuss in St. Catharines that the prisoners were filled to overflowing, and no man's life or liberty was safe in the great capital of Russia, R. J. Graham, of Belleville, was a guest at the Hotel Anglo-Terre in that city, which was seething with revolution, suspicion, and automatic rubbleissness. Assured of protection by the British Consul, the hotel proprietor recommended that a British flag be placed upon the door of the room occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Graham in the hotel. This was done and they were not molested, although the proprietor stated that many of his guests had been taken from their rooms and placed in prisons without trial, some of them ending up in Siberia.

Another time in Pekin, China, while motoring in the country, they found themselves between two fighting forces of revolutionaries, and escaped harm by decking their car with British flags. They reached Pekin safely, but a party from the United States following in a car bedecked with the stars and stripes did not fare so well, and were hospital subjects for weeks.

Going down from Jerusalem to Jericho in Palestine they found that the British soldiers were protected from the fierce Bedouin bandits then making the country resemble a hornet's nest on a large scale.

Abyssinia, in Africa, where respect for the British flag was enforced with bullet and sword, after a native tribe had murdered the district commissioner and one man went in the haunts of the tribe and brought out the murderer.

Instance after instance interesting and thrilling were related by Mr. Graham to show how firm a foundation existed for pride in being British citizens.

Appreciation for Mr. Graham's interesting address was ably voiced by Morley Duff. Progress in crippled children work was reported by Chas. Symons who cited a number of cases recently taken up.

James Bankier contributed vocal solos, Leo Riggs presided at the piano and John Thomson was song leader. Jack Lill acting as sergeant-at-arms.

ATTACK CONSULATE

Cologne, Germany, May 20—A band of Communists on bicycles yesterday dropped down on the British consulate here and, shouting: "Hands off India" and "Down with MacDonald," smashed all the windows of the building with stones.

After painting the same slogans in red on the sidewalk, the band jumped on their bicycles again and escaped before the riot squad arrived.

Many Get "Let Out" Before They're Ready!

It's a serious state of affairs when a man finds himself "let out" before he is ready to retire from active work—too old to get a new job. Yet—it is a common occurrence these days.

Supposing you were in that predicament, would you welcome a Canada Life Pension cheque of $50.00 a month? Are you making sure that YOU will be ready when the time comes "to retire"?

May I offer a suggestion as to how this may be arranged?

MOTOR ACCIDENT STORY IS HEARD

Ruttan Accident on Foxboro-Stirling Road Aired at Supreme Court.

The non-jury sitting of the Supreme Court of Ontario opened in the County court house yesterday afternoon with the Honorable Mr. Justice R. E. Raney of Toronto presiding. An array of legal talent were seated around the counsel table when His Lordship ascended the dias about half past two. One of the lengthiest lists in some time was before His Lordship and many of the counsel spoke to the cases they were interested in. After all had been spoken to the case of Ruttan vs. The King and Chas. V. Billis the third party was opened with R. D. Ponton K.C., appearing for the plaintiff. Erichson, Brown for The King and Messrs. Porter, Payne and Arnott for the third party.

The action dealt with an accident that took place two miles west of Foxboro on the Provincial Highway No. 14, running from Foxboro to Stirling on June 18th last. Mr. Cannliff Ruttan and his father George Ruttan were driving in a westerly direction on this highway some time after eighthirty and it is alleged when being to barricades nor warning signs, the car dropped off a seven foot embankment and turned over, pinning George Ruttan underneath and doing considerable damage to the car. The parties to the trial began admitted that the road was a provincial highway. At the time of the accident the road was under construction. Mr. Billis, contractor having been given contract from the Department of Highways.

Car Drops Off

Mr. Cannliff Ruttan was the first witness called and by questioning of his counsel told the story of how the accident happened. He stated he saw a light some distance ahead that looked like the tail light of a car but not sure. When nearly on top of the light he saw it was placed on a road-making machine of some kind and was to the south of him. He went to the right and without warning his car dropped off the end of an excavation and rolled against the bank. He estimated himself from the wreck and ran to the home of a Mr. Rogers nearby and aroused him. They came back together and took the car off his father. About this time a car driven by one Bartram came along in the opposite direction as he was proceeding and the witness stated he stopped him from going in the same place. In cross-examination he told the statement as it was irrelevant as Ruttan did not know Bartram was going over the same road as he did but His Lordship allowed the answer. Bartram with the help of the witness brought the disabled car back to his home after he was visited by Dr. Ward of Foxboro. Dr. Tennent then saw the victim in his surgery.

The witness then told of going back to the scene with Traffic Officer Pitts and questioned him about why he came a barricade had been placed in position with a white light on it. Again Mr. Bowman the defense objected but His Lordship ruled the question relevant to the action. In cross-examination Mr. Ruttan admitted that he went to right of the red light when car generally pass to the left but he said he went that way as it was hard the travelled portion of the road. It was impossible to go the other way as there was a noticeable drop of about twelve inches.

Dr. Ward of Foxboro and Dr. Tennent of Belleville gave evidence of the injuries sustained by George Ruttan while Traffic Officer Pitts gave evidence as to the fact that the light had been placed there after the accident. Mr. Rogers and Mr. Bartram gave evidence corroborating the testimony of the main witness. Mr. George Ruttan told the court of his injuries and his being unable to follow his regular vocation as the result. The court adjourned shortly after five o'clock with no decision being handed down. Argument will be held at the sitting today.

The defense in the Ruttan vs The King and Charles V. Billis as the third party was closed before the adjournment of the non-jury sitting before Honorable Mr. Justice Raney last night and at today's session the defense was opened. George Wright, patrolman for the Department of Highways on the particular road in question stated that on June 7th a red light was placed at the intersection of Provincial Highway No. 14 with road No. 2 and when a sign also denoting "Closed to Traffic". The witness also stated that both were there on June 8th.

"Was road totally closed to Traffic?" "No. Some farmers had to go up the road to get to their farms but the road was supposed to be closed to through traffic."

"Did you put up any signs between the intersections at Foxboro to the scene of accident?"

"No. Only signs to drive slow on account of loose gravel."

His Lordship:—"How long was Billis working before signs were put at Foxboro?"

"About seven or eight days."

His Lordship:— "You had nothing to do with the protection of Billis's property or the placing of signs to protect the road on which he was working?"

"No. I took my orders from resident Engineer C. A. Robbins at Bent Hope and only placed detour signs and barricade at the intersection at Foxboro."

J. Earl Morgan told the court that he, with Mr. Wright the patrolman, placed the detour sign at Foxboro and extended a rail out part way into the road to detour the traffic out the Madoc Road to the Ridge Road and thence into Stirling. The witness corroborated the evidence of the former witness.

Charles V. Billis, contractor, who had tender for work on this highway, was the last witness called for defense. He stated that he passed the intersection at Foxboro on June 7th at 5.30 in the afternoon of June 8th and at that time there was a barricade partly across the road and a detour sign. On Monday after the accident he passed the point at 5.50 a.m. and there was a light on the barricade.

WHY are some women so quick to get rid of pain? Shopping with a head that throbs. Working when they ache all over. Sometimes it's hours before they take Aspirin and get relief! More often than not these tablets the moment that some sudden ache or pain threatens their comfort and so should you. Aspirin is perfectly harmless; it cannot depress the heart. The tablets stamped Bayer are always genuine Aspirin; always the same, always safe. So it isn't sensible to suffer with a headache, a cold, neuralgic pain, or anything else that these tablets relieve almost as soon as swallowed. Buy by the bottle and save money. DEAR READERS:

Are you planning to go camping this year? There is nothing so relaxing, and yet so invigorating in the way of a holiday than two weeks, or more spent at a cottage or camping. You can far away from the noises and irritations of the city and that provides in itself a much needed rest. You have no idea how wearing city life has been on your nerves and temper until you leave it far behind, and forget them in the soothing atmosphere of the great out-doors.

Of course, there are the usual disadvantages of an outdoor vacation to consider, but who doesn't gladly face again the slight trials that are found in camping who has enjoyed such a holiday once before?

Then let us talk about your cottage. Perhaps it is in need of brightening-up this year. Well, here is a little hint in adding new colour, at little expense. And that is the use of oilcloth. Oilcloth, everywhere. For the verandah chairs, for cushions, use oilcloth coverings. You can buy oilcloth by the yard in brilliant colours, and its shininess and brightness makes a splendid medium for decorative purposes.

And a little paint finishes the trick. The summer cottage is usually the place where all the odds and ends of the household furniture finally find their way. When you are thinking of throwing away this chair and that, someone is sure to say, "Oh, save it, we can take it to the cottage." And how you mean at the sight of the old furniture. But they can be made to live happily together if you paint them. Green, in a cool dark shade, with a dash of a brighter hue to trim it will transform your pieces into gay sets. And with these two improvements, your cottage will prove much more charming, don't you think?

Fashionably yours,
LUCILLE

Advice to Lovelorn

By Beatrice Fairfax

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

As you have given good advice to many I thought I would ask you to advise me.

I am eighteen. I have been going with a boy for four months. He will not speak to me now. When I meet him he never speaks or smiles. It is two weeks since he spoke. He told a certain party he was through with me.

I like him very much. I have not seen any I like better.

Please advise me as what to do. Thanking you for your kindness, I remain.

Yours sincerely,
S. C.

I realize that you are in a most difficult position if you really care for the young man. But don't you think that as he has been so rude as to drop you without word or explanation, he is unworthy of your attention? A man like this is not deserving of a girl's affection and my best advice is to forget him as soon as you can. Remember there are other fish in the sea and a little jealousy might bring him to his senses if he really cares for you.

Beatrice Fairfax.

A Product of Divorce

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am 18. A steady young man of 21, whom I like very much, wishes to marry me. But my parents were divorced and I have seen so much of married unhappiness I prefer to remain single. Haven't I a right to do this? The boy says I have not.

HEAVY HEART.

I understand your feelings perfectly, my dear child. But do not decide upon this question, or allow yourself to fall into the habit of being unhappy without reason. Give yourself a few years at least of cheerful youth before you make any definite decisions about marriage. Although your sweet heart should not worry you, meanwhile, or attempt to over persuade you as I fear he is doing. I hope very much that sooner or later you will fall genuinely in love with him or with some one else. And when that happens, I think your fear of marriage will evaporate.

A Dangerous Love Affair

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am 28 and fast falling in love with a man who works in the same office and who loves me. He is married but his home life is unhappy. Isn't it all right for me to call myself engaged and let him get a divorce, so that we can be married?

BRUNETTE.

You are on very dangerous ground, my dear Brunnette. Unless you check it immediately, this affair of yours with an irresponsible married man is likely to be a calamity for you, for the wife's perhaps even for the inconstant husband himself. It is quite possible that this man is by no means as unhappily married as he implies that he is. While making love to you, he may be a home-breaker yourself, and don't set susceptible married men occupy their spare time philandering with you. And you must see, my dear, that it would be quite absurd to call yourself engaged to a man who is already provided with a wife.

What Men Like to Eat When Alone

Montreal, Que., May 20 (By The Canadian Press).—Where men dine after their own desires women may be interested to know what they like—The seventh dinner given by the Chanoine de Courmenes Francaise was given by the Club Saint Denis in the presence of a distinguished gathering of connoisseurs of good dishes. The menu was filled to overflowing "simple," but it was very much to the taste of the fourmets, as is evidenced by the average of 4 1-3 marks out of a possible 5.

The creme d'asperges was a bone of contention. What was it worth? Opinions differed. In the final reckoning it merited 2 1-4. The quenelles Lucullus were hardly and hotly in dish so difficult to define, was the subject of heated debate lasting well into the small hour. It was voted 4 1-2. The epinards au beurre were unanimously allowed the maximum, 5, as was the salade de laitue and the pate de l'evesque Canadien, a cheese it would have been difficult to have bettered. The tarte aux fraises took a tumble in the market and was without buyers at 3 1-2. The coffee was a good points and the wine was Cognac 1892.

THE ANTIQUE SHOP

I wonder if at night this painted chair
Tells of its gay French youth, of sword hung beaux
And ladies of the court with powdered hair.
And all the gallant days it used to know.
I fain would think that when the dusk has come
And all the people gone off to their bed
All through the shop there is a merry hum
Of talk and sober hall flocks nod their heads
And wag their chiming tongues in clear duets,
While copper kettles smile upon the shelves
To see the little Dresden statuettes
Dance round the table legs like sprightly elves;
All save yon rosewood desk, whose knowledge is
And tight sealed lips guard lovers' secrets rare.

The Women's Sphere

Melbourne, Australia, May 20—The Australasia literature society's gold medal for the best novel by an Australian in 1929 has just been awarded to Mrs. Roberston, who writes under the non-de-plume Henry Handel Richardson. The novel entitled "The Fortunes of Richard Mahony" mentioned that two other novels of outstanding merit by Australians last year were "Coonarda," by Katherine Pritchard, and "A house is Built," by M. It is stated that this is the first time that a passenger has been allowed to have a piano in his cabin.

Sydney, Australia, May 20—Sydney girls do not like factory work, Thousands of girls in this great city are unemployed, but when advertisements for factory hands are made, the response is slim. A Sydney firm asking for unskilled girl machinists found four applicants at the opening hour and only 30 turned up within two hours. "In normal time we have advertised and received no response at all," said a works manager. "Just before Christmas we advertised for 20 girls but the reply was astoundingly small."

Montreal, Que., May 20—Widows and orphans of those city employees who lose their lives in the performance of duties, are to recive a more generous compensation according to the terms of a draft by-law submitted to the City Council meeting by the city executive. In the first place, the allowance to widows is increased from $20 to $30 a month, and the children if any, benefit in similar proportions. Sons and daughters receiving an allowance of $2 more a month. The reason given in the preamble is that the cost of living being higher, the former amounts no longer suffice for the purpose.

THE "ALL IN ONE"

One for all for the "all in one" seems to be the new feminine slogan of the lingerie world. The garment that combines brassiere, girdle and panties has become an inevitable part of the intimate wardrobe and for a very obvious reason. The current silhouette demands a smooth, well-moulded foundation for a revelation of its charms. A wrinkle in one's under-garment may ruin the effect of an otherwise alluring frock or gown.

That these "all in one" garments may be both dainty and comfortable is shown in the sketch here today. The model is of soft cream-colored crepe de chine and trimmed luxuriously with Alencon lace. A casual boudoir wrap, delightful for slipping on over a nightie, or while "making up" is shown in the same lace.

Long Tresses Again Out

Women Revolt Against Lank Pins and Straggly Ends

London, May 20—The revolt of the woman who has tried to grow her hair again and does not like it is the latest phase of the war in the world of fashion, which was already busy with the battle of the long and short skirt. Hairdressing saloons in the West End of London are filled with women having their straggly ends of net-grown hair shorn again to a trim shingle. They declare that nothing will induce them to return to hairpins and "buns." Hairpins with ball ends so that they cannot scratch or irritate the scalp are offered as an inducement to women to grow their hair again and many kinds of clips designed to hold untidy places in place are now on the market.

The "pullover" and "sou'wester" hats that are so popular were designed to hide hair growing again on the nape of the neck where it had been cut. But women are not greatly impressed. For sport, for swimming, and for business, short hair remains the most practical fashion.

BOXING TRAINER DIES SUDDENLY

Leo Flynn, Former Manager of Jack Dempsey, Dies

New York, May 20—Leo P. Flynn, 51 veteran boxing manager, who directed Jack Dempsey in his ring comeback after losing the heavyweight title, died at his home Monday of pneumonia. He contracted a cold last week while playing golf, his favorite sport.

Flynn, who had spent most of his life with horses and who had managed as many as 30 at one time, died with only one at his bedside. He was Benny Clapp, a flyweight. Clapp held Flynn in his arms as oxygen was administered in a vain attempt to stave off death. Flynn had been in a coma most of the time since Friday. Oddly enough, Flynn never managed a champion.

Two of Flynn's most prominent fighters were, Bill Brennan, heavyweight, who went 12 rounds with Jack Dempsey before he was knocked out in 1920, and Dave Shade, middleweight.

After Dempsey lost his title to Gene Tunney, Flynn became chief adviser and handler for Dempsey in his fight against Jack Sharkey and the second Dempsey-Tunney bout at Chicago.

Flynn was one of boxing's most picturesque characters. He began his career by handling third-rate boxers, and many times he had more than a dozen of his stable fighting in as many cities on the same night. His wife Kate, worked with him in handling his fighters and was well-known for her ability in this respect. At one time Flynn was matchmaker for the old Madison Square Garden under Tex Rickard.

The nearest Flynn ever came to managing a champion was in 1919 when Dave Shade, then a welterweight, was the victim of an unpopular decision over Mickey Walker, then welterweight champion.

James Breaks Loose

His effective style seemed to have given him the coveted amateur trophy when Jones suddenly struck his stride and began to contribute 3's and 4's with only an occasional 5. He "went out in 39 in the afternoon, missing a putt at the sixth, and taking a four at the par three ninth, where his tee shot was pulled into the rough, his second side was in the rough, and he had to make a great shot to get his four when a five seemed more likely. At the tenth his tee shot was bunkered and his second in the rough and he took five.

However, he had only one more error in his system. At the short 15th his tee shot was 15 feet from the cup and he took three puts to get down. When a birdie two was a possibility, he installed the long putt and had a three-footer left.

Just in front of Jones, Brownlow took his unhurried way, playing the 18 holes in even fours. At the 16th his game weakened and he finish ed with three fives for a 78.

JONES CAPTURES GOLF TOURNEY

Sunningdale, Eng., May 20. — The Hon. W. C. Brownlow, son of Lord Lurgan, gave the United States cup champion, Bobby Jones, a stiff battle for the gold vase of Golf Illustrated yesterday and was nosed out by only one stroke in a 36-hole medal competition. A big field of amateurs took part.

The son of Lord Lurgan made a 69 in the morning and a 5 in the afternoon, while Jones, playing very poorly in the morning needed 75 for the 18 holes but he turned in a 68 in the afternoon.

The record for the newly reconstructed Sunningdale course was twice bettered during the day. Brownlow's 68 set a new mark in the first round and Jones shaved it by a stroke a few hours later.

Brownlow is one of the most picturesque figures in British golf. A tall, spare youth, he appears on the links dressed in ordinary street clothes and wearing gloves. He never seems to be participating in a match except when he walks over to his caddy and takes a club, he then makes his shot, returns the club to the caddy and walks on.

LACROSSE WILL OPEN THIS WEEK

Oshawa Rounding Into Shape for the Big Series

Oshawa, May 20.—The Oshawa General Motors Senior Lacrosse Club, Mann Cup holders and Canadian contenders for the international championship games to be played in Toronto during Shriners' week, are fast rounding into championship form and are confident of starting off the season with a win over the strong St. Simon's squad of Toronto in the opening game here. Only Shep Shapley, considered by many to be the cleverest defense man in the game, is missing from last year's crack team, but in his place is the famed Ty Silk, one of the greatest defense exponents in the game. In goal, the ever-popular Phil Maddens, last year's final Ohsek Davidson and Duddy Steele supporting. Hers again is an all-star line-up that will give the strongest opposition trouble in keeping them out. Inside home will again see Toots White and Bob Armstrong in their old places. The alternate forward line will likely be composed of Smoke Fox, Hall and Hamilton, new additions to stellar performers. Whyte Bond and Casey Luke fill out the squad.

Hard workouts are the order of the day in the lacrosse camps here as both St. Simon's and Brampton, the latter Oshawa's age-old enemies, and the former composed of the cream of Toronto lacrosse stars, are both expected to ran the world's champions a close battle for group honors. A. E. Lyon will present the Oshawa team with medals emblematic of Mann Cup supremacy previous to the opening game here Wednesday afternoon. The game scheduled for six p.m. Wednesday will likely attract a record crowd of fans to the Alexandra Park, and officials anticipate the heaviest season on record from the standpoints of both games and attendance, that the national game has ever enjoyed here.

TIGERS SCORED DOUBLE VICTORY

Reading Keystones Broke a Nine Game Losing Streak

Detroit, May 20.—The Detroit Tigers moved into seventh place in the American League standings yesterday by virtue of a 5 to 4 ten-inning victory in the first game and a 4 to 1 win in the second game of a doubleheader with the St. Louis Browns, who dropped into the last position.

The Tigers clinched the second game in the third inning when four hits, including a triple by Wyatt and a wild pitch by Gray scored three runs.

Detroit won out in the tenth of the first game after a four-run rally in the eighth had tied the score when Charley Gehringer raced across on Alexander's force out.

Gehringer was the individual batting star with six hits in eight times at bat. Akers had five safeties in seven tries and Gullic led the Browns with five hits in nine tries.

Montreal, May 20. — The Reading Keystoners broke a nine-game losing streak yesterday afternoon when they took an 11-inning 3-to-1 decision from the Montreal Royals.

A double by Lotus with two on and two out in the 11th won the Keystoners. They had previously tied the score in the eighth without the aid of a hit. A walk and two successive sacrifices and an infield out turning the trick.

Bell and Grampp limited the Royals to six scattered hits. Smith gave the Keys 11 but was tight in the pinches Pfiel scored the only Royals run.

JOCKEY FICHON RELEASED

Churchill Downs, May 22.—It was learned here today that S. S. Combs, president of the Kentucky Association which licenses a string of horses, has released from his employ Jockey L. Fichon. The reason for the action has been cacling at Churchill Downs.

REVIVE FRONTENAC LEAGUE

Kingston, May 20.—If present plans materialize, there will be a revival of the Frontenac County Baseball League this Summer. It is hoped to have the league in full swing next month.

"Blind as a bat" is a common expression but a bat has such acute powers of vision that it may almost be said to see with its skin.

PICTORIAL GOLF INSTRUCTIONS
(BY H. B. MARTIN)

Long Follow Through Gives Direction

The unseen action in golf is the flattening of the ball on the clubface face at the moment of the impact and during the follow through. We know that the soft rubber can be dented but just how much is a problem. Experts agree that the follow through will last for a distance of six inches at least. It all depends on just how hard the ball is hit.

The longer the follow through the better the direction. As the ball is hit there is some time required for the ball to flatten and then some time for it to rebound after the club loses it's influence. This amounts to about the 100th part of a second.

SHIKAT EXTENDED TO WIN

New York, May 20.—Richard Shikat, claimant of the world's heavyweight championship, defeated Rudy Dusek with a double toe hold after 74 minutes two seconds of wrestling here last night.

The sea-horse differs from all other fish in having a tail that can be twined around stems and used to anchor the fish to a certain spot. It gets its name from the resemblance of its head to that of a horse.

MUMPS STRIKE GIANTS ROSTER

Travis Jackson Star Shortstop Out for Three Weeks

New York, May 20. — With Travis Jackson, star shortstop and captain, out of the game for three weeks with the mumps, it was feared that the disease might become epidemic among the New York Giants.

Jackson is the second member of the team to contract the mumps, Wally Roettger, who is just recovering from an attack of mumps, brought the malady to the Giants. Homer Peel had the disease in the St. Louis Cardinals' training camp, and when Roettger came to the Giants in a trade for Outfielder George Fisher, he brought the mumps with him.

Dr. William J. Walsh told the United Press that every member of the Giants had been exposed to the disease.

"Every member of the Giants who did not have the mumps when he was young is liable to contract the disease," said Dr. Walsh. "The period of incubation is from 16 to 21 days. Jack son showed symptoms on the seventeenth day."

Jackson became ill during the first game of Sunday's double header against the Boston Braves. He was confined to his home today and will be out of the game for at least three weeks, if there are no complications, according to Dr. Walsh.

Roettger, who was taken ill about two weeks ago, will be ready to play again on Wednesday, Dr. Walsh said.

With Jackson out of the game, the Giants have been forced to pull the fastest Dave Bancroft off the third base coaching lines and insert him into the game at shortstop.

The outbreak of the mumps comes at a most inopportune time for the Giants, who are battling for a top in the National League pennant race. After five straight defeats, the Giants finally broke their losing streak by defeating the Braves Sunday in the second game of a double-header, 3 to 2 in 11 innings.

The victory, however, did not prevent Brooklyn from taking the Giants' place at the top of the league. The Giants are only half a game out of first place, but a combination of results in a single day could knock them all the way to fifth place, so tight i sthe National League race.

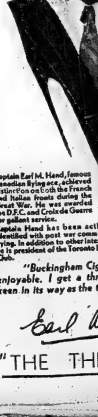
LITTLE BENNY'S NOTE BOOK

Saturday morning me and Puds Sim ons waved out to the park for something to do, and 2 ladies was sitting on 2 stools painting 2 pictures of the trees and things.

Proving they was artists, one having red hair and freckles and the other one just having freckles, the red headed one saying, O, do look at those 2 boys, we must get them in the picture, their just the tipes, you know what Professor Dibbney says, he says a land scape without a human touch is a landscape without a sole. Wouldent you 2 boys like to stand under that big tree and look up as though you see a herds nest or something? she sed.

O, they wunt us to be real artist models, Puds sed.

And he got under the tree and kopp on looking up like she sed, being all ete for a little while and then standing to get monotonias, especially in the neck, Puds wispering to me, Hay, lets serprize them and change our position.



And the next time the 2 ladies looked up they had a intirely different view on account of me and Puds both being bent away over looking at them between our knees, the red headed one saying, Now some one boys, that is sum nice, take your poses like good boys.

Which we did, like regular artist models, exy the next time they both had their heds down we both quick ducked in back of the tree, and when they looked up again all they could see was our heds sticking out on each side with funny inpressions and nothing but red hair saying. How rediculous, now do you think thats funny?

Me and Puds started to laff like anything. Proving we did, and the 2 ladies wouldent leave us be artist models any more and we kept on laffing, and every time we thawt about how funny it was we giggled like sumthing, being about once a minnit for half a hour.

Dust Causes Asthma. Even a little speck too small to see will lead to asthma, which in two words can describe. The walls of the breathing tubes contract and it seems as if the very life is passing. From this condition Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Asthma Remedy brings the user to perfect rest. It relieves the passages and normal breathing is firmly established again. Hundreds of testimonials received.

TRENTON HARBOR IS BUSY PLACE

(Special by Staff Reporter)

TRENTON, Ont., May 20.—Trenton's harbour was a busy place over the week end, three freighters calling and leaving again. The Mara Lydia was in on Saturday and left within a few hours, while on Sunday morning the Matt Picken left port for the first time this year. The Picken started for Oswego where a cargo of coal is waiting. On Monday the Glen Allen arrived, early in the morning, and left for Montreal about nine-thirty o'clock.

Five Postponed Softball Games

(Special by Staff Reporter)

TRENTON, Ont., May 20.—The rain of the past few days has certainly disrupted the Town League softball schedule, and there are now five postponed games which will have to be played off at the end of the schedule. The grounds will be too wet to play on tonight, but it is likely the games will start again tomorrow night.

Vandals Destroy Flower Gardens

(Special by Staff Reporter)

TRENTON, Ont., May 20.—Vandals robbed several flower gardens on the east side of the town over the week end, it was stated yesterday. Several residents have complained to the police that their tulip beds were absolutely destroyed by the flower bed robbers, and if they are caught, it will go hard with them. Over Saturday and Sunday night the High School's flower beds, Farrar's, at Carroll's, C. W. Lott's, Mrse. Holley's and Harry Bowler's were robbed. A reward has been offered for the arrest or information leading to the arrest of the culprits.

SHARP WATCH ON STIRLING RUINS

Will Rebuild Block Destroyed By Fire On Monday

(Special by Staff Reporter)

STIRLING, Ont., May 20.—Although still smouldering the ruins of the Ackers garage which was completely destroyed early Monday morning are no longer dangerous to other property. A sharp watch was kept yesterday but the heavy rain finished the work started by the firemen. Mr. Ackers was undecided as to whether he would rebuild, but Mr. H. C. Martin, whose insurance office was destroyed, declared that they would start work on a new building on the same site as before almost immediately. The damage is estimated at $25,000.00 and all parties concerned are fairly well protected by insurance, although their losses will be heavy enough.

EXPECT TO USE BRIDGE IN FALL

(Special by Staff Reporter)

TRENTON, Ont., May 20.—Work is being speedily rushed through on the new overhead bridge west of Trenton, and large numbers of men have been employed there. A whole fleet of a dozen huge dump trucks are stationed there as well as giant steam shovels, cranes, pile drivers and various other machines common to a large construction job. There is no doubt that the Grant Bros. will not have this job completed in the five months they have allowed themselves, and traffic will likely be using the new bridge late in October.

TRENT RIVER WATERS RISE WITH RAINFALL

(Special by Staff Reporter)

TRENTON, Ont., May 20.—The water in the Trent River has risen several inches since a week ago, until now it is washing over the Government dock at Trenton. It is just barely at the top of the Canada Steamship Lines dock, but according to rivermen the water will go ever higher within the next few days. No serious results are anticipated however.

CANNING FACTORIES PREPARE FOR WORK

(Special by Staff Reporter)

TRENTON, Ont., May 20.—Canning factories throughout the district are preparing for a big season's work, which will start about the last week in June, when the pea crop should be ready. Canning vegetables is one of the most important industries of this district, both to the farmer and the town dweller, and practically every factory is installing more machinery or overhauling the machinery used last year.

TRENTON TO MARK HOLIDAY ON MONDAY

(Special by Staff Reporter)

TRENTON, Ont., May 20.—Mayor Fraser has issued a proclamation to the effect that Monday, May 26th, will be celebrated as a Civic Holiday instead of Saturday, May 24th., Queen Victoria's birthday. This no doubt will be welcome news to almost every one for Saturday here is Market Day, and the whole week would be disrupted were it a holiday. The school children too will no doubt welcome the proclamation.

COMPANY CONTROL RESPECTING FILMS

OTTAWA, May 20.—Governmental action, along the lines of an amendment of the Companies Act, "to provide for control of amusements of this type" was suggested on the floor of the Commons yesterday by Hon. Rioh and R. Bennett, Conservative Leader, in connection with the control of the Famous Players Canadian Corporation.

Rising before the orders of the day were called, Mr. Bennett said: 'I should like to ask the Prime Minister whether he is in a position to answer the question raised Friday by the member for Vancouver Centre (Hon. Harry H. Stevens) regarding an alleged moving-picture monopoly in Canada and the difficulties which have been experienced by the minority shareholders in the assertion of their position, and whether or not the Government contemplates taking any action in the matter."

SEASONAL TARIFF ON FRUIT PROPOSED

OTTAWA, May 20—A major change in the budget tariff proposals—a modification of the fruit and vegetable protection from an original year-round protection to a "seasonal" protection only—was announced by Finance Minister Dunning at the conclusion of today's session of the Commons, devoted almost wholly to consideration in Committee of Ways and Means of proposed tariff changes.

Jeers and laughter from Conservative benches greeted the Minister's intimation that as the items were reached he would propose amendments. It was proposed, he said, to limit the minimum specific rates to seasons, and an effort would be made to overcome the original difficulty of having growers all across Canada agree upon the season for which protection against American imports were required.

PRIZE WAS UNLUCKY

Hobart, Tasmania, May 20 (CP)—When Mrs. Beatrice Hallam of Sandy Beach, near here, won $125 at the races, she fulfilled an old dea by immediately buying a second hand motor car. It has involved her in four police court cases since. The police magistrate, on the latest occasion when she was fined $5 for dangerous driving told her it was plain she had no money to run a car and advised her to get rid of it even if she had to drop it in the river.

PRISONERS GET SERVICE

Adelaide, Western Australia, May 20 (CP)—Prisoners in this state in future will have their hair "cut in a manner not to disfigure them." They will receive a labor gratuity of 12 cents a week. They will be allowed to buy razors and shave themselves, and to smoke in their cells until nine o'clock at night. These are a few of the privileges in amendments to the prison act approved by the executive council.

Rain or no rain the reception last night just wouldn't be discouraged but came through with flying colours. I didn't do much dial chasing but stuck with Cheerio most of the evening perfectly content with the programs they offered.

Imperial Joycasters caught and held my attention for an hour of solid enjoyment then Luigi Romanelli's orchestra came along and I didn't have the heart to go elsewhere. Right after that Fred Culley and his Royal Yorkers put in an appearance and then I found it an impossibility to leave.

At 6.30 EST of course, the Landt Trio with Howard White at the piano will open with the brand new song "Ro-Ro-Rollin' Along" and conclude with "Telling It To The Daisies," a sentimental Spring song. The program is heard over WJZ and chain.

Lew. White is an organ recital over CKGW at 6.30 EST. Yes, I know you'll be there with bells on.

Ruby gave us a pleasant surprise last night, didn't he fans, when he introduced Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Lowe to us during his broadcast. Eddie is the boy that co-starred with Victor McLaglen in "Cockeyed World", "Hot For Paris." Says You!

The second broadcast of "Mardi Gras" over WABC and system tonight at 8 EST and will bring to the air two orchestras, a surprise guest artist and many vocal artists.

The Happy Wonder Bakers will present Percy Wenrich in a program composed of his own melodies including "When You Wore a Tulip" and the rollicking war-time tune "Where Oh Where Do We Go From Here." This program will be heard over WEAF and chain at 8.30 EST.

Ray Perkins of the Crush Dry Cronies program goes on the air tonight and sing two light ditties "On the Sunny Side of the Street" and "Free and Easy". Beginning at 9.30 EST and heard over WJZ.

Harwich, England, May 19.—Shamrock 5th starts with Sir Thomas Lipton in it to try for America's cup, was easily today on the time allowance in her second race against bigger yachts.

Jack Miner and the Birds

and Some Things I Know About Nature

by

Jack Miner Himself

"COPYRIGHT AND FOR SALE IN BOOK FORM AT ALL BOOK STORES"

Now there are only a few, jority of us humans brings is t[he]? We are too slow to observe.

of the hundreds of convincing facts I have personally observed which compel me to believe that birds can smell. I have no positive proof that they can. But I know they can smell just as much as I know they can hear.

I will tell you how to prove it to your own satisfaction. When it is snowing, take a piece of fresh meat that is cold, and lay it down in the centre of a field. Let it snow under, and if there are crows around see how quickly they will find it! Or if you live in the northern country, throw a piece of meat into the snow and let it drift under; the next morning watch the jay locate it. I refer to the snow because it is the best natural cover on earth and will give the fairest test, but if you are where there is no snow to try it out, just take some chaff, straw, or sawdust and cover your bait with that.

Now I will not say that crow or blackbird will smell cold bird's-eggs best if the eggs are warm and sweaty from their long candles, birds will locate the nest by the use of their nostrils. "Well," you say, "that cannot be; there was a crow came right up to the barn while I was in there." Yes, but remember he was accustomed to you being around there. Go to the woods where this same crow has been shot at, and see how close you will get to him if the wind is in his favor. The great trouble with the ma-

I once saw a man run bang into a stone wall; his excuse was that he did not see it. When I was a boy in Ohio I went with an Englishman to dig out a rabbit. When we got near the end of the hole Old Jack, as we called him, dropped on his side and ran his arm right in, clear up to his shoulder. I was of course peeking very closely to see the rabbit, but the instant I saw him pulling out black and white fur I retreated backwards over a pile of sand, looking back just in time to see Old Jack get it right in the eyes. And say! he came bounding out of that cavity without being urged, snorting, sneezing and coughing, and with his long hair thoroughly powdered with yellow sand—and something worse. He went here and there and all over at the same moment, trying to gather all the sand in the country in each hand to wash his eyes out with. I was of course all alone and had to conceal my joy. My boy observer did not last long, for this poor fellow nearly strangled to death and it was fully fifteen minutes before he could speak; but finally, after tying up at me with his eyes and face all apparently washed into one red blister, he choakingly said, "Jack, He didn't smell the bugger till hafter He 'ad 'im by the toyle."

CHAPTER XXIII

The Canada Goose

Now I have told you that by protecting the one swallowy nest at our lille shed there were twenty-five nests selected our site. Standing three decoys on the wheel, I dug myself in on the edge of the corn field. I say dug myself in, but not much, as the water was close to the surface; so I dug a coffin-like cavity about six inches deep and covered myself with a blanket which was, of course, the exact color of the ground. Three corners of the blanket were staked and tied fast, arranged to cover this muddy coffin. Then I gathered weeds and so forth and lined this grave to keep me out of the mud.

At the faintest sign of day the other fellow took the old horse and all the rest of our junk and drove fully half a mile away. At last, just before sunrise my eyes caught a dark streak in the sky, away to the south. So I examined the old gun, which was loaded with swanshot, lay down on my back in this hog hole, covering myself with the blanket and holding it firmly with my left hand with the gun in my right. There I lay with just my eyes out, my heart almost beating the ground into a pulp. It seemed so long I thought I must have been mistaken; they couldn't have been wild geese. I quietly called, twice, "A-honk! A-honk!" Just then I heard a low reply to the east of me. Rolling my eye in that direction, here were the eight geese going quarterly by. So I gave another low "A-honk!" and to my delight they turned and saw the decoys, answering as they bowed their wings to alight with them.

But the keen eyes of this old gander detected that they were false. Fortunately for me when he sailed from the decoys he swung my way, and just when they got in the right place I shot the blanket off with my left hand; raising the gun and my body at the same time I fired, slilting down. It is the first shot the leader-rumpled up with fourteen swanshot driven almost through him, and his male start ed to follow long before he struck the ground. He leaving two distinct puffs of feathers floating away on the frosty air, the six young screaming, lifted their wings and directions for their lives away from their fallen parents. They went screaming back in the direction from which they came.

As soon as my chum arrived we had a good laugh when we looked at the decoys and the real geese. We soon loaded all up and could hardly get home quick enough to repaint those blocks of wood. Then they looked O.K. and fooled many a goose after that. But the weight of these geese was far from twenty-five pounds, the gander weighing exactly ten pounds and his mate one pound less.

I hunted geese every spring from then on, but they soon got wise and moved their stopping place about eight miles west to what was then called Silver's Marsh. I even followed them up there and secured an odd one now and then. I never killed over six in one season. This will give you an idea of how scarce they were in this part.

BRICKLAYERS AT SAULT AGAINST NON-UNION WORK

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont., May 17 —The announced intention of the union bricklayers of this city not to lay brick on foundations constructed by non-union labor is not likely to affect any of the larger construction jobs scheduled to take place in the Sault area this season, Secretary J. W. Johnston of the Bricklayers' Union said this morning. It is only on the smaller jobs, such as dwelling and repair work, that the non-union men are employed, Gardner said.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont., May 17 —The death occurred at 6 o'clock this morning of Canada, one of the triplets born six months ago to Mr. and Mrs. A. Morandini, Albert street West. All three children have been very ill with pneumonia, and the surviving two have had one lung removed by day in the hope of saving their lives. But one of them cannot live. The two now living are named Dominion and Ontario.

MISS E. MCCULLAGH IS RELECTED PRES.

Kingston, Ont., May 19—Miss Ella McCullagh, of Kingston, was re-elected president of the Eastern Ontario Ladies' Softball Association at the annual meeting held here last night. Miss N. Seddon, of Ottawa, is vice-president and Mrs. S. A. Salisbury, of Kingston, continues as secretary-treasurer.

Kingston, Ottawa, Belleville and Brockville have entered the association.

Are You Self Reliant?

If you are, you'll want to remain so. But if you do not provide for old age, you will lose your independence. Small sums NOW in Canadian Government Annuities will prevent this. At 65 you will still be self-reliant and looking forward to an old age of peace and happiness.

RIDE a C·C·M· BICYCLE

CANADIAN SPORTS WEEK MAY 17 - 24

TO Work..... School Play.

JUST think of it! You can buy a C.C.M. today for the lowest price in 30 years!

The same reliable C.C.M. quality, too, that has made C.C.M. bicycles the overwhelming choice of riders all over Canada.

The price has come down simply because more people are riding C.C.M.'s than ever before. C.C.M. output has increased so greatly that they can manufacture in bigger lots, which naturally lowers the cost of making each bicycle.

Your nearest C.C.M. dealer will give you the new 1930 C.C.M. catalogue, or write to Canada Cycle & Motor Co., Limited, Weston (Ontario), Montreal, Winnipeg or Vancouver.

Remember only a C.C.M. has these six big features—

1. C.C.M. 20-year Nickel Plating.
2. C.C.M. Tripler Crank Hanger.
3. C.C.M. Improved Hercules Coaster Brake.
4. Three Coats of C.C.M. Enamel baked on over a Coat of Rust-Proof.
5. Gibson Pedals (on most models).
6. Dunlop Tires.

AIR LINES LINK C.P.R. SERVICES

Can Carry Merchandise Up to 2000 Pounds in Weight

Toronto, May 19.—Sixteen European air lines are now linked with the Canadian Pacific Express Company and parcels may be routed from Canada to London and relayed thence to practically any country on the continent by air express," stated T. F. McDonnell, president of the company in an interview last night. "In addition to this," continued Mr. McDonnell, "the Canadian Pacific Express acts in Europe as passenger agent for the various air lines, and passengers can book their tickets at its London and Paris offices, or hire air taxis for private trips to Europe. Special machines can also be hired from our agents to carry merchandise between any European points up to 2,000 lbs. weight." Mr. McDonnel said that air express can be commenced use throughout Eastern Canada and in the prairie provinces. In the east the service ran between Windsor, London, Hamilton, Toronto and Ottawa and thence to Montreal for Quebec and Rimouski to connect with incoming and out-going Liners. The express matter taken off a liner at Rimouski is taken by plane to Toronto and reaches there before the steamer reaches Quebec. The president pointed out that daily air express service was in operation between Winnipeg and Calgary, via Regina, Moosejaw and Medicine Hat and between Regina and Edmonton, via Saskatoon and North Battleford. "The air map of Canada is changing from day to day," concluded Mr. McDonnell. With the advent of new airdromes air transportation is becoming an important factor in the life of the country. The service is so arranged that shipments may be moved by com bining air and regular rail express. Shipments so handled are routed at a flat rate from point of origin to destination.

Kellogg's PEP BRAN FLAKES

Gringo Privateer

By

Peter B. Kyne

"They did. And Bruce cleaned up on them, coming out twice ever came to trial. They just disappeared out of the country."

"Buried where they fell, I daresay. Well, that's my policy, sir. Never bother to arrest a cow thief. The law is liable to get balled up. His simplest and cheapest to open fire the minute you come upon him. Safer, too, because if they're hell bent for it—"

"Have you ever killed a man, Mr. Burney?"

CHAPTER III

Mr. Burney's handsome face puckered in distress. "Oh, no, sir," he confessed. "I haven't even had a desire to kill one. That is, if you speak in a professional sense. As a soldier I imagine that in the course of three years of active service I accounted for my share."

The king grimaced disgustedly. "Then why the devil are you applying to me for a job that requires a professional and a specialist?" he demanded truculently.

"Your pardon, sir-or, I have not applied for the job. Ido, however apply for a job as a rider in the employ of El Rancho, because it has seemed to me that what you require here is an unusually —er—hardy crew that will be loyal to the payroll, and you might start your recruiting with me. Of course I am not insensible to the probability that the most loyal and devoted of the crew might come under the eye of Your Majesty and get knighted. I am not however, a professional killer. I am not hiring out as such, even in the present extremely low state of my finances, nor shall I ever hire out as such. I shall always, I trust, remember that I am a gentleman and leave rough, rude brawling to those who have indulged in it since boyhood and think it manly."

His Majesty murmured in a low voice something just a thrifle coarse. "I'm disappointed," he confessed. "I had a hunch you were just a gift from God and if you would guarantee to rid me of Martin Bruce and Miguel Gallegos there is no doubt but that you would be knighted."

"It's not well to judge men hastily, sir," the young man assured him. "Precipitate men are not apt to comb gray hairs."

The king pounded his library table. "What I require, young man," he said, "is a general manager with the guts of a bear."

"Ever think of tying to one with the cunning of a fox, sir?"

The king stared at him. "How do you do, Mr. Fox!"

"You flatter me, sir."

"I'll take a chance on you, young fellow. Tomorrow you'll take your entrance examination and if you pass it, you go on the Bardin payroll. Once you're there I'll have my eye on you. Know what day it is tomorrow?"

"The Fourth of July, sir."

"You bet. And there's a barbecue and rodeo for the whole countryside here tomorrow. Can you ride?"

Ken Burney shrugged. "My pony," he murmured depreciatingly. Evidently all of his Castilian blood has not been bred out of him.

"Well, if you want that job you'll ride for it."

His guest bowed. "The king's request is always tantamount to an order."

"You quit calling me king and Your Majesty, will you? Why do you do that?"

"Because everybody else in this country does."

"I don't believe it. I've never been called such names to my face heretofore."

"Everybody's afraid to. But then you've got so much money and land and cattle you're a personage and entitled to a courtesy title. And I never say anything behind a man's back that I will not say to his face."

Whatever reply the king purposed making to this semi-impertinent statement remained unspoken, for Ken Burney saw him glance toward the door, and his fierce glance soften and a smile of winning tenderness light up his rugged old face. Instantly Burney stood erect, turned and found himself facing a girl who stood hesitant in the doorway.

"Come in, my dear," the king entreated. Burney saw the girl's glance rest for an instant on his chaps and sombrero lying on the divan; then her diffidence disappeared and she advanced to her father's side without paying the slightest attention to his visitor.

"Father, this is just one of the old man's riders," Burney decided. "Wonder if the king will introduce me. Gosh, she's beautiful as an army with banners!"

The king did. "This young man, Muriel," he announced, "is Kenneth Burney, son of an old cattleman friend of mine in California. Mr. Burney, this is my daughter, Muriel. Mr. Burney is dining with us tonight, Muriel."

Miss Muriel favored the young man with a bright smile and a reserved nod. "I see you're riding through Mr. Burney."

"Oh, no," he corrected her. "To-morrow I'm going to work for your father as a top cow-hand."

"Maybe," the king corrected him enigmatically. "Mr. Burney," he explained to the girl, "is a drug-store cowboy and before he goes to work for me he has to pass an entrance examination."

"He'll ride Geronimo tomorrow bull dog a big, peculiar steer and rope a couple of calves to prove his social standing."

The butler came in to announce dinner and, to the amusement of the king, Mr. Burney gallantly offered his arm to Miss Muriel, who seemed undecided whether to accept it or not. In all her life none of her father's cowhands had ever been so bold.

"Oh, take it, take it," the king ordered. "He's used to high society. It comes natural to him, the impertinent pup."

"He's not an impertinent pup," Muriel defended, and accepted the proffered arm.

Arrived in the dining-room the strange, guest tucked Muriel and her chair in under the table, waited respectfully for the king to seat his huge bulk into his chair and then sat down himself. Muriel seized the opportunity, while Burney's gaze was fixed upon her father, to steal a swift glance of curiosity at their guest.

She saw a man under thirty years of age, about six feet tall, straight from shoulder to hip, slim, small-boned, wiry weighing perhaps a hundred and sixty-pounds. His head was nobly formed and covered with an extraordinarily thick thatch of jet-black wavy hair; his eyes were very dark blue with heavy long lashes that caused one to think, at first sight, that the young man had accumulated some soot in them. A slightly bended Castilian nose arose out of a patrician countenance, his teeth were even, white and well cared for. He was decidedly an outdoor type of man, tanned to a bricky brown. Also he was thirty days overdue on a haircut.

Muriel noticed that he disposed of his soup without gustatory riot. When dining with the king of his small world he served after the soup, came an entrée and that Mr. Burney chose, with unerring precision, the salad fork: here she made up her mind that the king had not erred socially by inviting the wandering cowboy to dinner at his castle.

"What a vast difference between grub and food," Mr. Burney sighed presently. "It is a hard two days' ride between your domain and Martin Bruce's ranch, sir, and there are no inns enroute. Having left Mr. Bruce's employ very suddenly and in bad odor I did not carry any sustenance with me, so naturally my appetite is keener than usual."

"Get fired?" His Majesty queried.

"No, sir. Just quit."

"At the start of the calf round-up? Must have have had a fight with some body."

"I did, sir."

"Who won?"

"I did, sir."

"Then," said the king, "you must have had a run-in with Martin Bruce or his riding boss and quit to avoid being fired."

"You are very astute, Your Royal Highness."

"I told you not to call me such names", the king warned.

"You told me not to allude to you as Your Majesty or king. I respect your wishes. But you are a prince to invite me to dinner and give me a civilized room and bath for the night; hence I now addressed you according to your real rank."

"I love that," Muriel cried, . "The newspapers always refer to Dad as The Cattle King."

"I don't like it," His Majesty growled "You'll have to admit for it, darling," his daughter assured him. "Go right ahead, Mr. Burney, I like it."

"Thank you, Princess."

"Will you try some of these brandied peaches, Sir Knight?"

"Rubbish," growled the king. "Now, look here, what you and that coyote, Martin Bruce, quarrel about young man?"

"I wouldn't sell him my horse—and he offered a whopping price for him too. A thousand dollars."

"I'll give you two thousand dollars for him."

"Sorry, sir. He's not for sale."

"Two thousand dollars is a lot of money for a cowboy, and I'll bet a dollar cigar you haven't two dollars to your name."

"I'll collect that cigar after dinner, Your Highness. I have three dollars."

"Well, at least you can't be accused of quarrel about the horse," the king retorted smilingly, 'although I did think I'd like to trade you out of him—for my daughter. I want a horse I can trust for her."

"With your permission, sir, I shall be happy to present him to the lady after the rodeo tomorrow, provided you will pay the expressage on a duplicate of him, now on pasture at the Santa Ines Rancho in California."

His Majesty laid down his knife and fork and stared at Ken Burney. "Oh, reckless improvident Hidalgo!" he ordered. "Your friends will have to pass the hat if you're ever given a decent funeral."

"Oh, say not so, Your Highness. Most girls have a string to them and there's one attached to this one. In return for my horse I charge you, sir, with the responsibility of fleeing to it that I am decently interred; and I warn you that my funeral will be expensive because you'll have to ship me back to Paso Pinos, Calif., to lie with my ancestors, and, as you probably know, the railroad charges one full fare for a corpse and somebody has to accompany the body. Still I'll not stick you too deeply. You may omit flowers."

CHAPTER IV

A chrisk of laughter from Muriel testified to her appreciation of the grim wit of their guest. "Do you anticipate boasting with somebody, Sir Knight?" she queried.

"Joust once," he answered gravely, and again the girl's merry laughter filled the room. But the king found in both these remarks no seed for merriment.

"What did you do to Martin Bruce?" he demanded.

"Oh, not very much sir. He called me a greaser, so I pulled him off his horse and slapped him over a half-acre of his ranch. He's about fifty years old, you know, so I treated him with a certain measure of consideration."

"He's as hard and tough as rawhide, son, and can still whip any man on his payroll. You trifled with death, my boy."

"Not necessarily. I took his gun away from him first, broke it and threw gun and cartridges into the sage brush before massaging him."

The king was very serious. "Were any of his men present?"

"Four."

"And nobody interfered."

"No, sir. It's the rule on the Triangle B that every man shall kill his own rats, and I imagine they all expected the old man to manhandle me before the fight should terminate. When they saw he was outclassed, they crowded up and would have manhandled me for him, but the old boy played fair. He warned them off, so I quit, rode back to the chuck wagon, packed my dunnage, on my spare horse and drifted. I didn't even wait to collect two months' pay I had coming to me."

"You young idiot" the king warned soberly, "Martin Bruce is as deadly as a side-winder and nurses his grudges. Son, you'll have to beat him to the draw — and that's something no man has ever done. Can you shoot?"

"Rather well from a rest. Miss Muriel, I do believe I'll sample those brandied peaches."

But the king was worried. "I advise you to get out of this country and do it tomorrow, son," he warned.

"In effect, sir, you promised me a riding job if I passed my entrance exams tomorrow. If I fail I'll get out. If I pass I'll stay. I tell you again, I've made up my mind to go to work for you and behave myself and grow up with your business. I've got to settle down, sir, and the sooner I do that the better."

"You'll die with your boots on, I tell you."

"Thank you, sir, for that comforting assurance."

"Will Martin Bruce really attempt to kill you, Mr. Burney?" the princess queried. Under the bandinage of the two men she detected a note of grim reality.

"I very greatly fear he will, Miss Muriel. He's a rough, tough, bad old man and the slaying of an enemy does not particularly jar his conscience. His conscience, in such matters, is rather worn down, like the teeth of a very old cow."

"But what are you going to do about it, Mr. Burney?"

"I don't know. I haven't given the matter any serious thought. Miss Muriel. Of course I'll keep my eyes open and when I meet Mr. Bruce I will with the most shots. I shall probably kill. I've seen Martin Bruce toss a small oyster can in the air, pull his gun and hit it six times out of six before the can struck the ground. He keeps in practice."

"A regular Annie Oakley," the king murmured.

"And you?" the princess persisted to Burney.

"Well, if I shoot at something quite generally I hit it but I have to take my own sweet time about it. And in an argument with Martin Bruce that weakness of mine would be just a hundred per cent fatal."

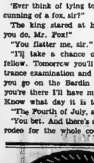
"Dad, he will have to leave this country," the princess announced with decision.

"Well, I'm not holding him, am I?" her father retorted irritately.

"You will leave, will you not, Mr. Burney?"

He shook his black poll half sadly. "I have made certain plans and I cannot now unmake them, Princess." He who would have an omelette must break eggs—and the omelette I crave looks like a good job in the employ of the Bardin Land & Cattle Company. I decided, from what I heard while in Martin Bruce's employ, that there was an opening here for that sort of job for my sort of man, and I've thought it all over so very long and earnestly that I'm more or less of a monomaniac on the subject now."

"The knowledge that Martin Bruce's riders south of the Line bloody your father's brand and shoot his cows so they can claim the dead cow's calves as mavericks, and the knowledge that Miguel Gallegos does the same thing to your father's cows south of the line has me all stoop-shouldered with sorrow. An opportunity exists for the right man to correct this evil state of affairs and I've already turned it in a general way exactly how it should be done. Nobody else on El Rancho has the slightest idea how to beat the game and as a result your poor afflicted parent is growing an early crop of wrinkles and gray hairs. Haven't you any pity for your own father, Princess?"



The princess had no answer to this. Her woman's intuition told her that back of the jest lay a deadly and determined purpose—a thing she had never grappled with.

"She has no pity," His Majesty murmured. "Not a dog-gone speck."

The butler entered and informed the king that he was wanted on the telephone. When His Majesty returned from answering it his face was grave.

Try this Recipe for Biscuits

2 cups flour
2 teaspoons Magic Baking Powder
1 teaspoon salt
Method—Sift together flour, sugar, baking powder and salt, then cut in shortening. Gradually add cold milk to make as soft a dough as can be handled, using a little to roll out.

Place centre of board generously, flour dough on it, pat or roll to ½ inch thickness. Cut out, bake 15 to 20 minutes in a hot oven.

All ingredients should be cold. Handle as little and as lightly as possible and avoid working in more flour than will be taken evenly.

BARTER OR MONEY

The story of the romance of money is told in "World Traveller" by Estelle H. Ries. Money is simply a man-made invention and in the sixth or seventh century B.C., practically all trade was carried on by barter.

Trade by barter presented great complications. The first difficulty was to find two persons having just those things to dispose of that suited each other's requirements. Many people might want things, but it is a rare coincidence for people to want to exchange. A second problem was that of determining what quantity of one commodity would be the equivalent of another. If a certain quantity of beef be given for a certain quantity of corn, and the corn is exchanged for eggs, how much beef must be given for a certain number of eggs?

Barter still exists in some places. There is a story of a French singer, who, in the course of a professional tour around the world gave a concert in the Society Islands. In exchange for her recital she was to receive a third of the receipts. In due time she found herself in possession of 3 pigs, 23 turkeys, 44 chickens, 5000 cocoanuts, besides considerable quantities of bananas, lemons, and oranges. As Madame could neither sell nor consume her wealth, it became necessary to feed the pigs and poultry, with the fruit, with very little net profit to herself.

The early colonists of North America regarded tobacco as legal tender, and there is an amusing story of a Connecticut tax collector who collected his taxes in pipes.

In early days when much hunting was done, furs and skins were acceptable as money, and down to the time of Peter the Great leather money circulated in Russia. American Indians used wampum, strings of shell beads, for money. In India and Africa small yellowish white shells called "cowries" were perhaps the oldest cash in the world. The South Sea Islanders used red feathers as currency, and the Fijians used whale's teeth. In Siberia, China, tea money has also been used. Made of tea and compressed into blocks, it was sometimes serrated like chocolate bars to be broken conveniently for change. It had the added advantage of being capable of use either for money or for a beverage. Cheese in China was also compressed into cakes and circulated as money until someone got hungry and ate it.

In the pastoral age, sheep and cattle were units of value. A man might receive a number of cows for a sword. But some cattle were lean, and others fat. Then too, it was not always convenient to take cows about on a shopping expedition!

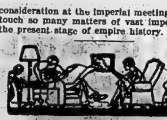
The first metals were handed about in ingots and weighed at each transaction. Old weigh houses still stand in ancient European market places. Later the money was stamped to guarantee its purity. The first recorded coins were minted about 600 B.C. by Croesus, whose name became a proverb for wealth. About the same time China began to make coins which were cast rather than minted. They took the shape of knife-blades and little shovels.

The chief reason why gold and silver became the money metals is that they satisfied the craving for adornment. It was the luster and sheen of gold and silver that caused them to be prized when other ways of producing these effects were unknown. Glass beads and scarlet cloth still pass as money among some savages. In the 17th century Manhattan Island was bought from the Indians for beads valued at $24.

It was not until the 13th century that bills of exchange were used to any considerable extent. Then they were developd in Italy and spread from there, until now paper money circulates freely throughout the world. In Italy, also the money-changers developed other forms of banking. As they were dealers in money, business men in want of capital naturally sought it of them. The money-changers might lend it from their own stock or act as brokers, securing the money from men who had a surplus.

AS TO MOTORISTS

Close checking up on offenders who fill the front seat of their cars to the disadvantage of the operation of the cars has been started with one conviction in the local court.



This follows the amendment to the motor-laws which prohibits crowding of drivers' seats.

The offending cyclist who carries another on the handle bars is to be brought to court whenever discovered.

BELLEVILLE'S INTEREST

Four resolutions will be presented to the Imperial Chambers of Commerce meeting in London at which Mr. J. Elliott will be present. These resolutions cover in the question of reduction of taxation, the publication of an Imperial year book setting forth the assets, products, resources, enterprises, markets and opportunities of this largely self-supporting empire, the creation of freer intra-Iperial trade and the extension of education for commerce throughout the empire including the courses of study in modern languages, technical and research work, empire history and economics, and qualification of trade commissioners, so that young Canadians may be fitted as skilled experts in the great laboratory of empire business.

Much thought has gone to the preparation of these resolutions which will receive mature consideration at the imperial meeting, for they touch so many matters of vast importance at the present stage of empire history.

THE SONGS MEN WEAVE

By Aline Michaelis

As swift years go,
What do they leave
Of hopes and dreams?
The songs men weave!

Down centuries
Long vanished now
We glimpse the curls
On Helen's brow.

We hear the clash
Of Trojan arms,
See Priam's grief
And war's alarms.

Men from the first
For you, for me,
Have woven in song
Life's tapestry.

And though they joy,
Or though they grieve,
Time gives us still
The songs men weave.

SOME FOLKS BOAST of being fined for speeding but one Belleville motorist can boast of being warned three times of going too slow. Boy! of Boy! what a kick in the pants for a slowpoke.

AN AMUSING foot race was witnessed by a privileged few on Front street Saturday. A truck loaded with beer came out of the brewery yard and the driver jumped down and went into the office. Coming along the street was a stocky individual with a slight list to starboard, suggesting a wet sheet, a flowing sea and a wind that follows fast. As he passed the beer truck and saw the load it had compared with his own load he decided to even up things a bit and grabbed a case of Budweiser. Then he started to run and that proved his undoing for the truck driver, coming out of the office, spotted the gang plank chase. Hard pressed the party of the first part dropped the case and ducked into an alleyway where he made his escape and the purloined case of beer was returned to the truck.

JAYWALKERS in New York City are going to have a hard time from now on. Jaywalking has been banned and pedestrians are required to follow the signals of the traffic lights or be arrested. Pedestrians crossing the street anywhere but at crossings provided at intersection will be subject to arrest, and they must respect the lights or signals of traffic officers. At crossings where there are neither lights or traffic officers pedestrians will have the right of way and cars must stop, if necessary. The great need of regulations to prevent careless pedestrianism in New York City is shown in the casualties last year when 500 jaywalkers were killed, 14,251 hurt. Jaywalking in Belleville is very prevalent and motorists not only have to watch out for other cars between crossings but also pedestrians who insist upon crossing where there are no crossings and crossing diagonally at that. Some good might come out of stationing a traffic officer at the corner of Bridge and Front streets for a time to instruct pedestrians in the art of crossing the street correctly according to the lights.

LAST WORDS OF WILLIAM PITT

The dying words of statesmen and of murderers about to be hanged have been plenty collected. There are several versions of the final utterance heard from Pitt the Younger when he lay on his deathbed. Long a favorite one was: "My country how I love my country!" Of this, a plausible variant was: "My country, how I love my country!"

Lord Rosebery in his Life of Pitt entered, though doubtfully, another contestant for the honor. It would maintain that the statesman's last words were: "I think I could eat one of Bellamy's veal pies." As this depended mainly upon the gossiping recollection of an old waiter—whose name was, of course, Bellamy—it has with difficulty made its way into sober history.

Recently, however, a letter written by Canning in 1806 has been published which challenged the current newspaper reports. From the Bishop who attended Pitt in his last illness Canning got the report that what was actually said was simply, "I am sorry to leave the country in such a situation." This is not so grand as the cry about 'Oh, my country!" but is probably much nearer the truth.

MODERN ETIQUETTE

By Roberta Lee

Q.—After taking friends to the theatre, is it necessary to take them to dinner?

A.—No.

Q.—What is a big help to a hostess who is serving without a maid?

A.—A tea wagon, as this can be placed near her and hold the extra cups, silver, and anything else which would be in the way on the table.

Q.—Is it permissible for a woman to travel alone in Europe?

A.—Yes, as much so as in the United States.

LETTERS to the Editor

INDIAN NAME FOR BRIDGE

Belleville, May 19, 1930.

Editor Ontario Intelligencer:

Was there anything ever written by a white man or woman that could excel the following letter in every particular? To me it is a classic of the first water. Note every sentence, the handwriting itself is marvelous.

Mrs. Brant, the writer, is one of our own Mohawk friends, born and raised near Deseronto, another beautiful name. Will our citizens assist me in my efforts to have our new Bridge across the Moira River named 'Sagonaska?' How it will please our Indian brothers!

I am well acquainted with Mrs. Brant. She was a Miss Loft, a sister to John and Solomon Loft, two clever Indians, both natively gentlemen. John especially was a most refined, low-spoken and well educated gentleman. I send this letter for publication, believing it will be profitable and enjoyable to the public at large.

The Letter

Deseronto, Ont., May 17th, 1930.
c-o J. S. Brant, R.R. 1.

D. H. Ackerill, V.S., Esq.,

Belleville, Ontario.

Dear Dr. Ackerill:

Pardon me for the liberty I am taking in writing to you, but I could not resist the urge to inform you of my appreciation regarding the loyal tribute paid to the Red Man, in your letter to the editor of The Ontario Intelligencer, dated Friday, May 2nd.

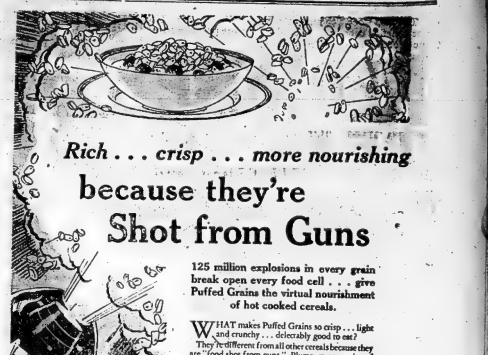
I am also heartily in favor of your suggestion regarding the naming of the new bridge, The Sagonaska Bridge and greatly admire the sentiment which prompted you to write.

It is indeed fitting that the present generation should strive to perpetuate the name, as given to the river, by the Indians, long before the white man came.

The name "Sagonaska" is very beautiful and would give that richness and distinction worthy of the modern structure which will span Moira's Stream.

Hoping your valued suggestion for an Indian name will meet the recognition it so richly deserves.

Yours sincerely,



(Signed) MRS. HENRY A. BRANT.

BODY OF MURDERED MAN IN PARCELS

Montreal, Que., May 20.—Finding of parts of a man's body cut into many pieces, and tied into several parcels, has given the police a baffling mystery to solve. The packages were found on the shore of the St. Lawrence River near Boucherville Saturday. Examination showed the head was missing. No means of possible identification were available.

COLLEGE COURSE TO BE CHANGED

President of Acadia University Announces Sweeping Changes

Wolfville, N. S., May 20.—Proposed changes in the future educational policy of Acadia University, which it is believed will be recognized as one of the most important steps yet taken in higher education in Canada, were announced by President F. W. Patterson at the annual banquet given to graduates to the graduating class.

"Formerly we have assumed," said Dr. Patterson, "that a four-year course is the only normal unit of education in advance of the high school, and the student who enrols in the Freshman class and does not or cannot complete the four years' program drops out with the feeling he has failed. He is not necessarily inferior to those who graduate, but he has superior ability in some other direction. In the future the first two years at Acadia will constitute a unit of work. The student who completes the work of these two years and shows ability to do the advanced work will, if he desires, be admitted to the work of the final two years. Students completing the work of the first two years will be suitably graduated with a diploma if they so desire.

"This change," continued Dr. Patterson, "alone implies important changes in the curriculum. At the present time the courses of study of the freshman and sophomore years do prepare the student for the work of the final two years, but for the student who does not continue they have little relation to the life and work outside. In the re-organized courses the curriculum of the first two years will seek to do four things; meet a wide variety of individual interests, offer an introduction to the nature and meaning of the world into which the student will go and of the life in it; provide pre-professional training for those looking forward toward the professions who do not wish to go on to an Arts degree; and provide also an adequate introduction to the work of the third and fourth years in Arts and Science.

"The most important changes in the curriculum will be the requirement of only one language other than English for a degree, the placing of mathematics on the elective list, and the provision of adequate orientation courses in the nature of economic and social order for the first two years.

"With this re-organization the Sophomore year assumes a new importance and becomes the senior year in its first two years of college work.

"In the work of the final two years emphasis will be laid on the mastery of special fields of study. Students who have qualified for admission and especially those who seek distinction will be asked to achieve mastery in special fields of study. Emphasis will be placed not merely upon the courses taken but upon the mastery attained. The weakness of the systems of credit by courses, units, semester hours or majors have been well suggested by Dean Boucher of Chicago. Dean Boucher suggests that the common system of credits means merely that coupons are clipped at regular intervals and when enough have been secured are exchanged for a degree."

President Patterson in conclusion stated that he had given only the barest outline of the scheme as it was at present impossible for him to disclose the proposed changes in detail but it was the intention of Acadia to conserve all the values that have been built up throughout the years, yet to attempt to re-build the curriculum with certain clearly defined educational objectives.

Ontario Lady Uses Dodd's Kidney Pills

Mrs. J. S. Reid Speaks Very Highly of Canada's Foremost Kidney Remedy

—Dodd's Kidney Pills

Enterprise, Ont., May 19 (Special)—"Anytime I get a Lame Back I turn to Dodd's Kidney Pills and they soon do the work," writes Mrs. John S. Reid, well-known and highly respected resident of this place. "I have used them for years. As I occasionally take a Lame Back. They never fail to do the work."

With the winter months approaching comes colds and chills, which double the work of the Kidneys. Often the result are serious, for, if the Kidneys weaken, harmful uric acid and other poisons are allowed to escape. Backache, dizziness and urinary disorders should not be neglected. Use Dodd's Kidney Pills to stimulate Kidney activity. This treatment relieves you of discomfort and wards off Rheumatism, Lumbago and Sciatica. An occasional course of Dodd's Kidney Pills will prevent Kidney disorders.

CHRISTIAN SCIENTISTS WANT BILL AMENDED

Toronto, May 19.—In a despatch from Ottawa the Toronto Star says that in the bill introduced by the Government to amend the criminal code, a change has been made at the request of Christian Scientists, in three sections, which deal with children, heads of families, people in charge of the sick and masters and mistresses of servants and apprentices under sixteen. It is explained the purpose of the section is to permit the Christian Scientists to practise their beliefs without fear of prosecution.

NORTH CAROLINA BANKS ON SHAD

100,000,000 Fish Taken Each Year Valuable Industry

Raleigh, N. Carolina, May 20. — A strange situation exists in this state where the largest branch of the commercial fishing industry, from the standpoints of catch, is probably the least known to the general public.

The North Carolina Department of Conservation and Development, in its latest report, tells of the menhaden, known locally as shad, fatback and alewife, fishing industry which is one of the great sources of revenue of the state.

"More than 100,000,000 menhaden are taken annually by fleets of boats from North Carolina ports," the report states. "They are said to be one of the most abundant of all economic fish, migrating in enormous schools off shore. They are not a food fish being used chiefly for the extraction of oil which serves for much the same purpose as linseed oil and scrap which is used in fertilizers and for stock feed.

"North Carolina operates about thirty boats which with their outfits cost about $25,000 each. Fourteen factories costing $50,000 to $100,000 each are operated in the state. These have cooked on an average of 100,000 fish each for a season of two months, November and December, for the past four years.

"Motor boats of an average capacity of 50 tons and which are able to carry $400,000 fish are manned by a crew of 25 men, including the captain and engineer. These boats carry two purse boats on which a large purse net 770 yards long is placed so that each boat carries about half. On sighting a school of fish these purse boats are rowed around it, dropping their net as they go. When the fish are entirely inside the bottom of the net is drawn together so as to form a purse which brings he fish together in a solid mass. From this mass they can be baled with a large dip scoop, operated by a donkey engine on the motor boat. At times as many as 300 fish are caught in a single purse.

"North Carolina has averaged about 100 tank cars of oil each year for the past three years. The tank cars average about 8,000 gallons each. At present oil is selling at 45 cents per gallon and is likely to go higher before the season closes. Refiners get most of the oil as it is a very desirable drying oil. When the market is low soap companies buy most of the oil. New oil is sold on a maximum of fifty per cent. free acid.

"The menhaden industry is and has been a great source of revenue. The great question is whether the industry is a declining one. Some authorities think so, while some of the fishermen are just as confident that it is not. The former quote statistics to show that the production is falling off and the latter will tell you that more fish were seen off the North Carolina coast last fall than ever before and that only stormy weather prevents them from making a record catch."

ORDERS TO CARRY OUT 1929 WAR VESSEL PLAN GIVEN

RELICS OF OLD RUSSIA—IN GERMAN CAPITAL

Driven from their homes and native land, in Russia, these survivors of the old order in Russia lay the foundation stone of a Russian church in the German Capital. In glaring contrast to the present war upon organized religion in Russia, these Russian emigres cling tenaciously to their orthodox faith. There ranks include impoverished princes, dukes and certain members of the intelligentsia classes who refused to embrace the Communist creed.

$577.55 AWARD IN SQUIRES CASE

Judgment by Mr. Justice Raney in Superior Court

Miss Jessie Squires of Trenton, claiming certain sums for nursing Mrs. Sarah Jacques during her last illness was given $577.55 with interest from the time the writ was issued and costs on the County scale with no off set by Honorable Mr. Justice Raney in a decision handed down in the non-jury sitting at today's session. The sum claimed was $977.00 but Justice Raney deducted 20 weeks from the claim at $21.00 per week claiming there was no corroboration that the woman was unable to care for herself before Christmas of 1928. His Lordship in giving judgment told H. J. Smith appearing for the defendant Theron W. Jacques that the case should have never been brought to court.

Dr. Crows and Dr. Farley of Trenton, both gave evidence today when the trial was resumed of the condition of Mrs. Jacques and stated that she required care at all times. She was suffering from rheumatism arthritis and later cancer. The defence called Mrs. Ellis who stated that Mrs. Jacques was able to care for herself and to walk without assistance. The evidence was corroborated by Miss Eunice Cullin called by the defence. This evidence concluded the case and His Lordship immediately gave judgment.

World's Record for 100 Metre Sprint

MONTREAL- Que., May 21 (CP)—Canada's foremost girl sprinter, Myrtle A. Cook, member of 1928 Olympic games team, today received notification she has been granted officially the world's record for the one hundred metre sprint. Miss Cook covered the distance in twelve seconds flat during the Canadian championships and Olympic trials at Halifax in July, 1928. Word was received from the feminine sporting Federation Internationale. Miss Cook holds Canadian titles in the flat, sixty and hundred metres having established the Canadian records of six flat, seven flat and 12 seconds flat respectively.

PROBS DECLARE WARM WEATHER

Luxuriant Growth in Gardens And Lawns is Seen

The weather which for the past five days has been wet and cold today changed and clear skies greeted the people of this district. Enough rain has fallen during the past week to last the farmers for some little time in case of a prolonged drought. The temperature on Monday night was dangerously cold and the ground barely escaped a frost, which usually occurs each year about the 24th of May. Many gardens in the city have grown amazingly during the past two weeks, and the surrounding country is a wonderful sight of growing plants and blossoming trees. The temperature for the past five days has been cold, never going higher than the fifty mark. Today it was slightly higher and the probabilities point to "fair and warm". Fine weather for the 24th of May, which has been proclaimed a public holiday in this city in place of the 24th of May which falls on Saturday, is forecast by the weatherman.

AGED WOMAN IS FOUND BY CREEK

Posse Searched For Three Days Finding Woman's Memory Gone

After a posse had scoured the country for three days, Mrs. Herbert Wilson eighty-five-year-old resident of Lake Township, Hastings County, missing since Saturday, was found last night sitting beside a stream in a weakened condition and her memory completely gone. Without informing relatives of her intent she left home and when last seen by neighbours was heading for the woodlands. The search party is sparsely settled and when the alarm was sounded by relatives, a large number of men volunteered to assist in the search. Residents of the district, Mrs. Wilson had been living with her son, David, and wandered off. She left no clue as to her movements about. The elderly knit husband made it perilous for the searchers who were impeded on Monday by the driving rain. In spite of these handicaps they were rewarded last night.

Apsley a small village in Peterboro County sent reinforcements yesterday and the hunt was conducted on a large scale when every inch of land adjacent to her home was searched. She was found shortly before eight o'clock last night. The woman having been without food for three days and at the mercy of the elements was decidedly weakened. She will be sent to an Institution by the authorities.

Water is 7 Inches Lower Than in '29

Speaking to the Ontario Intelligencer today, the harbour master stated that the water in the bay was exactly seven inches lower Yesterday than it was at the same time last Year. It is hard to give a reason for this phenomenon. There was certainly plenty of snow last winter, but the low level may be accounted for by the fact that the ice went out of the bay so early and with so little difficulty.

SIDNEY FARMER DIED SUDDENLY

William James Robertson for the past forty years a resident of Sidney township, died suddenly yesterday. The late Mr. Robertson who was an seventy years of age was driving a load of stock to Stirling when he collapsed with a heart attack He was a half a mile from his home and his wife on going down the road found him dead. He was born in Sidney township but had resided in the Oak Hill district since moving from the north. His wife survives. He was a member of the Orange order and the Anglican Church. The funeral will be held tomorrow morning at 10.30 to Stirling Anglican Church.

SPLIT RAIL WAS GIVEN AS CAUSE OF DERAILMENT

6 Coaches of Eastbound Passenger Train Derailed Near Collins Bay

ENGINE CLEARS

Slight Injuries to One Passenger and Pullman Conductor

Roaring through the night at a high speed, passenger train No. 18, running from Chicago to Montreal, struck a broken rail one mile east of Collins Bay and six coaches were precipitated into the ditch about three-thirty this morning. The train was in charge of Conductor Tom McKinney of Toronto and Charles Delisle of this city, was at the throttle of the locomotive. The engine cleared the break, but six cars following made the jump. One passenger W. J. Verity, Brantford, was slightly injured in the thigh, and is in the hospital, as was the pullman conductor, Leon Bellefeuille, Montreal, suffering from cuts, and the other passengers received a slight shaking up. Fortunately the train was a night one and most of the cars were pullman sleepers or the loss of life might have been heavy. There was only one day coach on the train. Superintendent George H. Stokes of this terminal and "Ted" Orr trainmaster for the division, hurried to the scene as did the auxiliary from this city. The eastbound main line was completely blocked and it will be late today before it is cleared for traffic. The westbound line was not damaged and traffic moved westward shortly after the wreck. The passengers were transferred from the wrecked train to Kingston, where another train, took them on their eastward journey. The two injured in the spill were given first aid and also medical attention in Kingston. A full investigation will be made by the officials in charge of this terminal and division.

MAN PURSUES RAT TO DEATH AT CURB

When two jack-rabbits played tag up and down Front street and the daily press duly recorded the fact, nobody believed the "story". But a large and humorous crowd yesterday noon saw a prominent citizen on Front street chase a big rat out of his store, pursue the beast down the curb walk to Campbell street, hurry it across the road and kill it with one well-placed kick.

Armed with a big stick, the map repeatedly tried to exterminate the rat while chasing it. All "swipes" were ineffectual, however, till he took time of his trusty boot to complete the fell deed.

50 SCHOLARS COMPETED IN EMPIRE DAY MUSIC CONTEST

Excellence of Work Assures Fine Program at Concerts

The annual competitions in music in the public schools for 1930 took place yesterday and about fifty girls and boys competed for the medals and shields which are awarded to the four public schools of the city, the adjudicators being Mr. Leo Riggs and Mr. Sam Anglin. The excellence of solo and choral singing far surpassed previous years and a great treat is in store for the concerts to be held on Thursday and Friday nights of this week in the auditorium of the Collegiate. Many fine voices are being developed among the growing girls and boys in the schools which will surely bear fruit in a few years. In all the schools the contests were very keen, the winning choirs this year for the shields being Queen Alexandra School Choir for the Senior shield and King George School choir for the Junior shield. Some special attractions at the concerts will be the singing of the combined choirs The playing of the band of the Collegiate, Miss Helen Lancombe will assist. The Radio Four Male Quartette will sing and Mr. Jack Green, gold medalist in cornet at the C.N. exhibition in Toronto will lead in the choruses and also play a solo. The concert will be under the patronage of the Board of Education and directed by Mr. V. P. Hunt, Supervisor of Music.

New Dye Will Detect Cancers

PHILADELPHIA, Penn. May 21 (CP)—The discovery of a dye by means of which internal cancers may be detected in their early stages was announced today by Dr. Donald A. C. Butts, director of the Emery Laboratory of Pennsylvanian hospital. The dye, he said, was a peculiar affinity for cancerous cells, which it stains quickly and completely while leaving the surrounding normal cells uncolored. Staining the cells increases their reflection for the X-Rays so they may be more easily detected on the X-Ray plate. Which process provides an accurate means for diagnosis of cancer in early stages, making possible prompt surgical-radium or X-Ray treatment. The dye is injected directly into the veins of patients.

MANUFACTURERS UNITE TO DISCUSS PROBLEMS

In order that all manufacturers in the city may regularly meet together to discuss their problems and the business in general, an association of all manufacturers as a branch of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce came into being last night. The meeting was held in the commodious coffee shoppe recently opened by L. Dickens and Son and every manufacturer of the city was represented This was the first time the Coffee Shoppe had been used for a banquet and all expressed their delight at the beautiful surroundings and the delightful meal served. There were 30 representatives present at the meeting.

It was decided to meet once a month and the 3rd Thursday of each month was selected. At this meeting the manufacturers may bring their problems to the board and an open discussion will follow that may prove beneficial to all. The officers elected to guide the destines of the Association for the ensuing year were Chairman, T. Webster, J. & J. Cash Inc., Vice Chairman E. W. Worth, American Optical Company, Secretary Harold Saunders, Belleville Hardware and Lock Mfg. Co.

OFFICIAL OPENING OF WELLAND CANAL SEPT 1

Ottawa, Ont., May 21 (CP)—Official opening of the new Welland Canal will be held on September first next, it was announced at the Department of Railways and Canals today. W. J. Agnew was unavoidably detained but reached Mrs. Walbridge's home later in the afternoon and assisted in serving. The rooms were beautifully decorated with spring flowers including tulips, narcissi and apple blossoms. A most effective colour scheme was arranged and Mrs. Walbridge was the recipient of many congratulations on the attractiveness of the decorations.

HIKED TO TORONTO

Seven female members of the local Bell Telephone branch faced with the prospect of a holiday, and filled with the wanderlust, started out on foot yesterday morning for Toronto. After spending a delightful day seeing the sights of the Queen City, they reached home shortly after midnight last night. The three young ladies, Misses Edith Rainbird, Bessie Shepman and Gwen Brockburn, thoroughly enjoyed the jaunt and gave them lifts most of the way and, they passed through three towns on foot, Trenton, Brighton and Cobourg. They rode in Packards, Fords and trucks, the rest of the way. The trio spent several hours in Toronto viewing and taking the "open road" on the return trip. They had equal luck on the trip back and pleasant memories will them always. Hiked in east bound cars. They claim the distinction of being honoured members of the mystic circle of "Hikers."

SPLITTING THE HOLIDAY

Saturday, May 24th, being a statutory holiday in Canada, the branches of the various banks in the city, as well as the liquor store, the best warehouse, the Budwiser Brewing Company and all those employed by the civil service will observe this day as a holiday. Merchants and others however, will celebrate the holiday on Monday, May 26th.

MOOSEHEART CARD PARTY

Exceptionally well attended and a complete success, a card party, under the auspices of the ladies of Mooseheart Legion, No. 433, was held in the Moose auditorium last night. After cards were finished dainty refreshments were served and a good entertaining was voted by all who attended. Following is the list of prize winners: Ladies' 1st, Mrs. McCormick; 2nd, Mrs. Gill and 3rd, Mrs. J. Griffiths. Men's 1st, William Rolls; consolation, Harry Boyle.

WILL RESIDE IN ENGLAND

Mr. and Mrs. Sam Mayhew, 303 McDonald Avenue, who had resided in this city for some years, left today for Montreal, where they will board ship for London, England, where they will reside in the future. Before their departure Mr. and Mrs. Mayhew were presented with gifts by friends and relatives in this city as a token of remembrance.

NEW TEA ROOM OPENED

The manufacturers section of Belleville Chamber of Commerce held a luncheon meeting last evening in the new tea room of E. F. Dickens & Son, marking an informal opening of a new department by this progressive firm. The new tea room adjoins the ice cream and lunch parlor and is beautifully finished in hard woods and fitted with mission furniture. The ceiling is finished in ship cabin style with large oak timbers. The walls are tastefully decorated with drapes and window mirror effects and in one corner a beautiful fireplace adds color to the general decorative scheme.

SUFFERED INJURIES

Mr. James S. Cook, well-known local cheese buyer, is suffering from numerous bruises and lacerations, the result of a motor accident near Whitby on Monday. Although at his office here today Mr. Cook was still unable to what under the weather. While proceeding from Toronto shortly after the lunch hour, his car plunged into the ditch and turned partly over and Mr. Cook, when taken from the wreckage was suffering from a badly shaken up. He was removed to Whitby Hospital where he remained all night. He returned to the city yesterday. An examination revealed that no bones were fractured. Travelling at a moderate rate of speed the car skidded on the wet grass when the driver turned out too far to pass a truck. The motor was damaged when it rose over into the ditch which was several feet deep at the point. Mr. Cook was travelling alone at the time and he was unable to judge the distance to the edge of the highway owing to the heavy downpour of rain.

TOURIST PRAISES PROVINCE

Mr. Pady, of Vancouver, enroute to Halifax, has been a visitor in Belleville for the past two days. Mr. Pady is delighted with the country in which he has landed in. The Ontario Intelligencer this morning that in Mr. J. O. Herity, Secretary of the Belleville Motor Club, Belleville has the right man in the right place. He found him extremely well advised on the Province of Ontario and roads in Canada and the United States. Mr. Pady is contemplating the outlining of a trip through the Dominion and submitting it to a Toronto publication.

YUKON BISHOP SEES PROGRESS

Toronto, Ont., May 24—Highly interesting news of his far-flung diocese was given by Bishop Stringer, veteran prelate of the Yukon, to an interviewer recently. Rev. Dr. Stringer, with his wife, is spending a few weeks in Toronto, before returning to London England, to attend the Lambeth Conference in July.

Bishop and his wife travelled by air from Dawson to White Horse enroute to Skagway, where they board ed the steamer for Vancouver. Bishop Stringer has spent 38 years in the north but his spirit of adventure is not in the least dimmed. An interesting midnight of air travel in the Far North was mentioned by Bishop Stringer. During the time the missionaires were winging their flight from Dawson, a wireless message was received at Mayo from two fur trappers asking for plane service from Aklavik to Mayo. Already they had travelled 700 miles by dog sled with a good catch of valuable white fox and they were in haste to reach civilization. Attempts to make Aklavik with the Rockies intervening had proven impossible and Pilot Wasson blazed a new trail by air and reaching Aklavik brought out to Mayo the trappers. Chief Peterson and Assembly covered the journey in three and one half hours.

"I remember once taking 42 days to make the journey from Aklavik to Mayo by dog sled," commented Bishop Stringer, "but of course the trip followed by the aeroplane was a different one from that I traversed, over the ice."

The wireless, with stations established in various northern district, is also playing an important part in one of the most remarkable developments. Another outstanding development is the mail service. Pennies and nickels are about as useful in Dawson as a Japanese yen in Toronto. A twenty-five cent piece is the smallest coin in circulation.

Curiously enough, with the great Arctic coast far trade a recognized feature of the north, fox and mink farming are proving a thriving industry in the Yukon. The cold climate is especially adaptable to fur growing, and the fox and mink farming is very profitable, said Bishop Stringer.

Speaking with regard to the Yukon constituency electoral vote, which at the present time is being much discussed in the Yukon, Bishop Stringer said much might depend upon the vote of the Eskimo, if it were permitted. Asked whether the Eskimo were capable of voting intelligently, the missionary claimed that the Christian Eskimo would be capable, but was doubtful about the others.

MONTREAL DOES NOT FEAR ANY BIRTH DECREASE

In 1940 Should Have a Population of Five Million

Montreal, Que.—Rev. Dr. Douglas of St. James United Church, said in an address on the "passing of the cradle" that Montreal itself had nothing to fear from lack of infants as in 1940 it should have a population of five million. He referred, he said, to the actual rocking of the baby's cradle. Today, he said, experts are agreed that rocking is not good for the baby. If he cries, his mother is allowed to investigate his condition and remedy any discomforts, but there her attention must cease. If he wants to continue crying, he is to be allowed to cry, for he must be taught to realize that he is in a world where he cannot have everything he wants.

The present generation of young men and young women now growing up was the first uncrocked generation just as it was the first unspanked generation. The passing of the cradle with its hypnotic rythm and its accompaniment of soothing syrup had accomplished one good thing, Dr. Douglas stated. Children were now be taught to face life squarely. The world was not a fairyland where good people lailled with happiness and always came out on top, but each person was a universe in himself containing both good and bad forces.

Dr. Douglas then went on to discuss the effect of the passing of the cradle on the mother. In the days of the cradle, it had been a man's world exclusively. It was a women's destiny to bring men into the world and then to rock for them herr. She was supposed to be at her best with her sink full of dishes and her lap full of babies. In art, she might be allowed to pose for a portrait to gratify the vanity of the man who owned her. In church she was told she had better keep quiet. St. Paul had said so.

Today freed from the tyranny of the cradle and with her traditional occupations vanished into thin air, women were going excellent work in a wider field of art, philanthropy and social legislation. But modern mothers were practically at fault, he felt, in failing to train their daughters to understand the responsibilities of home making. As a consequence of this failure the young men of to-day were going through a trying period with prospective wives, demanding engagement rings that should cost at least two months' salary and then a home where they could begin at the point where their parents were content to leave off, the girls contribution to the new menage being a fine optimism and the knowledge of how to use a can opener.

"PUTTIN' ON THE RITZ"

Harry Richmond, the darling of Broadway chikzet up another success for himself and he made a hit in "Putting on the Ritz" which opened for a two-day run at the Bells yesterday. He is the possessor of a very pleasing voice and personality and with dainty Miss Jean Bennett playing feminine lead nothing further to make the picture a success could be wished for. However this by no means completes the excellent cast for James Gleason is in it as Richmond's friend, Jimmy, and co-starring with Gleason is the inimitable Lilyan Tashman, but with a different Tashman. Once is the langurous star familiar to all and now she emerges a lovable tomboyish sort of person with lots of pep. Aileen Pringle also figures in the cast but the dark haired siren startles us all by appearing as a blonde but what a blonde. She loses nothing of her tech nique by the transformation. The story centres around the bright lights of Broadway where Richmond as Harry Raymond and his partner Dolores, Miss Bennett, at last get the chance to shine and of course Richmond with his pleasing voice becomes the idol of all the women. Through an accident he leaves the stage and Dolores' chance comes, she makes good but grieves for Raymond whom she cannot find. The story is good, the scenery well worth looking at and the song hits excellent. "With You", "There's Danger in Your Eyes, Cherie" "Singing in a Vaudeville Song" and "Puttin' on the Ritz", a novelty number, are the ones offered.

—W. R. Huyck, Clerk.

On Tuesday evening the members of the Board of Trade and High School Board assembled in the pavilion for the purpose of doing honor to a citizen who in addition to discharging his duties as manager of a bank faithfully and well, found time to lend his whole-hearted support to any undertaking calculated to promote the best interests of the village as a whole In the absence of Mr. James Ryan, president, of Board of Trade, Dr. M. O. Dales, occupied the chair and after explaining the nature of the gathering and expressing his regret at losing such an estimable citizen called upon a number of those present to say a few words. Among these who extolled their virtues of the guest of the evening were Dr. Mallory, Dr. Bowlby, Mr. T. Quinn, F. Hindle, Tom Beatty, C. H. Kerr, D. H. Morrison, S. B. Rollins, Reeve Gordon and John Quinn.

At the conclusion of the speech, making Mr. Yule was presented on behalf of the Board of Trade with a club-bag and by the High School Board with a gold headed cane, suitably inscribed.

Mr. Yule in accepting these testimonials, was quite overcome and had difficulty in controlling his emotions. He thanked the friends for their many expressions of good will and remarked that if he had made a success of his work here it was largely due to the considerate and kindness shown him by the citizens of Tweed. He was loath to leave here, but when the call came he had to obey the mandate.

He would always have a war spot in his heart for the old town, and, if any of his citizens ever came to Bergenfield they would find his latch string on the outside.

The meeting broke up with cheers and the singing of Auld Lang Syne.

Address and Presentation

At the close of the service in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Tweed, on Sunday, the congregation and Sunday school joined in address to Mr. and Mrs. Yule and family, who are leaving in the near future for their new home in Ingersoll.

Mr. and Mrs. Yule:—A few days ago with deep regret we learned of your early departure from us. We appreciate in fullness the great loss we are to suffer in the removal of valued friends and members of the church. We regret this loss keenly, but congratulate the church to which you will become allied in your future home.

Mr. and Mrs. Yule, we have had the privilege of knowing you for what you are. In your years of unselfish service on behalf of this church and its many activities we have been enabled to appreciate your sterling qualities and worth.

We, your friends of St. Andrew's Church ask you to accept this gift as a slight token of our love and respect for you and may the God of things as they are ever guide and protect you and yours in your years of future service for Him and humanity.

Signed on behalf of the congregation.

Ontario Lady Uses Dodd's Kidney Pills

Mrs. J. S. Reid Speaks Very Highly of Canada's Foremost Kidney Remedy —Dodd's Kidney Pills

Enterprise, Ont., May 19 (Special)—"Anytime I get a Lame Back I turn to Dodd's Kidney Pills and they soon do the work," writes Mrs. John S. Reid, well-known and highly respected resident of this place. "I have used them for years. As I occasionally take a Lame Back. They never fail to do the work."

With the winter months approaching comes colds and chills, which double the work of the Kidneys. Often the results are serious, for, if the Kidneys weaken, harmful uric acid and other poisons are allowed to escape. Backache, dizziness and urinary disorders should not be neglected. Use Dodd's Kidney Pills to stimulate Kidney activity. This treatment relieves you of discomfort, and wards off Rheumatism, Lumbago and Sciatica. An occasional course of Dodd's Kidney Pills will prevent Kidney disorders.

Wellington

Wellington, May 20 (By Mail).—The departmental speaker, Mrs. Bertram, visited Wellington on Wednesday, May 14th. The meeting was held in the library and was in charge of the Pres. Mrs. Valedeau who introduced the speaker who took as her topics, Business forms every woman should know and how to utilize the talents of all the members at the meetings. She brought greetings from Stoney Creek and was loud in her praise of Prince Edward County. In touching upon Brief business forms every woman should know, she asked the assembly to keep in mind a few lines of Tennyson, viz: "The old order changeth, giving place to new," and remember there are great changes in every thing. We are living in a fast age and we must keep pace with the times. We must study prevention and there is a missionary in the foreign fields. Do what the real school nurse of today is doing if she lives up to her duty which is not to visit the school alone but to do the follow up work and prevent diseases among our children of today. This is often passed over because true teeth are afraid of taxation, but it is money well spent and we must be educated to it.

She strongly urged co-operation with the school board and stated that in many places they were glad to have the assistance of the women and mothers, for who should be more interested in the welfare of the child than the mother. As regards business forms the joint accountant so each can draw at bank is well in a case of emergency.

Joint Deed—Owning property is wise in case of bereavement when the property automatically passes from one to the other.

Investment has to be sought out; be ware of swindlers.

If wanting medical advice, go to the doctor.

If wanting spiritual advice, go to the minister.

If wanting financial advice, go to the banker.

Contracts—In signing read over carefully. Be carefully about making rash conclusions.

Wills—Every one should make a will.

Anyone is eligible for school trustee who is a ratepayer, man or wife, son or daughter of the man who owns 20 acres of land and is 21 years of age.

Conducting meetings so as to utilize the talent of all the members.

Election of officers—If month selling, open voting was all right, but the fairest and most honest vote was by ballot. It is also wise to have a canvassing committee a month before the meeting and the convener can give the report. It is understood that officers should step up and she advised election of officers at the summer meeting. We must think matters over before deciding and be loyal to our officers. A President should possess executive ability, be of the work and TACT which she defined as doing the right thing at the right time and the right way. A President should keep order and discipline at the meetings and any ruling made by the chair must be accepted and it is the duty of each member the minority. Every motion must be moved and seconded before discussion. A President should be careful not to use too much authority

The Institute should not be made a money making affair. Its object is educational, instructive and social pur poses.

Do not let money keep anyone away from an Institute meeting which is up lifting. Have demonstrations, debates and papers. Have current events. Try to get women out who do not take the chance and bring to them cheer."

A true Institute member will make a better church woman. It is by our deeds we will be judged. Let us give freely of our service.

A vote of thanks was extended to the speaker. Delicious refreshments were served by Miss Hamilton, Miss Bessie Dorland, Mrs. Wm. Baird and Mrs. Ernest Bond.

$2,500 AND $100 ARE AWARDS IN ROAD ACCIDENT

George Rutan Awarded $2,500 and C. Rutan $100 for Damage to Car

COSTS RESERVED

Interesting Case Over Estate Develops Out of Nursing of Mrs. Jacques

Practically the whole sitting yesterday of the non-jury court before Honorable Mr. Justice Raney was occupied with the case of Rutan vs. The King and Charles V. Bills on the third party, concerning an accident, which took place on the Bloomfield-Point Edward Highway on June 8th last. After all evidence had been adduced and argument presented by D. Erichson of Toronto for the defendant and third party and R. D. Ponton K.C., counsel for plaintiff, His Lordship delivered part of the judgment on the case reserving his judgment on certain angles to the case in respect to the degree of negligence by both parties. He assessed the damages for Caniff Rutan at $100.00 this being the damages received by his car and $2500.00 for George Rutan for personal injuries received in the accident.

Question of Negligence

In summing up His Lordship made mention of the fact, that he believed Rutan the driver of the car, was negligent as he saw a barrier at the intersection at Foxboro before turning on the driving road and also the detour sign which, was posted. Justice Raney also found negligence on the part of the Department of Highways as these should have been a barrier at the base of Roger's Hill, where the accident took place and in addition that the traffic from the east would not be under a risk. The cost of such a barrier would have been negligible in the opinion of the presiding judge. "I also find," said Justice Raney "there was no excessive speed by the defendants as it has been sought to be shown. It is perfectly natural that a car would travel 30 feet after going over an embankment some seven feet in height. As for there being liquor in the car I put no credence in the story as told by Rogers and Billie but will believe the evidence of the plaintiff and his father, corroborated by Dr. Vincent, who saw Mr. George Rutan immediately on arriving at his home in Belleville. As for a bottle being found close to the car there I am not taking it for proof, that the bottle came out of the Ruttan car." First Case in Ontario

Continuing His Lordship stated he was not sure, when the board "closed to traffic" was placed at the detour section at Foxboro. He was sure that a board was placed there at some time but the road was being used by the travelling public as through traffic and the Department had a right to guard the spot where the excavation was being made with every precaution. There was a light on a pole a short distance from the scene and a red light on the road machine, but this was not sufficient warning to the motoring public.

This was, he said, the first case in the province of this nature and His Lordship's finding as to the degree of negligence by both parties will be awaited anxiously by a'l legal talent in the Province. Before the final judgment is given all the evidence will be transcribed and Justice Raney will again go over the list of witnesses.

Care Over Nursing

At the close of the case, another action of Squire vs. Jacque; was opened but not concluded, when Mr. Justice Raney called an adjournment. Charles A. Payne appeared for Miss Jennie Squires the plaintiff and H. J. Smith of Trenton conducted the defence. The action was based on a claim of Miss Squires against Theron W. Jacques executor of his mother, Mrs. Sarah Jacques, estate for $907.00 being money alleged due for the nursing of Mrs. Jacques through her sickness and subsequent death extending over a period of some eleven months. Miss Squires was the first witness called and told of Mrs. Jacques coming to her home in July 1928 and remaining there until her death in June of 1929. During that time Mrs. Jacques was not able to care for herself and Miss Squires alleged, she nursed her and did all that was required. Mrs. Jacques, was a cousin of the plaintiff and at a previous time had boarded with Miss Squires and paid at the rate of $10.00 a week for room and board.

MR. AND MRS. THOMAS HENDERSON CELEBRATE HALF A CENTURY OF HAPPY MARRIAGE AT ROSSMORE

Hundred Neighbors and Friends Honor Aged Couple

Among the many social events which occur in an ordinary lifetime, none is regarded with more interest than the occasion of a golden wedding anniversary. When the fiftieth milestone has been reached it is indeed befitting that recognition be made of the event and congratulations extended. Such a privilege and honor has been granted to Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Henderson of Rossmore who on Sunday last May 18th, completed fifty years of married life and who celebrated the occasion by an "At Home" to their friends on Saturday and Sunday.

Nearly one hundred of their neighbors and friends called at their home to offer them congratulations and extend felicitations and best wishes on the occasion of this happy event.

Thomas Henderson and Ellis Motherall were married at the parsonage in Colborne fifty years ago by the late Rev. J. H. Watts. They resided near Colborne for quite a number of years and before coming to Rossmore spent a few years in Michigan. For the past thirteen years they have been worthy and respected residents of Rossmore.

The bride and groom were assisted in receiving by Miss Jean McIntosh of Thornsville, while Misses Isabel and Irene Belnap and Bessie Post of Rossmore, assisted in serving. The guests were served with a dainty lunch which included pieces of wedding cake and bride's cake.

The rooms were appropriately decorated for the occasion with yellow violets, tulips, calceolaria, calendula and white narcissi. On the table the wedding cake was decorated in gold and silver leaves and on each side were the years in gold the figures 1880-1930. Other cakes and confections were decorated in white and yellow while the fruit, sparkling and beautiful, lent their golden tints to the color scheme. Yellow candles and the yellow decorated sprays worn by the girls all increased the effectiveness of the decorations and added to the welcome extended to the host of friends who called.

The time was spent in that pleasant social way that usually characterizes such of this kind when friends and neighbors come together to celebrate such a happy event and extend the best wishes to honored friends. Music lent its charm and recitation reminiscences and story contributed to the general enjoyment. Such appropriate selections as "Silver Threads Among the Gold," "When You and I Were Young Maggie," "Believe Me If All Those Endearing Young Charms," "Auld Lang Syne," and "A Perfect Day" were rendered.

Mr. and Mrs. Henderson were the recipients of many, much appreciated remembrances from their friends. The Ladies' Aid of Massassga United Church sent beautiful flowers. Articles of gold and silver and china were received and gifts of money. Congratulatory messages came from friends far and near, United States and Canada.

Among those present from a distance were Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Papineau, Oshawa, Miss N. Carruthers Mrs. Henry Lathrop and Miss Carrie Lathrop, Bowmanville, Mr. and Mrs. John Coffey, Crafton, Mr. and Mrs. W. Drinkwater, Colborne, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bellamy, Port Hope, and Mrs. J. Rolson, Mrs. W. S. Dickson, Mr. P. Robson, Mr. Arnold Robson and Miss Clara Robson, Vernonville.

The event was somewhat of a surprise to Mr. and Mrs. Henderson planned as it was largely by their friends but it brought much happiness to the genial of honor with its many impressions of good will and friendship. A beautiful card presented to them at this time and bearing the following verses expresses the wishes and sentiments of their many friends:

"May the days that lie before you
Many gifts of gladness hold,
And the skies that bend above you
Never lose their tint of gold."

ROBERT HOLMES LOVED BY PUPILS

'Believed in Giving Students Canadian Inspiration,"

Toronto, Ont., May 21—"Bobby" or "Happy" was the pet name of students of the Ontario College of Art for the late Robert Holmes, held in great affection and esteem. "That is not exactly happy, is it?" was one of his frequent comments on the work of some luckless beginner. How he came to paint wild flowers was a characteristic decision by Mr. Holmes. "I wanted to give my students as much Canadian inspiration as possible. I asked them to base their designs on wild flowers as something native and characteristic of their country. I made drawings of a great many of our wild flowers, and that led me on to painting them seriously and exclusively," he said.

Since then Mr. Holmes had painted more than a hundred varieties of wild flowers. His paintings, in water colors, have distinction and dignity, and yet the sturdiness of the lofty things of the north. His paintings of hepaticas, bloodroot, lady slipper, Indian pipes, and other flowers have become a part of the sentimental records of Canadian nature and will always earn respect for the art and public service of the painter.

SON CLAIMS THE BODY OF FATHER

Injunction Was Obtained After Funeral Plans Made

Kingston, May 21—Acting for the son, William James Hunter, A. B. Cunningham, K.C., Tuesday took out an injunction to restrain Mrs. Mary Ann Hunter, his mother, and Edward Grexham, his brother-in-law, from interfering with him in taking possession of the body of his father, Robert Hunter, the aged farmer who died Monday after a court application had been made to have him declared of unsound mind.

Judge Lavelle granted the injunction and the body of Robert Hunter will be removed today from the home of his son-in-law, where he died, and where a few days ago he was accepted into the Roman Catholic faith after being a Protestant.

Arrangements were made for the funeral to take place from the home of a sister, Mrs. Thomas Hogan, here today. Deceased made a will in 1921 appointing his son, William James Hunter and Alex MacDonald, Kingston, now deceased, his executors.

Death Ends Action

Mr. Justice McEvoy refused Monday to determine the sanity of the late Robert Hunter, who died after being recently baptized into the Catholic faith. J. M. Hickey, of Kingston, appeared in chambers at Osgoode Hall to oppose the motion by W. J. Hunter son of Robert Hunter, to have his aged father, once a Master in the Orange Order, declared incapable of managing his own affairs. But death moved more swiftly than the law.

Sky Blue Vests Tabooed by Men

Men Refuse to Don Peek-a-Boo Shirts or Sky Blue Shorts

Toronto—The Globe editorially refers to activities of some London dress reformers, who, direct their energies to men's attire. The editor admits he hates to discourage bright ideas when ever found, but there is a limit. It may be announced with some degree of authority that more man will not wear a peek-a-boo shirt-waist, even with a belt in the vest gathered at the waist. "Gathered at the waist" there will arouse the ire of the man past middle-age. Another chief problem is what particular set of diet regulations he should follow.

"Further, man will not wear sky-blue shorts, nor brown stockings nor slippers with buckles. Neither the staid business man, nor the eminent statesman, nor any member of the classes above, below or between these, will permit himself to be turned out as a Little Lord Fauntleroy. And again, man will not give up his formal dress for formal occasions. He knows that at most of these set events —banquets, balls, corner-stone layings and so on—he is going to be miserable anyway, and he wants his attire to be in harmony with the sombreness of his feelings. Why put a stiff shirt for stiff solemn ceremonies? Have these reformers no idea of the fitness of things?"

Fashionably Speaking By Lucille

DEAR READERS:

A home without books is a sad place indeed. It is like a house without windows, for its occupants are shut away from the broader view, from contact with the hundreds of fascinating passers-by of bookdom and from glimpses of faraway places in which the mind delights. Every home should have its share of good reading to develop finer tastes in little ones, at least, as well as cater to every member of the family in their love of reading.

It is a mistake when you are choosing books for your home, to buy them in sets. I believe that very few of the handsomely bound books in austere sets that fill some bookcases are ever read, or ever will be read. The children are not allowed to touch them, they will soil them. Therefore what good are they? The only impression they give is of stuffiness, and pretense. There is one exception to the "set" rule and that refers to the works of Shakespeare. By all means choose them in a set.

For the most part it is well to fill your shelves with old favourites, books you really love and enjoy. A few worn volumes speak in better terms of their owners than dozens of expensive and obviously unread books. Some people buy mush, current-fiction that quickly passes and is forgotten. Their bookcases hold little interest after a few years. For after all, when you buy a book you seek something that will long remain as a friend, not some thing that is only worth a passing fancy.

And now, your shelves. Where will they be? If you are fortunate enough to have a library, you can have shelves on either side, as wide as your library permits. If not, there are all kinds of corners where you can arrange shelves for your favorite books. If you lean towards the modernistic you can have one of those skyscraper effects that look like honeycomb cells but are very handy.

Shelves, low-placed, give a room a homier look than when they tower to the ceiling. And if space is limited why not have some shelves under the window seat.

Ash while we are on the subject of books and their homes, it is very thoughtful to place a slim volume, for night reading, in your guest room. But be very careful of your choice, and be sure of your visitor's taste in reading or you can make great mistakes.

Fashionably yours,
LUCILLE

Today's Poem

WINGS

There come to the flowers
In my garden
Butterflies, golden-spotted, tawny,
Glistening dragon flies, zooming
bumblebees,
Droning honey-bees.

Softly whirring comes
The vivid humming-bird
Stopping, slipping, all day long
At nightfall I hear the flutter of the Luna's wings, as
She caresses the velvet cheek
Of the lily.

Correct Manners

—Mrs. Cornelius Beekman—

The Well Written Letter

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1—When one is using letter paper of the "folder"type, in what order should the pages be used?

2—What is the correct heading as to address and so forth, for informal letters?

3—Should regular or note size paper be used for so-called bread-and butter letters?

4—In my far-distant school days I was taught, to indent addresses, but my high school daughter tells me that is passe. What is your opinion?

A. M. S.

1—There isn't any definite rule about the order of pages, but there are two general suggestions. The first one is that we write as the majority of people write—on the first page, then on the last page, and then finishing the inside pages around, write on these two pages as if they were one. This makes an effective-looking letter.

If you are writing only a short note, write, after the first page, on the inside pages, turned about, so they are one page.

2—If we say writing to friends whom we know very well, we may write only the date, or even the day at the top, or our address, if we wish. It seems too businesslike to write the address and the date, as we do in a profession al or business letter.

One thing we must keep in mind, however. If, in the body of the letter we are mentioning a date that is important, then it is important naturally that we make clear the date in the heading.

3—So that we will not be tempted to shorten our bread and butter letter to adapt its length to the size of the paper, it is best to use letter paper, in stead of note paper.

4—Indenting the lines of an address on an envelope or in the heading of a letter isn't passe—it is just another form that we may choose, if we wish. Personally, I still think that the indented lines are much more interesting to look at, and far, far easier to read. This non-indented form of address is, of course, easier on a type writer, and hence its popularity for business letters. But for the social letter the indented lines still are the more popular, because the more artistic looking.

A Formal Announcement

Unnecessary

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

I would appreciate any information you can give me on the correct form of announcing an engagement. It is not possible for me to give a dinner, so I would like to know, if small engraved cards would be in good form.

You needn't worry, dear girl, because you can't give a dinner or any other festivity to celebrate and announce your engagement. This isn't a bit necessary. In fact, the simplest ways of making this charming announcement are in the best form. And sending cards isn't at all in good form.

In perfect taste is the writing of notes to tell the relatives and friends who do not live near enough for you to tell by word of mouth. And this is really all that is necessary. Soon enough, and along the delightful paths of friendship, the news will make its way.

If you wish, also, it is in fine form too to have your mother and father make formal announcement of the engagement in the newspapers.

(Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on etiquette submitted by readers).

Knee-Length Skirt Vogue Has Gone

Even Women Tennis Players Accept New Dictates of Fashion

Auteuil, France, May 21—A noticeable increase in the length of women's tennis-playing skirts as compared with those of recent years proved the only surprise to the few thousand spectators gathered to watch the opening of the French championships at Auteuil today.

There was much comment on the fact that all the women players apparently have abandoned the knee-length skirts of the Suzanne Lenglen style in favor of a longer garment reaching two or three inches below the knee.

The dictatorial edicts of dress-makers lengthening skirts for street wear have evidently been accepted also on the tennis courts.

PLAYING "PEEK-A-BOO" WITH OLD SOL AND LADY LUNA Couturiers are playing "peek-a-boo" behind our backs. It's the latest game that fashion has conceived to intrigue Old Sol and Lady Luna. For the peek-a-boo decolletage is the latest artistic gesture made by the newly arrived evening gowns as well as an innovation in the sun-tan group of sports frocks.

There has been considerable discussion regarding the return of the sun-tan vogue this coming Summer, and while many argue that it is relegated to the past, the number of sports frocks designed with versions of the sun-tan back offer evidence to contrary. The peek-a-boo back shown on the sleeveless sports dress above, suggests that frocks of this type are at least not quite as bold as those of other days. This model is of green and white shantung and has a simple but box-pleated all around. The white yoke is set on a scalloped line above the waist which hints modestly at decoration.

BALL SEASON TO OPEN ON MONDAY TEAM IS READY

Opening Ceremonies Will Be Staged With "Big Shot"

INTERESTING MATCH

Ball [illegible] ...ch all

Those who enjoy their sport need not leave the city for the holiday on Monday next for the ld will be pried off Central Ontario Baseball League and the Belleville Nationals will set sail to capture another pennant. The opening of the season has always been Belleville's home gale and the boys are expecting that all fans will be out to cheer them on. Of course the league is not as strong as in former years but what it lacks in quantity will be made up in quality. Belleville and Kingston will play an eight game series, four games being played in each city and the winner will enter the playdowns for the Provincial championship.

The opening ceremonies will be part of the day and the fans will see some clever batting by one of the "big shots" of the baseball world while other city officials will act as hitter and catcher respectively. The pennants won by the Nationals over a stretch of years from 1919 to the present will be run up the flag mast and these should elicit the admiration of every fan. Of course the game will be the real treat and all are anxiously waiting for the umps to call play.

As for the chances of the Nationals, Walter Cerrow, the manager, states that the team will be ready for the opening and if Kingston wins they will know they have been in a battle. Some real timber have gone before with these two teams competing and it is rumored that Jack Murray of Kingston has assembled a real ball team and will give any team in the Province a run for their money. The Nationals will have the old guard out with Feeney Mills doing the receiving and Alex. Weir on the hurling heap. The infield will be Harry Mills at first, Vernon Wells second, George Scott at short and his brother Bob at the red light station. The outfield has not been determined but, they will be fly chasers of ability. Some new faces may be trotted out for the inspection of the fans.

The Parks Board is now fixing up the diamond and it will be in first class shape by game time providing no rain falls in the interim. The team will practice tonight and every night till Monday. The game will be called at three o'clock and those wishing to purchase reservations in the grandstand may do so at Symons' grocetaria.

LAWN TENNIS

By WILLARD CROCKER

INTRODUCTION

The object of this series is to give tennis enthusiasts a systematic set of instructions for the betterment of their game, that they may meet the various situations on the court with clever understanding of what is most needed. The essential equipment necessary for successful play is emphasized and the proper foundation upon which to build the individual's game is suggested. It must be understood that the development of anyone's game rests solely with the player's will to do. Results are hindered or helped by the individual's manner of setting about it. Learn the proper foundation first and build the remainder of your tennis structure slowly and surely. There are no handicaps unless you allow or make them. The game of tennis must be taken seriously when you play it, no matter when or where. That is the first step to success. Give the "hap-hazard" play and make every moment on the court count for something.

Begin this season's campaign by making up your mind to follow a systematic course of play to develop each department of your game. Study carefully each point of issue off the court, then try determinedly to put it to practical use on the court. As you solve this question, IS THE DEVELOPMENT OF MY GAME WORTH HARD WORK, STUDY AND PRACTICE?

COLLEGIATE HAS SPLENDID TEAM

Will Take Part in District Meet at Napanee June 6th.

Belleville Collegiate Institute will be represented this year by one of the fastest and best-trained track and field teams that the school has produced in recent years. Mr. I. Cutler, popular assistant-principal and coach is faithfully training the boys and it would be no surprise to see them win the Kingston and district meet to be held in the Queen's Stadium June 6th.

This year's team will consist of seven men, Tom Byrne, Harold Mott, Jack Graves, Ralph Champagne, Bruce Sidenia, Louis Maraskas and Jack Murphy. Last year the team was second in the meet at Kingston being beaten by Kingston Collegiate Institute.

The discus throw is to be introduced this year. This is a new event and much interest will be taken by The Ontario Athletic Commission in regard to its popularity in the final meets to be held throughout the province during the month of June.

This year the final events will be held at Hamilton. The members of the collegiate team who place first or second in the Kingston meet and make the standard required by The Ontario Athletic Commission will be sent to Hamilton, all expenses being paid by the commission.

CRICKETER RETIRES

London, Eng., May 21 (CP)—Retirement from active cricket at the end of this season of Wilfrid Rhodes, one of the greatest players the game has produced, was announced by the Yorkshire Post.

O.B.A.A. EXPELS SEVEN PLAYERS

General Upheaval Hinted in Western Ontario Amateur Sport

Windsor, May 21.—Action just taken by the Ontario Baseball Amateur Association may have a serious effect on amateur sports in Western Ontario and may ban a number of players from all lines of sport.

Several members of the Harrow nine, 1929 Essex County intermediate baseball champions, have been ordered suspended from O.B.A.A. ranks and amateur sport for participation in a recent ball game at Hall-Way Hamlet. Suspensions have been announced by Secty W. J. Snyder, of the O.B. A. in a letter to Bert Watson of Leamington, Southern Ontario represents five of that organization.

The game was one between LaSalle seniors and Hall-Way independent baseball outfits. The Harrow players played with the Hall-Way team.

Warning Issued

Bert Watson has been instructed to warn all Southern Ontario amateur baseballers against appearing in games with or against clubs or players of either the Blue Water or Border Cities Baseball Leagues, which is taken to mean that both leagues are to be regarded in future as professional organizations.

These leagues are now operating as independent organizations, without direct affiliation with the O.B.A.A. and if they are considered "professional" in the eyes of the Ontario governing body, then one of the greatest upheavals in the history of Canadian athletics is in sight.

Secretary Snyder in his letter to Bert Watson warns that any baseballers who participate in games with or against teams of the two leagues will not only forfeit their amateur cards for baseball, but also for hockey, rugby, football, basketball and other sports.

There are at least two dozen prominent rugby, hockey and baseball players on the rosters of Blue Water and Border Cities League clubs. More over, a large number of handball artists are also lined up with one softball team or another in the Border Cities Amateur Softball Federation.

JACK MURRAY SOUGHT BY N. Y. AMERICANS

Brockville, May 21.—Rated highly by the press and public of Eastern Ontario as an accomplished pitcher, Jack Murray, of Brockville, net custodian of the Brockville Magedomas, winners of the Ottawa Citizen Shield for the intermediate hockey championship during the past Winter, has been officially approached by the New York Americans to make the jump to professional ranks in the National Hockey League, but is as yet undecided as to his acceptance.

Murray broke into hockey in Brockville, his home town, at the age of 6 years, and for 13 Winters has been responsible for much of the success which came to the Island City via the hockey route. His work last Winter was outstanding and almost uncanny, and many favorable comments appeared in the press of the eastern end of the province lauding his ability.

NEWARK BEARS DEFEAT LEAFS

Hoot Gibson, Starting Hurler, Driven From Mound By Barrage of Hits

Toronto, May 21.—Hoot Gibson spread whitewash all over the Newark Bears in their own igloo a few weeks back, but Tris Speaker's hustling athletes squared that account to their own satisfaction down at the Stadium yesterday.

The Bears trounced Gibson and the Leafs 12 to 3. At least Gibson was the starting pitcher, though he wasn't in there at the finish, but five of the eight hit six runs were scored while he was doing the toiling.

As far as the Leafs and Gibson were concerned the game was over in the first inning, though valiant but fruitless efforts were made by our boys in the other eight innings to catch up.

Gibson was punished for five hits and four runs in the opening session. One of the five hits was a triple by Willie Windle. That the Bears scored two more runs during the rest of the game is neither here nor there. They didn't need them, for the Leafs collected nothing but doughnuts, except in the sixth when they managed to kite Lefty Faulkner's bowling for three ringles and a double, good for two runs.

Fourteen hits were combed by the Speakermen off Gibson and Fisher. Gibson yielded nine in six innings, then went out for a pinch hitter, who hit nothing but a force play ball.

LIVESTOCK MARKET

Toronto, May 21 (CP)—Livestock receipts 382, trade slow. Heavy beef steers 10 to 1075. Butcher steers, good to choice 10 to 1050. Butcher cows medium 7 to 825. Calves, good to choice 1050 to 12. Hogs select n1. Good ewe lambs 12 to 13.

ZEPPELIN'S PROGRESS

Les Palmas, Canary Islands, May 21 (CP)—The Graf Zeppelin, which left Seville, Spain, yesterday for Brazil, passed over here today at ten o'clock, eastern standard time. She was flying low and without apparent difficulty.

PICTORIAL GOLF INSTRUCTION
(BY H. B. MARTIN)

Topping Caused by Lifting The Head

When most of us top a tee shot we have the impression that we do it by going over the top of the ball, or in other words, not hitting deep enough. This is not always the case, in fact, it rarely happens that we top a ball this way. Topping means lifting the head or pulling up the arms which shortens the line of the swing at a point it should be the lowest.

Sometimes we do this by trying to make the ball rise in the air, forgetting that the loft of the club will take care of this. The more we have it fixed in our mind to hit out after the ball the more success we will have and the freer we will be from topping or slicing. Always try to hit through the ball.

Pastel Shades Lead

For spring the clear, vivid tones were predominant but summer will bring a different order of things and soft pastels will be fashionable and effective wears. At Palm Beach, where many summer fashions are initiated, soft pastels were worn during the season of 1921 that has not been equaled for many seasons. Cream white holds first place and next in the order of their popularity come delicate ashes of roses color called hibiscus, azure, a pale blue, gulf water green, smoke-looking and flatteringly, and the cheerful jonquil yellow which the younger set claims as their own.

Women who wish to protect their dainty evening dress slippers may now use a common kitchen commodity and obtain excellent results. Some of the smartest and most exclusive stores are wrapping their slippers in wax paper. They advise their clients to do the same, claiming that wax paper is a better protection than tissue paper even for the perishable gold and silver varieties.

Bias binding is an old stand-by for the mother with small children, and many are the uses to which she can utilize it on tiny rompers and frocks for "best" or "wear best" occasions. But bias binding is seen in new guises, and many little gifts owe their smartness to the clever way it is applied. The pure bone-like pliness of satin or taffeta, most frequently presented in sets of three, are bound gayly in the crisp organdie tape. Lamp shades for the boudoir gain an added daintiness when it binds the top or bottom edges of the shade. Bridge sets are made gayly novel by its application in picturesque designs in each corner.

The new Public library at Bloomfield is completed and is to be opened next Tuesday. It is indeed a credit to that thriving village and shows that just what the Bloomfield Women's Institute can do. Money was raised for the new building by means of whist drives, card parties and dances throughout the winter months. The library is now complete and there are plenty of good books and periodicals. The surroundings are very attractive.

Miss Ethel Gertrude Gordon, of Demorestville, will graduate from the Belleville Hospital on May 22.

On Discovering Comets

There is no weighty reason why any amateur astronomer should not be the discoverer of a comet. The requisites are a telescope of rather large field, and generous illumination, a good store of perisnality and patience and a fair knowledge of the constellations in order that the observer, by reference to the neighboring stars, may be enabled to decide on the fact of the presence of the suspected object. If, after several hours, no motion—in reference to surrounding stars—has been observed, it may be safely said the object is not a comet but a nebula. For almost all comets, especially on our first view of them, have a definite motion during the appearance of small patches of mist. These may never grow much larger than a star of the ninth magnitude, and may bring not much of fame or pride to the discoverer. But the essential requirements for success may have been found. This is the coma, the misty cloud of faintly luminous material of which we have been speaking. The essential thing is put a "tail" nor even the nucleus (the bright core, or point, almost starlike in the brightest of the comets of the coma) but the coma itself.

As we look at the illustrations of a comet we naturally think of it as rushing through space with its tail streaming out behind it just as a flame of fire does when it comes from some hurtling torch. The tail of the comet, however, sometimes goes before it. In fact the tail of the comet which came here be explained, the sun, while powerfully attracting the comet as a whole seems to exert a repulsive force upon the . . . refined material of which the tail is formed. The head or coma, of a normal comet, is frequently as much as five hundred thousand miles

IMPRESSIVE SERVICE CELEBRATED IN MOHAWK CHURCH ON SUNDAY

146th Anniversary of Landing of Indians on Quinte Shores

Tyendinaga Reserve, May 21,—At the 146th anniversary of the landing of the Mohawks on the shores of the Bay of Quinte in the year 1784, which was celebrated by a special service at Christ Church near Deseronto on Sunday morning, May 21.

The Very Reverend Craig, the Dean of Ontario, gave the sermon and was the celebrant at the communion service assisted by the Reverend Herbert Pringle, Rector of the Parish.

There were seventy-five communicants and the church was filled to the doors by visitors from the nearby towns, as well as the parishioners who were eager to participate in the service commemorating the memory of their illustrious forefathers, and their own beautiful church which stands not far from the original site marked by historians as the landing place of the Mohawks in 1784.

The treasured communion service plate which was presented in 1784 by Queen Ann in the year 1712, and which was buried by the Indians in Schawke Village in the days of the Rink, during the war of the Revolution, was used at the special service, and the service was read from the old church went up to the Altar after the service to use it.

The following people in good health air is inscribed—From Her Majesty Queen Ann, etc., to her Mohawks 1712. There are only two pieces left of this set of three which was divided among the Mohawks of the Bay of Quinte and the Six Nations on Brantford. The chalice which bears the inscription and the Royal Coat of Arms is precious, and also the vine with the best of modern plate for beauty and simplicity in spite of the ravages of war, which forced the Mohawk of his beloved domain and home in the Inner Beautiful," the Ohio River.

It is interesting to note that a great, great grandson of Captain Joseph Brant of Revolutionary fame (Mr. Solomon Brant) took part in the service by reading the Epistle. Previous to the Gospel lesson in the Kanyengeh or Mohawk tongue, and that a hymn was also sung in the Indian dialect.

The lovely flowers which graced the altar were the gift of Mrs. Allison Vanderwater of Belleville in memory of Pauline Johnson, the Indian Poetess.

The snowy flowers were like the shining countenance and god-like form of Love, clad in white vestments wield the Holy Ghost, and the pleading of the reverend congregation, telling the wonder of the immortality of the souls sweet beautiful spirit, taking us beyond our ken into the infinite, chanting Joyfully—There is only one God, Worship Him.

The National Anthem was heartily sung at the opening of the service, and must have been a great pleasure to the unseen spirits of the U. E. Loyalist forefathers, whom I trust were present to witness the continued loyalty of their descendants after all the years, when they with their exiled brethren—known as the United Empire Loyalists, helped to build the foundation of our glorious country, Canada. The service opened by the Dean in very inspiring, he spoke of the unprecedented history of the loyalty of the Mohawks to God, to King and Country.

The Mohawk Cairn which was unveiled on Sunday by the Dean of the U. E. L. celebration held last year at Deseronto, was very nice 'neath the Crimson Gold of the United Empire Loyalists, helped to build the foundation of our glorious country, Canada. The Height of Ruskiness

By. Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

What would you think, say, or do when someone who comes into your home often asks the prices of clothing furniture, hats, text, everything new or old, and looks particularly at price tag if still attached? And positively no end to questions of one's personal affairs.

Kathryn.

Oh dear, oh dear, why will people be so rude and so mindful of things that are none of their business? The only thing that we can do is to laugh at such people and to send a present to the children.

Who Writes First?

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

If a young man asks a lady to write to him while she is away, and who can send, who should write first?

D. L.

He writes first, if he has her address since it is reasonable that he should first take advantage of the opportunity, for which he has asked. But, in the event that he has not her address, and usually she should write him.

If One Has Not Met the Bride

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Is it correct to give a wedding gift to a bride if you do not know her? I am going about with a young man and his brother is to be married in the near future. I know this young man well, but have never met his bride-to-be.

E. J. C.

Yes, this is in good form. That is, if you really wish to send a present to the bride of your friendship for the fiance, it is correct to send it, but it must be sent to the bride-to-be, addressed to her at her home.

(Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on etiquette submitted by readers).

THE BEAUTY BOX

When copper-colored hair is to be brightened, use the henna pack to which peroxide has been added. To two tablespoonful of the pure powdered henna add enough hot rain water to form a thick paste. Four in two teaspoonfuls of peroxide. Apply this to the hair if you are in need of a shampoo. Let remain on for ten minutes, then give a rousing shampoo, followed by many rinsings and at last a lemon rinse. The tarnished halo will be a lovely redgold again.

Here is consolation for the woman who balks against having candles set upon her birthday cake on the score of magnifiers. Facial maps look their worst as we see them reflected in the looking glass. Wrinkles are hardly accurately noticeable to the optic lamp appear like irrigation ditches. Pores of the skin remind one of the pin cushion. Scars and blackheads and blemishes are seldom as terrible as they seem. Many of them in fact are simply a woman's eye—don't exist at all.

Good laughers seldom have hollow cheeks. They are constantly exercising those muscles that lace and interlace between temples and jaws. They keep 'em strong and in order. Old Mollygrumble gets a thin face. She hangdog look, a pinched, narrow nose. Laughter is a good thing; it helps a woman to endure her own society, gives her pleasant thoughts and insures against her face wrecking itself before his time.

Sage tea is an old fashioned hair powder.

coloring agent. It works, and is satisfactory if a brown-drab tone is desired, but it wears off and must be applied again. Boil one cupful sage leaves in one quart of water, letting the quart boil down to a pint. Cool, strain and add a tablespoonful of rubbing alcohol. Apply with cotton or a small brush immediately after the shampoo, when the hair is dry. Experiment first with a single lock.

If you have forgotten to get the new tube of tooth paste and need a substitute, use equal parts of salt and baking soda, which combination make an excellent make-shift tooth powder.

ROAD DAMAGED BY RAINSTORM REPAIRS MADE

Long Hill to Oak Lake on Stirling Road Had Gravel Washed Off

COUNTY ROAD GRADING

(Special to Staff Reporter)

TRENTON, Ont. May 21.—Although the condition of the roads throughout the southern section of Hastings County is generally good, considerable damage was done by Monday's heavy rainstorm. The long hill to Oak Lake on the Stirling road especially suffered, much of the surface gravel running off in the deluge which poured down over the hill, and deep grooves being formed in the road bed. Road gangs were at work bright and early this morning drawing gravel and scraping and no doubt within a few days it will again be in the good condition of a few days ago.

Most of the country roads came through the heavy rain of last week in good shape, and with a little grading will be ready for the heavy summer traffic.

Lost Suitcase Traced Owner

Letter Reveals Address of Black Cape, Quebec Man

(Special By Staff Reporter)

TRENTON, Ont. May 21.—Lost by its owner early last September, a suit case containing at least one hundred dollars worth of clothing and other goods was returned to J. W. Leblanc, of Black Cape, Province of Quebec, a few days ago by the Trenton Police department.

The suitcase was picked up on the highway some six or seven months ago and taken to the Police Station, where a careful search was made for any trace of the owner, and when none was found, it was placed away until some one would be found for it. A few days ago it was decided to give the clothing to a needy family, but just before handing it over, a letter fell out of a book in the suit case with the Black Cape address written thereon. The police immediately communicated with Mr. Leblanc, and he replied, describing the contents and proving them to be his. They were accordingly despatched to the Gaspe Peninsula, and Mr. Leblanc is no doubt congratulating himself on being so lucky. He lost the suitcase while returning from a motor trip through western Ontario.

A smaller bag containing articles of wearing apparel, was found on the highway just west of Trenton last Sunday, and is now at the Police office awaiting a claimant.

DETROIT POLICE CHIEF REMOVED

Dismissal By Mayor Follows Drive on Gambling Joints

Detroit, May 21.—Affairs in the Detroit Police Department came to a head Tuesday. Mayor Bowles announced the dismissal of Harold H. Emmons as Police Commissioner and the appointment of Thomas C. Wilcox of the United States Department of Justice in his place.

The request for Commissioner Emmon's resignation yesterday climaxed one of the most turbulent periods in the history of the Police Department. Mr. Emmons, who entered office Jan. 20, with the department in the throes of an investigation of the shooting of Inspector Henry J. Garvin, last night found himself discharged, less than four days after taking a determined stand against downtown gambling places.

In his letter to his Commissioner, the Mayor said that he was requesting his resignation because he felt that "circumstances demanded" it. Other than this, he offered no explanation of his action.

The first indication that the Mayor had split with his Commissioner came Monday after the executive resumed the duties following a three-day vacation at the Kentucky Derby. In the interim, Commissioner Emmons had authorized a series of police raids on handbooks, resulting in the arrest of almost 300 persons.

PASTURE LANDS MUCH IMPROVED

Increased Flow of Milk Expected From Richer Pastures

(Special By Staff Reporter)

STIRLING, Ont., May 21.—Pasture and hereabouts are in much better shape than they have been for some time due to the heavy rainfall of the past week, and an increase in the milk yield is expected to be noted almost immediately. Before the recent rains, very little pasture could be found, and a shortage of milk was noticed, the Belleville Cheese Board feeling it on two different occasions when there was no cheese offered. This was a direct result of the shortage of milk, as the cheese factories could not open until they were sure of a sufficient supply.

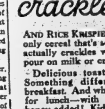
Prince Edward County, which was also suffering from a pasturage short age, is in much improved condition now, and there should be little trouble for the rest of the season, as the grass has a good growth already.

OPEN TENDERS FOR TRENTON PAVEMENTS

(Special by Staff Reporter)

Trenton, Ont., May 21.—A special meeting of the Town Council has been called for this evening when the sealed tenders for the paving operations which have been called for will be opened. It is expected that four or five companies will have put in a bid for the work, and considerable interest is being shown in the matter. Work will start within a few days of the announcing of the company awarded the contract, and a large number of men will be employed.

SPOKE ON SUBJECT OF "MARTHA AND RUTH"



(Special By Staff Reporter)

TRENTON, Ont., May 21.—Rev. C. E. Nicoll of the Presbyterian Church here was the guest speaker at the regular meeting of the Order of the Eastern Star held in the Oddfellows Hall on Monday evening. He took as his subject "Martha and Ruth", which are two of the points of the star, and gave a most illuminating and interesting address. Following the address, refreshments were served and a fine program given. Mrs. F.L. Mufroe acted as pianist through the evening.

WHY SUFFER FROM YOUR LIVER?

Why be handicapped with unsightly blotches on the face, eyes with yellow tinge, mind dulled and mouth full of foul, fetid breath? This indicates a torpid liver. Headache, Dizziness and Biliousness surely follow. You must stimulate your lazy liver, start the bile flowing with Carter's Little Liver Pills.

They also act as a mild laxative, purely vegetable, free from calomel and poisonous drugs, small, easy to swallow, and not habit forming. They are not a purgative that causes pain, unpleasant after effect following, on the contrary a good tonic. All Druggists 25c and 75c red pkgs.

SCHOOL CADETS HELD PARADE

Stirling Scene of Colorful Church Parade on Sunday

STIRLING, May 21.—(By Mail)—The death of Mrs. Bidwell Sine took place in Frankford at the home of her, cousin, Mrs. Lawrence on Thursday morning, May 15th.

The deceased had been in very poor health for sometime, a month or more ago, she had come back to her own home in Stirling, but only stayed a couple of weeks, when she realized that she was unable to carry on alone as she went to Frankford to Mrs. Lawrence's; Monday she was overtaken by a stroke and took another next day and did not regain consciousness.

The deceased's maiden name was Margaret Wright and her home was north of Minto and she was twice married, her first husband being Mr. Wayman of which union was one daughter, who became Mrs. Charles Clements, who pre-deceased her by some fourteen years. Her second husband, Mr. Bidwell Sine died about two years ago. A brother Mr. James Wright survives her.

She was a faithful member of St. Paul's United Church, Stirling, where she has lived for years.

The funeral took place at Mrs. Lawrence's home in Frankford and proceeded to Belleville, where burial took place in the cemetery.

Hands Across the Sea St. Paul's Mission Band

St. Paul's Mission Band met on Sunday, May 18th, in the Church Parlors with a large attendance. The President, Miss Pansy Lansing in the chair. After the opening hymn, Thelma Hepburn and Marion Tucker led in prayer. Madelins Lucey read the Scripture lesson found in Romans 10th Chapter. After the approval of the minutes of the previous meeting, two members were appointed to write their missionary, Miss McHarrie, of Neemuch, India. Farley Lindenfield gave an interesting reading and Madeline and Marie Lucey sang a duet "A Little Kingdom I Possess" then Miss E. W. Rowland gave a talk on "Comparisons" bringing out the advantages the Canadian Christian boys have over the children of non-Christian lands.

This was followed by a sharp-shooting item in which the girls were the contestants and the ammunition written items regarding India, which were read as each number was called. This item was very interesting. After an other hymn was sung, the Mispah Benediction was pronounced.

Ladies Guild Meeting

The High School Cadets marched to St. Paul's Church Sunday morning where Rev. E. W. Rowland preached to them from the charge to Joshua "Morts is Dead do Thou arise and go in and Possess the Land." It was a most interesting sermon and cannot help being a guiding influence in the lives of the young men present. Boaz Church by its appropriate selection. The choir sang "God Bless Our Empire". The Corps was in command of Capt. Lewis, Lieuts. Martin, McCoe and Anderson.

Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Donnan, Mr. and Mrs. Melville Donnan and two children motored to Whitby on Sunday to visit Mr. Melville Donnan's sister Mrs. Hugh Morton and family.

Mrs. Hugh Morton is still confined to bed, though progressing favorably.

Mr. Hans Johnston was in grave danger from the fire adjacent in H. G. Martin's office. Everything was taken out, but fortunately, with the heroic efforts of the firemen it was saved though some of the furniture was badly damaged by being thrown from the upstairs window.

How to Be Popular

(By Beatrice Fairfax)

If you were an 18-year-old girl, what would be your greatest desire?

To be beautiful? To be rich? To marry happily? To succeed with your job?

Girls want all these things I suppose, in greater or less degree. But there is one thing that most girls want more than they want any of these.

What a normal girl supremely desires is to be popular.

And I am not willing to say that this isn't a fairly reasonable wish.

It goes without saying that the popular girl has plenty of young men admirers. But other girls admire and like her, too, and so do older people, and so do children.

If she is at school or college, she is made class president. If she has a job, she is pretty sure to be promoted. If she stays at home, she is the family favorite. If she goes to a dance every young man cuts in. If the telephone rings, it is she who is wanted. Everybody loves and praises her. To other less fortunate girls she seems to lead a perfect life.

The question, therefore, naturally arises How does popularity happen? Is it entirely a gift of nature, is one born that way? If not, how does one acquire it?

In the first place, it isn't likely to be the languid or sleepy girl who is popular, but the girl who is full of life We all find vitality attractive and respond to it.

Second, warm-heartedness counts greatly. People love a girl who is not concentrated on herself, who has sympathy for others.

Third, personal grace and charm are not to be overlooked, indeed they are important. But, dear girls, do not sigh for beauty. Beauty alone never made anyone popular.

Fourth, I must note the ability to DO things, which it so important that I should perhaps have placed it first. The girl who insists on sitting in a corner with a book can never compete for popularity with the girl who can play the piano well (and who is always willing to play it) or who can sing. Or who can quickly make a good-looking dress or hat for herself or a friend. Or who can cook a good supper for a group of people with per fect ease. Or who can get up a drama tic club and put on plays and act in them. Or who can dance well. Or who can play bridge or tennis. The more things, of course, the better.

And fifth, the popular girl is never sentimental or tiresomely personal in her relations with other people. She doesn't take it for granted that every boy who takes her to a play is in love with her.

You see that some of these qualities can be acquired and some cannot.

If you are naturally lacking in vitality, you cannot make yourself over into a human magnet, I admit.

But every girl can try to be less self-centered. You can try to like other people, lots of them, the result of which will be that they will like you.

You can make your manners even more agreeable than they already are; and you can take pains to be always well-grooming and carefully dressed in becoming, though not necessarily expensive clothes. These things, however, I need scarcely mention because some girl already pay a great deal of attention to such matters—too much I should say—in proportion to others.

And instead of being satisfied with the things you can already do, you can, by working hard, learn how to do more things. And while you are about it, learn to do them well. Of course you can't learn to play the piano overnight, or cooking for that matter, or wood-carving, or Spanish. It's worth while to be thorough.

But it wasn't until 1909 that I really tumbled to see the depth of the Chatham gander. In March I saw a family of six passing my house. I felt sure they were feeding on Colonel Plaine, so the next morning found me out there with a lantern searching for their tracks, and long before the fast stars had closed their eye I had five decoys out and the blanket staked down, ready for action. But it seemed they weren't coming.

The sun is just high enough to be making olden windows in the distant houses to the west of me when I look to the south and a short, dark line appears in the sky. It is geese, sure, and they are coming straight this way.

Just as I am crawling under I see, to my disgust, two men coming out to ditch, right on the next farm; my heart sinks, as they will scare them away. But on and on come the geese. I can now see them plainly and begin to hear their familiar honking, talking notes. "A-h-k! A-h-k!" Imagine my delight when I see them come right on past those men, headin straight for me.

As they come over the field that I am in, a call comes from under the blanket, "A-honk!" and the old leader replies, turning my way, seeing the decoys, they all bow their wings and drop their black feet to come down. But just before they get in range of my deadly aim, this cunning old fish-ane's voice suddenly rings out on the morning air, "Honk! Honk! Khonk! Khonk!" Those sharp, alarming danger-cries are given in rapid succession, and every goose, darts for his life. Their terrified cries can hardly be described. They finally fall in line again and fly back towards the lake.

That morning I was all alone and as I urged the driver along I was doing some tall thinking. And really I felt like a one-cent piece coming home from Klondyke! Here were my thoughts: Why did he pass right over within shooting range of these two men, and then shy before he got that close to me? Moreover, why were they so dreadfully frightened? Possibly because he saw one red hair of my topknot projecting from under the blanket and, to his sorrow, he had seen that fellow before. "That's our deadly enemy! Everybody get, for your lives!" were the cries he uttered.

Well, these thoughts presented them selves to me in this way: He does not know me. And those are some of the same geese that come around here every spring, for they recognize the same places. To be frank, I studied wild geese until I felt like flying. Surely they must be the same way. They do know me as their enemy. No man on earth knows their cunningness and depth. If they know me as their enemy, surely they would know a friend if they had one. But what can I do? I own only ten acres of land, and it is very much disfigured by taking about three feet of the surface off for making drain-tile and brick. But I will try.

So I called the neighbors (mostly boys) together and told them if they would not shoot at a wild goose around here I would bring some right to that place and we would shoot a limited number when the opportunity was right. This seemed too good to be true, as only one of them had ever shot a wild goose, and all jumped at the scheme.

I graded up a bank at the far side of this sore-eye ten acres, making, not a pond, but a mud-hole. Then I bought seven wing-clipped Canada geese from an old gentleman who had trapped them unlawfully, put them back in this cavity and fed them there. They soon became quite tame and interesting. This was in the spring of 1904. The seven geese and they roamed all over the ten acres, making this mud-hole their home; but no wild ones ever came. In 1905 none came; 1906 brought the same result; and even 1907, came, but no geese. And really I was the mark of the neighborhood; the questions I was asked would surely jar the cheries on Aunt Sarah's Sunday bonnet.

But April the second, 1908, was my birthday, for the whole neighborhood was aroused long before breakfast. "The geese have come! the geese have come! Jack said they would come!" and everybody had a gun.

Now I was face to face with another serious problem, but as I listened to me as I explained that if we did not shoot at them until they got settled down and made this their spring home, the ones we did not kill would return next spring and surely bring more with them. Every hunter was very reasonable, and, after having a quiet chat, each took his gun back home. In about three weeks I hoisted the signal and every one was on deck. I believe I was the biggest boy of the bunch. All of us went over to the tile yard and watched those seven geese from the upstair window until the goose fever got a few notches higher than our nerves. Then we all went down and crawled on behind the embankment. "Now," I said, "don't shoot at them sitting, or you will hit my tame ones." Then I said "Cock your guns," and I gave an alarming "Honk!" and that instant every one of the eleven geese was in the air, and "Bang! Bangety! Bang!" went the eight guns into them. When the smoke had finally cleared away, five geese lay dead on the muddy water. The other six, screaming with fright, flew away to the lake. Now how fortunate this was for me: The eight guns came from five homes and thus each home had a good fat goose for the oven. And all was going well so far.

I did not expect to see those geese come back until another spring, but to my surprise and delight two days later were circling high in the air and honking for their lost companions. Finally they went away again, but the next morning they were back, bright and early, and to my great satisfaction they lit and fed with mine, and it was not long before they quieted down. I asked the neighbors not to shoot at them again that spring, and all kindly agreed.

Then came a whole lot more fun for the public. "Jack Miner is not going to shoot those geese; he says they will come back next spring!" Really this furnished fun for a great percentage of the community. An old gentleman told me how his great-uncle Davs killed 'steen wild geese before breakfast, and this dear old gentleman's white hair just shook as he explained the points, how to clean right up on this site, and not one could get away if his plan were carried out. Why, bless your life, they had gotten so tame I honestly believe I could have killed them with a fishing pole. Yet of course I respected his grey hairs enough not to interfere with his trembling thoughts.

One morning about May 1st they rose up and circled higher and higher and started directly north.

It was not until the next spring that the flood of sneering questions poured in upon me! "Jack, when do you expect the six geese to return?" And another smart fellow said, "Jack which direction will they come from?" But feeling confident I was able to laugh last I just gritted my teeth inwardly, and smiled from the outside and answered as kindly as I possibly could. I only remember answering one fellow short. He said, "Jack, when are the geese coming." I said,y "Likely they will come when they get ready."

Sunday morning, March 19th, 1909 the ground was frozen as hard as Pharaoh's heart. I was out watering our self-starter. While she was drinking out of the trough I was putting my time talking to my pet geese which were not over thirty yards away. All at once they all started honking in the very top of their voices and acting extremely strangely; but in spite of their chatter, when I pricked up my ears I could hear strange geese honking, and looking up over my right shoulder I saw some thing that caused my heart to fairly jump. There was a string of wild geese, with wings bowed, coming right towards me. Finally they dropped their black feet and lit on the ground some of them not over twenty-five yard sfrom where I was standing, and I had the great pleasure of seeing these wild geese dance and flap their wings with joy as they honked aloud to each other, apparently introducing their families and friends. I fully expected to seen them fly away at any instant, but no. As they saw me, the leader spoke quite sharply, and all was as still as night in a graveyard, with their eyes riveted on me. But they were quick for only a few seconds; then they honked louder than ever, and our geese flapped their wings and honked, apparently for joy.

Well I finally withdrew, coming away as slowly as a pall-bearer walking to cross on the Detroit-Windsor bridge. I put the old nag in the shafts and we went to Church; but for all the good that sermon did me, I might as well have stayed home. He evidently preached from somewhere between "Generations and Revolutions" but you could not prove it by me. All I ate Canada geese that the six had could think about were these twenty-one back with them, their eyes and cold. Best of all, it was my turn to laugh, and I wanted to get back home to give vent to my feelings, and as soon as the benediction was pronounced I was the first one out the door, got into our machine, and, believe me, went home in high.

On or about April 12th I had the photographer out and a photograph taken.

OLD TIMER IS NOW NEARING THE END

HALIFAX, N.S., May 20 (CP). — A faithful servant of the Government is awaiting word from Ottawa that will determine whether or not another year in the public service is to be conferred by old age, whose hand has been withheld for a longer period than most ships can claim. The servant is Canadian Government cable steamer Tyrian, 1,259 tons gross and 66 tons net, recently went into drydock here at the venerable age of sixty-one. Her hull was examined by the steamboat inspection service, and official decision is awaited from Ottawa to solve the problem of granting or refusing a license for another year. If, after the inspection, the Tyrian sturdily emerges from drydock and made her indom itable way up the harbor to the Paved Wharf, where smoke is curling slowly from her funnel and the crew are carrying on as usual, hoping the departmental thumbs will be turned up when the case of the Tyrian is considered.

The trim boat is distinct among cablehips in that she was once a trans-Atlantic passenger liner, operating for years off Nova Scotia and in the St. Lawrence district, she is well known on the Atlantic coast and when the time for scrapping does arrive, the news will bring a pang to many veteran mariners.

The Tyrian an iron single screw steamer, was built by R. Duncan and Company of Glasgow, Scotland, in 1888. She first plied the Atlantic for the Anchor Line, then became a West Indies merchantman, and finally a cablehip.

More than thirty years ago the Tyrian, then owned by the late ex-Mayor James T. Hamilton, of Halifax, was brought to Halifax by Captain Neil Munro, now Port Warden. The ship was subsequently sold to the Canadian Government, which at a cost of thousands of dollars, transformed her for the cable service.

Most of the crew of 48 under Captain Swanson, have their homes here.

WHEELED CITY RIVALS HOTEL

Canadian National Railways Has City to House Shriners

Toronto, Ont., May 21.—Like desert nomads, Shriners from the corners of the Continent will shortly descend upon Toronto, bringing their caravans to rest at the meeting place of the Imperial Council.

When that soun of the desert follow their guiding star each year, they come in such numbers that few cities on the Continent can house them. It has been the practice of the railroads to supplement the accommodation of the convention city by packing Pullman cars in yards for the convention period and thus caring for a number of the delegates.

In America's cities, railroad yards were often of the freight variety and usually inconveniently located at the edge of the city where the Shrine convention was to proceed. For this year's session, the Canadian National Railways was able to engineer what has just completed building a coach yard in the heart of downtown Toronto. This is the first yard ever built solely for the use of the Shrine guests.

Sir Henry W. Thornton, Chairman and President of the railway system, has taken a personal interest in the Shrine convention, believing it to be the finest opportunity accommodation for Canada to increase its revenues from the tourist trade and make itself known. Mr. Thornton placed upon his officers the desirability of providing the best of accommodation and extending the most generous hospitality.

After a staff conference at Toronto headquarters, at which were present W. J. Moffatt, Assistant General Passenger Agent, was placed in charge of housing the Shriners. To provide the maximum of facilities, he decided to build a city out of the coach yards. They planned and built what is the "City of Temple Park." Mr. Moffatt became "Mayor" Moffatt and he set about the task of creating a city with in a city with every convenience available.

Temple Park has its own breadquarters in the shape of two-storied fireproof building. This was altered inside and out and painted inside in the Shrine colors of red, green and yellow. A beauty parlor was put in for the Shriners' wives, and a barber shop, shoe shine and valet service for the male dwellers of this unique wheeled city. Rest rooms for noble and their ladies and a mail room were provided. These were equipped with radio and, in case of inclement weather, with heaters. A complete battery of telephones was installed, a telegraph station, lunch room, restaurant and a post office. An information office was placed downstairs and even a press room for news paper correspondents.

156 Shower Baths

Parading on a June day in a heavy uniform or pesspelay dress, as never than 150 showers were erected in the temploid city. Gates were erected at the entrance which brilliantly lighted, and carried out in Oriental design. A uniformed policing staff was set up by the Canadian National Railways, an investigation department and the city was given its own fire squad. Dwellings in the temploid city will even have their own court for the Shrine bas s discipline committee.

Further to work out the idea of a city, each track in the yard was called an "avenue" and each car on the track given a distinguishing number. The avenues between the tracks are all concrete and a 50-foot concrete roadway leads to the end of each. Twice the citizens of the "inner city" have but to tell a cab their "address in Temple Park" and they are conveyed at the door. The whole "city" is floodlighted throughout and will be guarded nightly.

Such accommodation was not built without sacrifice and the Canadian National Railways, which uses its regular coach yard activities six miles out of Toronto and built trackage to the new yard. Mr. W. J. Moffatt of the Imperial Potentate of the Imperial Council, visited Toronto recently and was loud in his praises of Temple Park and stated it was the best accommodation of its kind ever provided the conclave. His judgment was unanimous and more requests for accommodation than could be provided came in. Mayor Moffatt was frequently the creation of Temple Park Annex. The "city" itself has the cable service.

Most of the crew of 48 under Captain Swanson, have their homes here.

A $21,000,000 city that will vanish in a week: An artist's drawing of the City of Temple Park, the Canadian National Railways' answer to the housing problem created in Toronto by the June Convention of the Imperial Council of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine. Here Shrine nomads from the corners of the continent will make their homes, holding 150 Pullmans. So insistent was the demand for accommodation that Temple Park Annex had to be added. This suburb holds another 125 cars, making a total of 475 Pullmans. Each Pullman is worth from $40,000 to $60,000.

room for 350 Pullmans and the Annex was erected along similar lines holding another 125 cars, making a total of 475 for "Greater Temple Park." With this suburban development, a parking area for automobiles was added and a taxi stand.

It is estimated that Temple Park will have a population of 10,000 inhabitants. The incoming Temples will stay in the cars in which they arrived. Some of them will park their dinners with them. In order to show Canada's attractions, the C.N.R. dining car department, which will supply the diners, has planned to introduce into the daily menus a choice article of food from every province in the Dominion. It will even supply flowers from far away Alaska. These will be frozen in ice and brought here. For each Temple Park dweller there will be a booklet souvenir of his stay in the wheeled city. This takes pains to outline in picture and story the attractions Canada has to the sportsman, adventurer and holiday-maker. The city even has its own souvenir stationery.

Some idea of how far afield this appeal will reach can be gained from the list of Temples which have chosen Temple Park as their home. These are: Medinah, Chicago, Ill.; Almonah Nashville, Tenn.; El Riad, Sioux Falls, S.D.; Anaar, Springfield, Ill.; Aleppo, Boston, Mass.; Beni Kedem Charleston, West Va.; Kosair, Louisville, Ky.; Oreia, Wheeling, West Va.; Salaam, Newark, N.J.; Boumi, Baltimore, Md.; Al Ghan, Cumberland Md.; Syrian, Akron, O.; Indra, Oklahoma City, Okla.; Kora, Lewiston Me.; Abu-bekr, Sioux City, Ia.; Tebala, Rockford, Ill.; Syrian, Cincinnati, O.; Tripoli, Milwaukee, Wis.; Wa Wa, Regina, Sask.; Kharium Winnipeg, Man.; Gleeh, Victoria ed on Mr. J. Gay's property.

REV. CRAIG IS MAIN SPEAKER

Tyendinaga Reserve — An enjoyable banquet was held at the Mohawk Factory on Saturday evening, May 17th, which, was given by the Senior Branch to the juniors, for their splendid achievement in winning the banner, as well as the highest number of marks in the Diocesan competition which was held recently for the Diocese of Ontario.

There were fourteen juniors present, and the wife of Reverend Craig, the Dean of Ontario, was the guest of honor, and gave a most interesting talk to the juniors after the delightful dinner which was served by Senior Mohawk Branch of the W. A.

Reverend Mr. Pringle also gave a short talk which was very pleasing and instructive to the juniors.

The table was very lovely with red and white flowers and presided with most festive appearance, favors were given by pulling of red streamers placed on the side of each plate, which proved very exciting to the juniors.

Gringo Privateer

By

Peter B. Kyne

"There's the devil to pay in El Cajon Bonita, Mr. Burney," he announced. "We had two outposts down there, two men on each outpost to salt the cattle, repair the fences, clean out the water holes and keep an eye on the cattle. One of those four men has just come into headquarters. She's leaking a little and reports that yesterday morning he and his partner were ambushed. His partner fell out of the saddle, so I suppose he's dead, but the man who escaped made a run for it and away with two unimportant wounds. He made for No. 2 outpost to warn the other two men, but the enemy had been there before him. He found their charred bodies in the ashes of the cabin they occupied, so he came in to headquarters to report."

"What a sweet hint to stay out of El Cajon Bonita," Mr. Burney murmured thoughtfully. "That makes it a little exciting, doesn't it, Your Majesty?"

"It does. I can't send more men to their deaths down there, even if I had on my payroll men foolish enough to go." His Majesty's big fists clenched. "Oh, God," he ground out, 'to be locked and have to like it. To see bandits robbing me in daylight and to pretend it's an optical illusion."

"One is never licked until one is counted out and I never heard of any of my relatives getting counted out until they had first been in a fight, Your Majesty."

Ken Burney's gaze came to rest almost sympathetically, upon the "last named king." The king stared back at him, and though no word was spoken nevertheless His Majesty saved—with his eyes:

"Son will you?"

CHAPTER V

And with his eyes, Kenneth Burney replied that he would, then murmured: "What a gay conversation we're indulging in! Your Majesty, you must not permit these worries to oocupy you. Take my advice and pull out of El Cajon Bonita. The game isn't worth the candle."

One of his eye lids fluttered a ten thousandth of an inch.

One of the king's eyelids fluttered a ten thousandth of an inch also. Then: "You're right, son. I'm licked. I must abandon my favorite dream of seeing Miguel Callejo entirely surrounded by German silver handles. But I still have hopes of lobbing Martin Bruce."

"He's my personal concern, of course sir. I will not go out of my way to meet him, but—"

"I'll bet you five thousand pistol cartridges, young feller, and you practice pulling and shooting until you're at least half accurate as Martin Bruce. Your meeting is inevitable, but at least you can give yourself an even break. If you kill him I'll hire the best criminal attorneys in New Mexico to exonerate you. I'll protect you while I have a dollar left."

Mr. Burney beamed upon his host. "My father," he said, "always impressed upon me that it was exceedingly unmannerly of one to whistle at his meals—particularly at another's man's table. And yet——"

Very softly, with a beautiful flutelike note, Mr. Kenneth Burney, his smoky eyes cast pleasly upward, whistled Chopin's Funeral March.

"And that's not for his own funeral either," His Majesty whispered proudly to the princess. "I tell you he's a gift from God!"

The princess had been "out" three years, yet in all that time she had never met any man who remotely resembled this strange guest of her ex-; marktable father had so mysteriously accumulated. Vaguely she resented him. He was a nobody, yet, undoubtedly, he was a somebody. There could be no denying but that he was perfectly; sure of himself at all times and never more sure of himself than he was in her presence—which was a condition the princess had come to regard as most emphatically, not a prescriptive right of young men.

He paid no particular attention to her; he appeared unimpressed with her importance and his own insignificance; her father alone appeared to claim his alert interest, nor had the princess ever known the king to exhibit such a profound liking for any young man. That Ken Burney's personality had quite bowled her father over Muriel had no doubt, for there he was besting slow time with his forefinger, in mock sympathy, as Ken Burney whist led Chopin's Funeral March.

"You're a real whistler, Mr. Burney," she interrupted him presently.

"He's a whistling fool," His Majesty agreed heartily. "He hits whistling from the level of an infernal nuisance to a high art. Alas if he could only shoot as well as he whistles!"

Said Ken Burney:

"The heights by great men reached and kept,

Were not attained by sudden flight.

But they, while their companions slept

Were toiling upward in the night."

"Fine," the princess agreed with a faint touch of scorn. "Now be brotherlike and tell us that practice makes perfect."

"Don't be snooty, darling," the king pleaded. "Now, my boy, can you whistle 'Listen to th' Mocking Bird'?"

"Certainly, sir."

"If he attempts it," the princess warned, "I shall leave the table."

"Happily, no such sacrifice impends Princess. I never whistle it except in the process of making a living. I whistled for forty weeks in vaudeville once——four shows daily—and if you think enough hasn't been sufficient for me you're a poor judge of human nature."

"Ha!" the king bellowed, vastly amused. "Ha! Ha-ha! Forty weeks in vaudeville, eh? What did they pay you for whistling soul?"

"Three hundred dollars a week, sir."

"Beats punching cows at seventy a month and found."

"If I'd only had cows to associate with in vaudeville instead of the vaudevillians I'd be whistling still, sir."

"Ha! Ha-ha! Ha! What else did you do?"

"A little fancy rope-twirling—jumping in and out of my hoop while I whistled. It was a terrible life."

"Why did you do it, you silly?" the princess demanded. And this was a perfectly sensible query for her to make, because, fortunately, she had never had to do anything that annoyed her.

"My father had endorsed a note of mine, Princess, and got stuck with it. So I went to work to pay him out, and when I had done that I reverted to type."

The princess permitted herself a little throaty chuckle.

"What else can you do that's funny, Mr. Burney?"

"I can play the piano by note, and I can recite The Face on the Barroom Floor and The Shooting of Dan McGrew—all the verses, Princess, and when I sing Where Is My Wandering Boy Tonight? you feel like weeping out loud."

"Just an old-fashioned boy," the princess murmured irrelevantly and the king winked at her.

When at length, the princess rose from the table and the king and Burney followed her into the living-room it was evident that the princess' curiosity was far from satisfied. She pointed to the piano. 'Do your stuff, Yonkers," she commanded.

Burney sat at the instrument, ran facile fingers over the keys and played, with the touch of a master, Gershwin's Rhapsody in Blue.

"Boy passes is ex as a pianist one hundred per cent," the princess declar ed. "Now sing something."

He played and sang Handel's exquisitely lovely Where E'er You Walk. He had a sweet lyric baritone voice and it was apparent that at some period in his career somebody who knew music had given him more than a little instruction.

"He's crazy," the princess declared. "He's in vaudeville when he might sing mammy songs and gotten a real hand."

"Oh, but I did sing in vaudeville," Mr. Burney protested. "After my whistling act, in which I opened the show as 'The Whistling Cowboy,' I appeared two numbers later in evening dress: with a false mustache, as Diego Romero, the idol of Spain, direct from Madrid, in a repertoire of Spanish songs. I used to knock 'em dead with La Golondrina—Like this!"

"And what did they pay you for that?" the delighted king demanded at the conclusion of the song.

"Two hundred a week sir."

"You're right, Myriel. The boy's a raving lunatic. He quit three hundred a week as a fancy rop-twister and whistler and two hundred a week as the idol of Spain to harass cows from the hurricane deck of a disrespectful horse at seventy dollars a month and found. Why, he ought to have a keeper!"

"Here, here, there was a reason" Mr. Burney protested. "I loathed my whistling but liked my singing——all but the false mustache which flew off one night as I took a high note. They gave me the razzberry for that and my accompanist and I had a quarrel about it. He blamed me for queering our act; so we cruffled a little and he hit me a hard soak in the throat and made a front out of me for three months. It was all so discouraging I just couldn't stand it any longer and quit for good."

The princess gave herself over to the heartiest laughter she had ever known.

"Isn't he precious pop?" she cried. "Imagine his mustache getting all tangled up with high C!"

The king was chuckling too, meanwhile thanking Providence that Ken Burney had arrived tonight, of all nights, to save him from the blackest of despair over the situation in El Cajon Bonita. It occurred to him now that here was the first young man he had ever had in his house who was remotely worth entertaining.

"Ever figure on being a radio entertainer—or announcer, Ken?" he queried presently.

"No, sir. The hours are irregular and the life is confining. What I'm out to do is to earn a sizable wad, stock up my father's ranch again and go back to my first and only love. I don't take kindly to another man's collar."

CHAPTER VI

"Well, if Art Graydon decided to put you on the payroll tomorrow you can probably by the practice of strict economy save enough out of your wages to buy a calf a month. After a thousand months of this——"

"One month, if you please, sir. Perhaps two, although I doubt it. Then Santa Claus is going to be nice to me."

"Do I look like Santa Claus? the king demanded, with some indignation.

"Enough like him to pass for his twin brother, sir. I know how much a certain service, well performed, will be worth to you. I've looked you up and have discovered that you've a great hand to give good pay to a good man so the day after tomorrow we'll discuss the disputing details." He got to his feet and rose from the piano. "If you please, Miss Muriel, may I retire now? I'm tired and I'd like to have a good night's rest before tackling my entrance examinations tomorrow."

"Oh, if that's all that's bothering you," the princess replied generously, "it's soon settled. "We'll just waive the entrance examinations' her father corrected her. "Don't you interfere with my pet-gram for Mr. Burney's future."

THE NEW O.S.D. SUPERINTENDENT

The appointment of H. B. Fetterly, M.A., inspector of schools in the County of Dundas, to the post of superintendent of the Ontario School for the Deaf, succeeding the late Dr C. B. Coughlin, who passed away some time ago, brings to the office an educationist who has had wide experience in the instruction of the young and in pedagogical work. Succeeding as he does the late Dr. Coughlin, a professional man of intense interest in and sympathy for the young, the new superintendent comes to a school which is one of the finest public institutions in the province. It is one on which the Department of Education especially during the regime of the present Minister of Education, Premier the Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, has spent much thought and public money to bring to a standard of efficiency in the training of the young handicapped by nature, so that the deaf of Ontario may have equal opportunities with those endowed with hearing.

The school was rebuilt not many years ago on modern lines under the superintendency of Dr. Coughlin and teaching methods are along the latest pedagogical lines.

The new official will find that in the interim which has elapsed since the death of the lamented Dr. Coughlin the school has been in the efficient charge of Prof. W. J. Campbell as acting principal or superintendent.

Mr. Fetterly comes highly recommended to the office as teacher and administrator.

MAY WEATHER

May weather has returned again after a downpour. Indeed the rain in the early part of this week was anything but like May rain for it did not come even with the warmth of an April shower.

All signs point to a fairly good crop, according to farmers. The moisture was needed and the cool weather which accompanied and followed the spells of rain was an additional advantage to growing crops.

MOSQUITO FLOWER GUARDS

Wild flower life in the vicinity of Belleville has a friend, the mosquito. Sunday armies of the pest attacked on all sides those who intruded into their domain in the woods and brush in search of a sight of flowers or with intent to rend the flowers from their turfy bed of leaf mould.

The "skito" is not good for much but he doubtless saved wild flower plants in the woods.

THROWING FORTUNES AWAY

A million dollars is bet on saving the American farmer, says Popular Science Monthly.

A corporation, capitalized at that amount was recently organized to put cornstalks, the chief agricultural product of the United States, to industrial uses. The new organization grows out of years of scientific research mainly conducted by Professor O. R. Sweeney of Iowa State College.

About 150,000,000 tons of cornstalks are raised by American farmers very year. Cornstalks are America's biggest crop except hay. These cornstalks, hoed, fertilized and weeded from insects, the farmer throws away. Only the fact that this has always been done keeps us people from laughing at the absurd spectacle of millions of farmers carefully raising cornstalks and doing nothing with them.

More is involved than the mere prosperity of the corn belt, for there can be little doubt that the real trouble with American agriculture, the chronic disease which is keeping the farmer poor, is the failure of the farming industry to keep up with scientific research. Other industries maintain research laboratories costing millions of dollars which study wastes. Neat fackers "save everything but the squeal." Even city garbage is made into lubricating grease, stock food, fertilizer, and combustible gas. But farmers still throw away every year billions of tons of material—by far the vastest industrial waste in the world.

But there are other great wastes besides corn. The chief of them is probably straw. Here again the same cellulose fiber is present. China and Japan have made paper from rice straw for generations. Other forms of waste are oat hulls, buckwheat hulls, pea vines, bean plants, dried pods, and so on.

All such strawlike materials can yield a rare sugar called xylose or "wood sugar." Hitherto a chemical curiosity but with properties, the Bureau of Standards says "which ought to make it a desirable material for use in food, textile and leather industries."

From straw of almost any kind can be obtained not only furfurol and xylose, but acetic acid like that present in vinegar, wood alcohol, oxalic acid used in cleaning stonewear and plumbing, tar, illuminating gas, woodlike materials, paper, and several kinds of wall board materials.

These are examples of how chemistry has aided well-organized agriculture. Others are possible. Asparagus canning, for instance, still has a large unused by-product of the lower ends of stalks. Grape skins are not so useful as their chemical content of acids, vegetable dyes and vitamins may some day make them. Present public interest in vitamins and mineral salts for human diets probably provides opportunity for utilizing wasted parts of spinach plants, onion tops, cull carrots, extra leaves from lettuce and cabbage, cull cucumbers, and other green-leaf by-products of the vegetable industry.

But these are organized industries. How can chemistry be applied to diffuse, absolutely unorganized agriculture?

Professor Sweeney and his associates have an answer. They foresee a network of small factories scattered over the corn belt states. To these factories farmers will bring their corn stalks, and will receive a cash price for the stalks in addition to the price of the corn.

SIDELIGHTS

OLD FRIENDS

O! sure am I when I come to die,
And through Death's portals go,
Those cats, and dogs, and little white mice,
And birds, I used to know,
Shall all come rushing to welcome me,
Their friend of the long ago.

And the cats will purr, "We've missed you, sir,
And we know you missed us, too."
And the dogs will bark, "Good morning, friend
We've waited long for you."
And the little white mice shall squeak with joy,
And the birds will chirp, and coo.

And happen what may, on the Judgment Day,
I shall not affrightened be,
If the cats and dogs and all weak dumb things
That on earth were dear to see,
Should receive from God the gift of speech,
For I know they'll plead for me.

EARL SANDE, greatest jockey since Tod Sloan, won the Kentucky Derby in masterly fashion last Saturday with Gallant Fox, a great horse which had the week before won another turf classic in the Preakness. Sande has had a wonderful career which bade fair to culminate when he was badly smashed up in an accident at Saratoga in 1924. For months he lay in hospital with smashed bones and it was thought he would never ride again, but that great heart in his small body which had carried him to victory many times before now helped him to beat back the spectres of broken bones and he came back to win new victories. Thousands who listened in on the radio Saturday and knew the circumstances of Sande's life were thrice thrilled when he brought that that great equine Gallant Fox thundering down the stretch ahead of the pack and unbeatable.

TALKING ABOUT DOGS, cabbages and kings and other things, there is a fine Boston terrier in a good home on the East Hill. Recently this B.T., in a spirit of adventure wandered away from home and for days was absent. Mourned as lost the family as last did what they should have done at first, advertised in the Ontario Intelligencer. The paper was printed about four o'clock and while the family sat at dinner that night their pet was brought back. While that surprised the advertiser it did not surprise the Great Family Journal for similar occurrences are reported every day. Be wise, specialize and advertise, if you want to realize.

I AM A MOULDER OF FORTUNES

I HAVE brought many obscure men and things into the light of prominence.

I AM one of the best investments than can be made.

I HAVE returned dividends of one hundred percent and more, and yet millions of dollars are wasted upon me.

I AM the technical school teaching for the rank and file, for millionaires and laborers alike.

I HAVE assisted millions of housewives to distinguish between that which is good and that which is shoddy.

I AM the clarion voice of the mercantile world, used in announcing pure foodstuffs, the latest styles, hygienic wearing apparel, and amusement and labor-saving devices, that help make a weary world happy.

I HAVE brought fame to many of the world's greatest operatic stars.

I AM printed in nearly every language in the world.

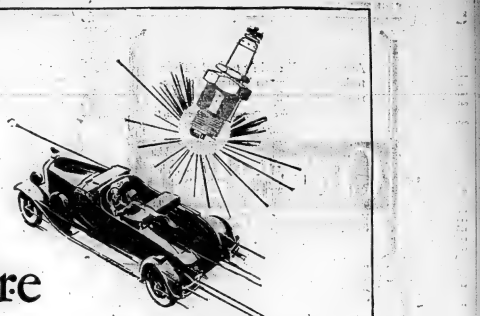
I HAVE elected obscure men to public office and am used by governments, states, provinces, cities and towns in spreading broadcast words of advice to farmer and city dweller and in dividing the earth's beauty spots.

I AM the brain child of the world's brainiest men.

I HAVE been successfully used to fill churches in large cities, after all other methods have failed.

I AM quite often thought of as a worker of miracles, yet I have never worked one.

I HAVE been heard in the remote corners of the frozen north and the burning wastes of the desert lands.



I AM the greatest influence in the world today; have been used by many, abused by a few, yet my powers are not yet fully appreciated.

I HAVE helped stay the dragon of fear and distrust that lived in the minds of millions of men and women, of buying many a new article by explaining what it was, how and under what circumstances it is made and why it would be to their advantage to buy it

LOVES INSTRUMENTS

by

John Francis

Copyright, 1930, International Newsreel Service, Inc.

Ethel White, student nurse at General Hospital, was madly in love with Dr. Elliott Phillips, the handsome young surgeon whose skill already had won him a big name although he was only twenty-nine.

This was no mere "crush" that Ethel was experiencing. It was love, Dr. Phillips had but to enter the room and make Ethel's heart beat faster. Whenever she assisted him in the Operating room, her hand trembled as he reached for instruments which she held for him. If his arm happened to touch Ethel's as they read a patient's chart together, her whole body quivered, as though a sharp but pleasantly electric shock had been sent through it.

Because they never had exchanged more than four or five words at a time, outside of the line of duty, Ethel had no way of knowing how Dr. Phillips felt toward her. She knew, of course, that he considered her a competent nurse. He had shown that several times by requesting that she be assigned to his cases. The suspicion that Dr. Phillips might have had personal as well as professional reasons for doing that never crossed Ethel's mind.

Nearly all of the girls in Ethel's class knew how she felt toward the young surgeon. But they called it a "crush" and kidded her about it.

"You'll get over it," consoled Margie Patterson. "Every nurse in the hospital, from the youngest probationer, to 'Becky' has had a crush on Phillips at some time."

"Becky" was the student nurses' irreverent but affectionate name for Miss Elizabeth Keen, the assistant superintendent.

Ethel did not answer Margie, but she knew she never would get over it. She loved blindly too much.

Ethel was at the theatre with several of the other girls one night when Margie, who had been leaning on the balcony railing and watching the audience in the orchestra, turned and said:

"Our Elliott is here, Ethel. There he is right down there, and you've got some hot competition. . Look at the girl with him. Isn't she gorgeous?"

Ethel looked, first at Dr. Phillips, who was handsomer than ever in a dinner jacket, then at the girl, who Margie had been right; the girl was gorgeous. And what clothes. Her ermine wrap was set off by a head of gleaming black hair and a gown of transparent black velvet contrasted strikingly with her flawless white skin.

Ethel cried that night before she went to sleep. She knew it was silly, but she couldn't help herself. She felt she hadn't a chance to win the love of the young surgeon she adored he must be in love with the glorious creature who was with him at the theatre. She was sure he was.

While making an entry on a patient's chart the next morning Ethel heard Dr. Phillip's voice at her ear: "Good morning, Miss White. Did you like the play last night?"

Ethel was flustered. How had he known she was at the theatre? Recovering her composure quickly, however, she replied:

"Yes, I liked it a lot. And you?"

"I thought it was awfully amusing," the doctor said. "I saw you as we left the theatre, but didn't get a chance to speak, as you were ahead of us."

Dr. Phillip's last sentence thrilled Ethel more than anything he ever had said. The mere fact that he had wanted to speak to her surprised her no less than it delighted her. She was all the more pleased when she learned he had said nothing to the other girls about seeing them at the theatre.

"Do you like the theatre, Miss White?" the doctor asked.

"I'm crazy about it."

There was not more time for personal conversation then, but three days later, just as he was entering the hospital, Dr. Phillips and Ethel met in the corridor.

"Good morning, Dr. Phillips," said Ethel.

"Hello, Miss White," the doctor replied cordially.

Ethel had meant to pass on, but the handsome young surgeon stopped her with: "Is a hurry?"

"Why, no. Is there something you want, doctor?"

"Yes, Miss White, there is something I want very much. I'd like you as a theatre companion tomorrow night. Are you going to be busy?"

"Not at all," said Ethel. "I'd love to go."

"Good." Dr. Phillips seemed pleased. "You are off at seven, aren't you? I'll call for you at eight."

When Nurse Ethel White entered the reception room of the Nurses' Home, to meet Dr. Elliott Phillips the following night, Elliott had to look twice to reassure himself that this gorgeous girl was the same Ethel White, with whom he always had associated prim, white uniforms.

In her long evening gown of white moire which matched her skin perfectly, and a wrap of old rose velvet, with a marabou collar and cuffs, Ethel looked like a lady who had just stepped from a portrait.

"Why—you're ravishing," was all he could say as he advanced toward her.

Ethel's voice was a little more than a whisper.

Elliott could not have been more proud of his companion that night if she had been visiting royalty. As they got into a cabe after the play he asked: "How would you like to go visiting?"

"All right," Ethel agreed. "Anything you say."

"I want you to meet Jean," the doctor explained, "and she wants to meet you."

"Jean?" said Ethel questioningly.

"My brother's wife," Elliott replied. "She was with me at the theatre the other night. I've told her all about you, and she got just a glimpse of you when you were with that other girl. Now she wants to see more of you."

"You've told her all about me?" Ethel was puzzled. But why . . ."

Elliott took Ethel's hands in his as he interrupted her:

"Why? Don't you know why? Don't you know I love you, Ethel? I was afraid I had made it so obvious that everyone in the hospital knew it. Haven't you seen it for months?"

Ethel was too happy to speak. She could do no more than just look at the doctor. He was not quite sure of the meaning of her silence, and hurriedly asked:

"Do you think you ever could learn to love me, Ethel?"

Ethel reached up and took Elliott's face in both her hands. Then she asked:

"Elliott, darling, they say love is blind, and I guess it must be, for I've been so blind myself you that I never saw your love for me, and you never realized how much I've been loving you."

"This is just the beginning of our love," said Elliott after kissing her, "but, thank heaven, our eyes are open at last."

Moslems in India Make Claim For The Arabs In Palestine

Bombay, India, May 22 (CP)—Nationalist volunteers attempted a raid on Wadala salt depot and were partly successful. Following their new tactics of splitting their forces, volunteers divided into two batches of fifty each and were arrested. Another party then came and split up, and while eighteen more were arrested the remainder succeeded in capturing some of the salt.

Police and troops today took complete control of the Dharsaana area, the scene of attempted raids yesterday, Nationalist headquarters announced they would make another mass raid there Sunday.

It was reported from Peshawar that British bombing planes had inflicted severe casualties in the forces of the Hadi of Turangzai, which have remained in a threatening position near the northwest frontier point for some time.

A run on the Bank of India which started yesterday on rumors that the manager had participated in a police raid on Congress headquarters, continued today with much less vigor. Despite denial by the board of directors depositors surrounded the bank and clambered for their money.

John Hubbs, Brig.-Gen. Hepburn And F. Newman Are Mentioned

(By Staff Reporter)

Picton, May 22 (Special)—The first shot was fired in the Federal election campaign here this afternoon when five hundred people from every section of Prince Edward-Lennox jammed every available inch of space in the parish hall to choose a candidate to represent the Conservative party in this riding. Seats were at a premium long before the convention was scheduled to begin and enthusiasm ran high. Many expected that a warm debate would ensue as three names have been prominently mentioned as standard bearers for Prince Edward-Lennox. Brig.-General Bernard Hepburn, a military figure who has always been more or less active in the political arena, John Hubbs, the sitting member for the County and Fred Newman, ex-Mayor of Picton. The last named is at present on the high seas enroute to the British Isles for the International Boards of Trade Conference which will be held in London.

Rank sub division had its full quota of representatives on hand and restrain of excitement indicated that something interesting might develop. Coats were thrust aside and fans provided for the audience who were packed in every corner.

CAR CUTS SWATH TAKES 2 WHEELS OFF ON HIGHWAY

Traffic Police Scout Scene of Wreck But Delinquent Makes Escape

OCCUPAANTS UNINJURED

Trent Highway Scene of Smash Caused by Cutting In

Near-tragedy was narrowly averted at nine-thirty last night when a large car cut in between two other automobiles on the Trent highway, taking a wheel off each of the two vehicles, failing to stop and see what damage had been done.

George Greanell of Toronto, was driving east on the highway and Bruce Richardson was driving in a westerly direction. Suddenly a car, the identity of the driver unknown to date, cut in between these two vehicles. Greanell's machine suffered the loss of a rear wheel while the vehicle driven by Richardson lost a front wheel. No serious injuries were received by either party, although Greanell suffered some bruises and was cut about the wrists.

Highway Traffic Officer W. O. Frink rushed to the scene of the smash but did not see any sign of the car that caused the crash. Warnings were given to police both east and west to be on the lookout for a large car, but with only such meagre description it is doubtful if the driver of the potential death, car will ever be apprehended.

As an aftermath of the crash, Alfred Mills, of Toronto, a passenger in the Greanell car, was hailed into the Trenton police court this morning and was fined $15.00 and costs by Magistrate O'Rourke on a charge of intoxication.

Redfern Dies While Under Arrest, Believed to Have Taken Poison

In Letter to Wife Denied Causing Death of Girl—Said She Found Bottle of Poison in His Pocket and Swallowed the Drug.

London, May 22 (CP)— The mysterious death of Rita Gardner 22 year old Baden, Ont., office clerk, found dead as a result of strychnine poisoning in a Montreal hotel on May 13th, will probably not be solved. The death this morning of George Redfern, 42 year old Kitchener salesman, less than two hours after his arrest in the Grigg House, a local hotel, practically dispelled the hopes the police entertained that Redfern's appreciation would throw some light on the case.

London, Ont., May 22—Belief that Redfern committed suicide was expressed by Coroner Dr. J. Cameron Wilson who was called to the police station after the prisoner's collapse and death. Dr. Wilson who ordered an immediate postmortem, expressed the opinion he died through use of either strychnine or prussic acid. Redfern is believed to have taken poison shortly after his arrest.

All symptoms point to death from poisoning, he declared. Redfern when arrested was immediately searched but no poison was found in his clothing, police say.

London, Ont. May 23—George Redfern, of Kitchener, Ont., who was arrested here today for questioning in connection with poisoning in Montreal a week ago, of Rita Gardner, collapsed and died in the police station.

George H. Redfern, Kitchener, wanted by the police in connection with the poisoning in Montreal of Rita Gardner, of Baden, Ont., was arrested in a local hotel early today.

"I had nothing to do with Miss Gardner's death" Redfern was quoted by detectives as having stated when arrested. He collapsed soon after.

His first request was for a lawyer and Fergus Murphy talked with him but was unable to recure any coherent instructions from him. The police detained a Toronto taxi driver who is said to have driven the prisoner from there last night. Redfern had but seven cents when taken into custody. It was throught inability to pay for meals and ninety dollars for taxi fare that led to his arrest.

The police say the prisoner spent the last night travelling through back yards in an attempt to reach his family and to get in touch with friends. Fear of arrest evidently restrained him from making an open visit, police say.

Redfern who was identified by a ring he wore, and which was described in newspaper despatches yesterday readily admitted identity but stoutly denied any connection with the alleged poisoning of Miss. Gardner.

Montreal officers were on their way here from Kitchener to take charge of him, when he died.

Kitchener, Ont. May 22—In a letter written at Niagara Falls, N.Y., by Ceil Redfern, to his wife in Kitchener, a few days ago, Redfern told the story of the death of Miss Gardner in Montreal. According to Detective Physky, Montreal, the letter said Redfern was sorry for all the trouble he had caused, but also mentioned he had gone to church Sunday morning, the day the letter was written, and taken communion and he was ready for the end. He said he saw by the papers he was blamed for the death of Miss Gardner but he declared he had nothing to do with that. She had found a bottle of strychnine in his pocket and swallowed it. When she dropped, the letter said, he picked her up and placed her on the bed in a dying condition. Police theory is that when at a Montreal hotel Redfern revealed hi was married and disagreement ensued.

With Miss Gardner, Redfern registered at a Montreal hotel a week ago Saturday registering his name as A. C. Rowland, Toronto. They were assigned to separate rooms, but took their meals in the man's room. Monday after Redfern had told the hotel clerk not to disturb the woman, whom he said was sick, she was found dead on a bed fully clothed. Redfern disappeared. The identity of the girl was unknown until the father came from Kitchener and identified the body. The autopsy showed the girl had died from strychnine poisoning. The inquest was adjourned until Redfern could be located.

CANADIAN AND U. S. FARMERS PLANT MORE WHEAT DESPITE ADVICE OF POOL, FARM BOARD

Late Spring May Help to Curb Excessive Wheat Acreage

By T. W. BANTON
(Special to The Ontario Intelligencer
Copyright 1930)

TORONTO—In the course of the cosmic cycle through which our good old earth is now passing, it is possible, at least it has been suggested, that we are again approaching a new ice age.

The vagaries of this present spring weather might incline one to believe that there may be something in the suggestion, remote as the possibility of actual fulfilment may be.

These cold shivering days, with their blustering high winds, snow and hail storms, and ice in the morning's wash bowl, are calculated to prepare one to believe anything in the way of weather predictions.

Not so long ago, there were promises of an early spring." And the farmer in both the eastern and western provinces of this far flung Dominion, readily believing in the promise, set to work, to prepare for the spring planting of his fields, already in part slushing but deceptive warm and sunny days.

Since that time, within the memory of many still living, we have experienced nothing but cold and wintry weather, setting back the field operations of the farmer, and upsetting all his calculations of all early planting, and corresponding early harvesting.

An Ill Wind

"It is an ill wind that blows no good," however, and even this second edition of Hiffler may have its use.

For one thing it may help to retard the too early planting of the crop for the coming season. It may in fact, become an ally of the U.S. Federal Farm Board, and of the officials, some of them at least, of the Canadian Wheat Pool, in their united efforts to induce the farmers in both countries to reduce somewhat the acreage to be planted for wheat.

It must be said, however, that those efforts so far do not appear to have been overly successful.

The Canadian Pacific Railway report issued this week, on the acreage in the west already prepared for this season planting, says:

"Increase in prepared acreage amounting to 31.1 p.c. over that of last year is reported on subdivision of the C.P.R. in the three prairie provinces. These reports are from 95 p.c. of the farming communities of the railway in western Canada. The moisture situation is on the whole better than in 1929 due to the heavier snowfall, some of which was received while the ground was unfrozen. The reserve, however, is still somewhat low because of the comparatively light precipitation since 1928. Although the early seeding operations have been delayed, recent rains and snowfalls in Alberta and Saskatchewan have been welcomed on this account. Apart from the dry areas in Southern Saskatchewan, and part central Alberta last year where farmers have had difficulty in financing the purchase of seed grain, there is available a general supply of good seed. Some winter killed wheat is reported in Alberta but rye came through without detriment in all the three provinces."

An Increase

This early report seems to indicate that, instead of a reduced acreage, there may be an increase for this coming season.

The Federal Farm Board appears to be meeting with no better success in its campaign for reduced acreage south of the national border line.

In one of its "Wheat Studies" recently published by the "Food Research Institute," Stanford University, California, it is pointed out the Federal Farm Board in pressing its program for restriction of wheat acreage possesses certain weapons of coercion, and the weapon of persuasion through cooperative action by which group interests may be made to supersede individual interest in some degree, as yet undetermined.

"Whatever the effectiveness of these weapons, the success of the program must depend in large part upon the direction and force of traditional and announced incentives of individual wheat growers.

After dealing with this traditional and individual phase of the question, the study concludes: "All told then, the outlook seems not to be for notable and immediate reduction in the United States wheat acreage.

FULL AMOUNT OF CLAIM AWARDED

Mother and Son Awarded $962.00 and Interest in Supreme Court Action

William H. Iley and his mother Harriet Iley were given the full amount of their claim $962.00 and interest from the time the writ was issued against them, all the taxes paid insurance and costs on the Supreme Court scale by Justice Raney in non-jury sittings yesterday afternoon against Mr. S. Kennedy of Trenton, Ontario. His Lordship in summing up the case stated that the defendant did not take proper means to secure the money owed him.

The father or William H. Iley purchased from Mr. Kennedy a home in Trenton and before the house was paid for Mr. Iley died leaving the boy and widow. The younger Iley is an employee of the Hydro Electric Power Commission and when the trouble arose he was working in Stella Falls. Kennedy went away to visit in the south and by the agreement Mrs. Iley was to pay so much per month on the remaining debt on the home. Mrs. Iley alleges that Kennedy told her that she would not have to pay anything while he was away and in consequence she did not pay. When Kennedy came back however he forclosed the agreement and would not pay back to Mrs. Iley the amount that had already been paid on the home and thence the action arose. Mr. E. J. Butler, K.C., appeared for the plaintiff Iley and Charles A. Payne for the defendant Kennedy.

MOUNT PLEASANT MISSION BAND MET RECENTLY

Miss Edna Sharp is Seriously Ill in Home at Rawdon

Rev. Mr. Green of Ses Crave took charge of the services on Rawdon circuit Sunday and in the afternoon his subject was "The Prodigal Son." The choir at Mount Pleasant rendered an anthem, "When You Know Jesus Pray" and Miss Edna Thrasher sang a pleasing solo, "Beautiful Life of Somewhere."

The many friends of Messrs. Emery and Ackers were very sorry to hear of their serious loss by fire early Monday morning. It seems even worse for Mr. Emery as he was completely burned out only a few months ago and since he has purchased new machines with which to carry on his occupation of mending boots and shoes. Now he finds that again his stock and machinery has been ruined in the fire.

We are very sorry to report Miss Edna Sharp, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Claude Sharp very seriously ill at the time of writing. Miss took sick on Wednesday, May 13th, and has gradually grown worse. Two doctors are in attendance.

Mount Pleasant Mission Band met at the church on Saturday afternoon with a good attendance. The president opened the meeting with hymn "Jesus Bids Us Shine." The Scripture Lesson found in Matthew 5:13-16 was read by Eileen MacMullen. Sentence prayers were offered by Edna Thrasher, Myrtle McKeown, Frances McKeown, Helen Smith and Mrs. Will Potts. The minutes were approved and roll called by Secretary Eileen Phillips, after the treasurer's report the leader took charge of business period. Duet by Winnie Sharp and Marguerite White with motions. Mrs. Will Potts told a worship story. Collection was taken by Maris Sharp and Anna Sharp. Frances McKeown read the Watch Tower dealing with:

CANADA — Telling of the 70,000 Finns who nearly all live in Ontario, most of whom are miners.

INDIA—How little Mani, who was blind appreciated a gift of a Bible in raised letters for the blind.

KOREA—A little five year old Korean lad was the means of his parents and his grandmother becoming Christians.

TEMPERANCE — General Chang Yin-Wu, Manchu of a large city in China has passed a law that none of his officials may smoke cigarettes. The Major neither smokes nor drinks. China's greatest enemy is drink—and the shame is that these intoxicants are being imported from Christian nations.

AFRICA — One of our missionaries to Africa told the chief of a village that if a school house were built he would teach the children. The Chief agreed to do this and every morning the workmen were given a lecture on the sin of eating each other and then they began their day's work under the directing of their Missionary.

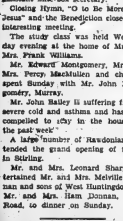
Hymn, "I Am So Glad That Our Father in Heaven"

Miss Helen Smith told a story about Finland.

Winnie Sharp was appointed as an assistant mite-box secretary.

Closing Hymn, "O to Be More Like Jesus" and the Benediction closed this interesting meeting.

The study class was held Wednesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Williams.



Mr. Edward Montgomery, Mr. and Mrs. Percy MacMullen and children spent Sunday with Mr. John Montgomery, Murray.

Mr. John Bailey is suffering from a severe cold and asthma and has been compelled to stay in the house for the past week.

A large number of Rawdonians attended the grand opening of talkies in Stirling.

Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Sharp entertained Mr. and Mrs. Melville Donnan and sons of West Huntingdon and Mr. and Mrs. Ham Donnan, Ridge Road, to dinner on Sunday.

Why suffer needlessly? Dingtal Egyptian Liniment brings quick, sure relief to scald feet, soft corns and warts. Relieves inflammation. Removes proud flesh.

HE CAME HOME TO DIE, BUT DIDN'T

His uncle, a physician, prescribed Kellogg's ALL-BRAN

"I didn't go west to France, but came home to Canada instead. On doctor's orders, the doctor declared, I weighed exactly 110 pounds. Ready for a 'sit-down.' Look at me now! 182, and as hard as nails!"

The speaker (name if requested) was a young Canadian who served overseas with the Royal Flying Corps, and returned in 1918 a mere shadow of a man. His uncle, a prominent doctor, suggested Kellogg's ALL-BRAN. After one month's trial, he felt better. He persevered, and in three months was back at his position, healthy and happy.

The best part of the story is: his health has lasted as only health gained in a natural manner can last. He is still holding his strenuous position as editor of a successful publication.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN will relieve constipation and the chain of ills that arise from it, permanently and naturally, if eaten regularly. Eat at least two tablespoonfuls daily—in chronic cases at every meal. ALL-BRAN can conquer constipation.

Made in London, Canada. For sale at all dealers.

LARGEST CHERRY ORCHARD IS IN PRINCE EDWARD

Boasts Biggest Orchard in the Entire Dominion of Canada

Picton, May 21 (By Mail)—A number of men are employed at the Pennetry Station at the Sandbanks, setting out small trees in the nursery there. Sand is also being drawn from the banks to the nursery where the earth is limestone gravel. The sand makes it easier to work. Requests for trees are fewer than usual this year, Mr. Oscar Clark, the manager, reports. Seedlings are sent from this nursery to many parts of the province. The nursery is well worth a visit.

County orchards were blossoming very rapidly until the cooler weather set in. The many apple, cherry and plum orchards are now in bloom and will be at their best following a few days of warm sunshine. The cherry orchards are now in full bloom and are wonderful sights.

It is not generally known that in Prince Edward County there is situated the largest cherry orchard in Canada. This is owned by Mr. Howard Leavens and is situated a couple of miles west of Bloomfield. It is composed of some ninety acres. At this time of year it is a wonderful sight. Mr. Leavens also has fifty acres of other orchards.

Orchardists are busy putting on the first, or pink, spray. Spraying is essential to secure a good crop, asserts Orchard Supervisor, Mr. Leslie Smith. Some large orchards that are substantial sights these days may be seen in the Waupoos, Redneraville, East Lake districts. Prince Edward County in springtime is well worth seeing.

This county expects a record number of tourists this year. The attractions of the county are set forth in thousands of booklets which are being distributed. This county will distribute booklets at the Shriners' Convention and hopes to get many delegates to visit here. A great many U.S. tour. ists own summer cottages at different county resorts and come here annually.

TWO MILLION TOURISTS THROUGH BELLEVILLE IN YEAR

Reversal of old Time Condition When Madoc Rd. Was Chief Highway

There are many outstanding events to take place in Ontario this summer that will probably be instrumental in attracting a heavy tourist traffic through Belleville.

Construction of the lower bridge is certain to affect business on Front Street during the coming season. While there is a certain inconvenience in having Bridge Street closed, this is counteracted in some measure from a business viewpoint by the fact that all tourist traffic is diverted directly through the business district, according to many merchants.

Old Home Week is going to mean additional retail business to the merchants, the new airport on the Trenton Highway will prove a source of attraction. The Shriners' Convention at Toronto, the British Empire Games at Hamilton and the Canadian National Exhibition at Toronto will also play a part in bringing transient trade to the merchants of this city.

It was learned from Mr. J. O. Herity, yesterday that approximately seven million tourists from across the border visited Ontario last year. Of this number Mr. Herity estimated that nearly two millions passed through the city of Belleville. Mr. Herity also stated that there are five times the number of cars coming to the city via the eastern and western highways than along the Madoc highway.

Fifteen years ago the people entering the city from the north and south outnumbered the eastern and western visitors five to one. Mr. Herity explained this astonishing reversal of traffic conditions by referring to the innovation of the motor car and Ontario's proximity to the more thickly populated parts of the United States, the United States tourists travelling chiefly in an easterly or westerly direction.

Chrysler Speed is Smooth Speed

YOU MAY NEVER once drive your Chrysler at its greatest speed.

Whether you do or do not, the power that gives Chrysler cars their speed ability of 60, 70, 75 and even 80 miles an hour, automatically makes a Chrysler the most fascinating car to drive at the ordinary touring speeds.

The power that makes Chrysler's swiftness possible also makes Chrysler pick-up so marvelous—a snap and alertness you have never known in any other automobile. It is this tremendous reserve of power, too, that enables you to maintain your normal driving speed hour after hour without effort to the car or fatigue to you.

Because of the high speed capacity of Chrysler cars, you thrill to the suppleness with which you can whisk your way through traffic; you welcome hills—the steeper the better—for the joy of climbing them.

One drive in a Chrysler tells you why Chrysler owners are the most enthusiastic motorists under the sun.

The Feminine Viewpoint

Fashionably Speaking

By Lucille

DEAR READERS:

We are now well into the season of brides and wedding gifts, confetti, showers, and receptions and I know that whether you are to be the bride or the guest, you will be interested in knowing a little bit about the above important subjects.

Now then dear reader, this matter of wedding gifts which often gives us much trouble is really very simple. Unless the bride is a relative or an especially dear friend, the gift should not be highly expensive. Some people are under the impression that they must spend a large sum of money on a wedding gift regardless of whom they are buying it for. This is quite wrong and for the ordinary friend or acquaintance it is sufficient to spend a sum not exceeding $5.00 for the purpose. Of course if you wish to spend more and have no compunction about it, why well and good, go ahead. But remember, if your funds are limited and you are puzzled on just what amount you should spend, it is perfectly correct, if you do not go above the stated amount.

In the matter of showers, dear readers, as I said some time ago in this column, the first requisite is that they shall be perfectly planned beforehand so that the guests are kept entertained from the moment they come until they leave. There are many forms of showers and the most popular of course are those termed "miscellaneous," because they supply the bride with many odd objects both decorative and useful in her new home. The kitchen shower is another that should rank highly in favoritism. I do not know of anything which will afford the bride more pleasure and delight than beautiful kitchen utensils. And ten to one she has not bought one single thing for her kitchen before her marriage. It will therefore save her much expense and supply her with a very complete assortment of useful objects. Then, of course, there is the linen shower. If the bride has had a very short engagement and has not had time to supply herself with beautiful linens, she will bless you for your inspiration. It has been said that a bride cannot have too many linens, and I truly believe it is so, for just think what a long time she will have in which to wear them out. A crystal shower is delightful and lucky the bride who receives the beautiful glass ware. A handkerchief shower will be most acceptable as can be daintily arranged. The bride should be presented with an old-fashioned bouquet made up of lovely handkerchiefs in every shade. Attached to the bouquet by long white ribbons should be fastened the cards bearing the names of the givers and it is always charming to accompany your gift with a little verse which the bride should be requested to read aloud.

Each of these showers can be preceded by a bridge party and followed by a dainty luncheon.

Fashionably yours,
LUCILLE.

Today's Poem

When Punctual Dawn

When punctual dawn came o'er the hill,
In orange veiled and tender blue,
Wan in the dark field gleamed the rill,
The dusky hedge was gemmed with dew.

And patient sheep from folded fest
Rose one by one, alert for food,
And one by one, so small and sweet,
The flattened grass-stems stirred and stood.

And I too rose, and stepping down
Drank deep the invigorating air,
And scanned the little sleeping town,
And thanked my God that I was there.

—Arthur Christopher Benson. Poems.

AMATEUR PLAY WAS A SUCCESS

"So This is London" Scored Decided Success at Collegiate

"So This Is London," a play presented by the Y's Men's Club of this city at the Collegiate Auditorium on Tuesday night, scored a decided success. The production was under the direction of Miss Jessie B. Tuite, and she was ably assisted by Mr. Ross Hunter as director. During the intermissions the Y's Men's Glee Club and Mr. Jack Silver, baritone, rendered pleasing numbers.

The stage setting and furniture were supplied through the courtesy of Mr. R. J. Wray of this city, and Mr. Graham of the Graham Stock Company, Trenton. Mr. Joe Shortt, Secretary of the local Y.M.C.A., acted as chairman and the Quinte Trio, led by Mr. Ross Hunter delighted the large audience with several fine selections before the curtain went up. The whole play reflected the careful training of Miss Jessie B. Tuite, noted elocutionist of this city, and to her and her able assistants should go the credit of it's success.

The plot centred around two families, The Drapers, dyed-in-the-wool Americans with a very active dislike for England and all things English, and the Beauchamps, an old English family with a very active dislike of Americans and all things Yankee. The Drapers visit London and while on board the ship their son Junior meets Miss Eleanor Beauchamp, daughter of Sir Percy and Lady Beauchamp of England, who is returning home from a trip to America. Of course the two fall violently in love and their efforts to pacify their parents and reconciliate them to their marriage result in much hilarious comedy. Mr. Mat Morrison and Mr. Jimmie Grimmons the heads of the two families turned in a remarkably fine performance and their portrayals of English and American characters were most amusing. Miss Vera Brown as Eleanor Beauchamp, Miss Lazetta Curry as Mrs. Draper, and Miss Ann Ashley as Lady Beauchamp were also outstanding in their respective roles.

Advice to Lovelorn

By Beatrice Fairfax

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My mother is dead and my father is no good. I live with an aunt who is quite prosperous, she manages a big apartment house and everyone seems to regard her highly. I'm seventeen and have graduated from high school and, oh Miss Fairfax, I'd give ten years of my life to go to college. So many girls in my class have gone and they stood just as well in school than I did. My aunt won't hear of my going, or give me a cent to go, though I've offered if she will lend me the money to pay her back when I'm self-supporting.

She says it's a girl's business to get herself married first, and she wants me to marry a man who lives in the apartment house. He is very rich and is about fifty years old. He dyes his moustache and I hate him. But my aunt tells me I'm a little fool and I must marry this old man who has been married twice before—one wife dead and the other divorced. What would you suggest under the circumstances? I'm determined not to marry this man.

MARGARET.

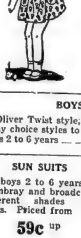
You are quite right to decide not to marry the gentleman with the dyed moustache. Tell him how you feel about it, and if he has any consideration or manly traits he will not try to force you into such a marriage. A high school graduate shouldn't find it impossible to get employment. Aren't you on friendly terms with the mothers of some of your school friends who not talk to them about the situation, surely any woman with a daughter of her own would be willing to help a girl in your plight. If you are associated with a church, ask advice and assistance there. Write me again, keep up your courage and don't think of marrying anyone repulsive to you.

Loves a Marine

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 20, and engaged to a young man with whom I am very much in love. He is a marine, I see him very little, but have trusted him. Now people tell me that no marine is faithful to a girl. Is this true and must I give Dick up?

CONSTANT SWEETHEART.



Interfering gossip causes many unnecessary heartaches, my dear child. If some definite accusation should be brought against your Dick, that would be a different matter. But a vague charge based solely on the ground that he is a marine is meaningless and need have no weight with you or anyone. If you have no other reason to mistrust him, do not allow yourself to be troubled. I have much sympathy for lovers who are separated as much as you two are, and I hope sincerely that you can make up for it by an early marriage with little expense afterward and therefore little cause for these unhappy suspicions.

SOFTBALL LOOP TO FUNCTION IN EASTERN AREA

Four Teams Will Affiliate With Women's Association

With delegates present from Ottawa, Kingston, Brockville and Belleville, a largely attended annual meeting was held of the Eastern Ontario Ladies' Softball Association, in the Kingston Y.M.C.A.

Miss Ethel MacDougall, of Kingston, President of the Association, presided.

Featuring the meeting was the decision to affiliate with the Ontario Women's Softball Association, so the winner of the Eastern Ontario League title may be eligible to advance in the Ontario championship play-off in the Intermediate Series. However, the decision was that they would affiliate under the same agreement as the Montreal Ontario Association, namely that the Ontario Softball Association will not interfere with the affairs of the Eastern group, other than to play off for honors in the jurisdiction of the Eastern group.

An invitation of the Brockville delegation to hold the next annual meeting in Brockville, was accepted, and arranged to be the first Saturday in May, 1931.

Brockville and Ottawa, Kingston City and the Bay of Quinte League, Belleville and Trenton and four teams from Belleville, will likely be drawn in the play-offs.

Election of Officers resulted as follows:

Hon. President—Coy. T. A. Kidd, M. P.

President—Miss Ethel McCullough, Kingston.

First Vice Pres.—Miss N. E. Seddon, Ottawa.

Second Vice Pres.—Miss B. Simon, Belleville.

Sec. Treas.—Mrs. S. A. Salsbury, Kingston.

District Convenors—Belleville, Mrs. W. Orrow; Brockville, Miss M. E. Hewett; Ottawa, Bert Lishman.

Advisory Board—B. Simon, Brockville; H. Waite, Kingston, A. G. Meagher, Belleville.
